Complaints are arriving weekly from the boys overseas in regard to not receiving their mail, particularly parcels. It is very discouraging indeed for the parents and friends who are sending parcels to hear these complaints. Probably the following information will help many and give them two particular reasons why parcels never get to the party they are addressed to. This information comes from one who has had experience in a large postal section in London, England, where hundreds of parcels come in yearly, and several of these are sent to the Red Cross for the reason stated below. A great number are sending parcels over wrapped in cotton, a very good idea indeed, but they insist on putting the address on the cotton with pen and ink, which should also be written on a tag and four corners sewed; at least two should be put on. When a parcel arrives in England after passing through several hands, unless a tag is on the parcel, the address is blurred to such an extent that it is impossible to make it out, consequently the parcel is opened and nothing found to direct them where to send it or where it is from. Always put a card inside stating where it is from and where it is going to. A great number also neglect putting on the Soldier's number, which is one of the most important things in sending parcels. The above information if heeded will help the military authorities to give the boys better service.

The Glen Ball Team again defeated the crack team of Acton, this time on their own grounds by the score of 6-3. The only thing that saved them from a worse defeat was the rain which came in the seventh innings and stopped the game. This makes three straight wins from Acton.

Stewarttown

Miss Cartwright and the pupils of Stewarttown Public School gave a very enjoyable picnic in Mr. Harry Lawson's grove at the end of the school term. A game of base ball was played by the married ladies present; it was not as scientific as some games but furnished lots of amusement. At the close of the program of games, etc., a very sumptuous lunch was enjoyed by all present.

The Monthly Meeting of the Esquesing Women's Institute will be held at the home of Mrs. Harry Lawson, Stewarttown, Friday afternoon, July 13, at 2.30. All are welcome.

MRS BROWN'S "CHANGE AND REST"

(By Mrs Nellie L. McClung, Calgary)

On March 17th 1915, there passed away Jane, beloved wife of John Brown, aged 31 years. She leaves a husband and seven small children to mourn her loss.

"Thy will be done!"

"I don't know what I'll do," he said—And a big tear splashed on his sunburnt hand—

"Here's Spring upon us, my wife is dead,
And look at the Summer's work I've planned!
I've bought more land, there are men to feed,
And hired girls are a careless breed,
They smash your dishes and waste your stuff,
And never think they're gettin' enough,
And they always boil the tea!
It wasn't like my Jane to quit,
She's alwaye been so full of grit,
At least without sayin' a word to me"
"Then she wasn't ailing?" the Minister said,
He had come when Mrs Brown was dead,
To try and comfort the poor bereft.
"O! She grumbled some as women will,
But she never cost me a Doctor's bill;
Ain't this an awful way to be left?"
She was a dandy, was my Jane,
Strong as a horse and never complain,
I'll never get her like again.
Often when I had gone to bed
She'd stay up to thump out loaves of bread.
And when I got up, her work of the night
Was there, a bunch of them, brown and light,
I tell you it was a splendid sight!"
"I suppose you often told her so,"
The minister said.—"Well I dont know,
I never was one to make a show;
But tho' I never said so straight
I guess she knew I liked her gait."
"I suppose she had help?" the minister said,
As he looked at the work-worn hands of the dead,
"The house is large and the children small,
One pair of hands could not do it all."
"We tried a girl for two or three days,
But I could't stand her dirty ways,
Jane was patient, and thought she'd learn
But she broke far more than she could earn,
Of course we always had Miss Frame
Out here for a week when the children came,
And I tell you I hated to pay, for a week
A dollar a day to that old freak
The house was in one continual row,
O! I know well what I'm in for now."
"I suppose you always told your wife
That she was the joy and pride of your life,
That home wasn't home without her face,
And how much you missed her from her place?"
"Well, maybe I didn't say so straight,
But I said things was in an awful state
And I was tired of cold boiled tea,
And Miss Frame couldn't quit too soon for me.
I told her mother was never in bed,
Two days in her life, till she lay there dead—
I've often and often heard that told—
She died when I was two days old."
A splendid helpmate to you was given.
You have children too? "Yes, six or seven,
The youngest of them has not been strong,
We never knew just what was wrong.
See here are the kids;" and in two short rows,
Six children sat in their Sunday c'othes.
Kind faced women were busy there,
Bestowing upon them unwonted care,
But the sad old wonder was in their eyes
Which only comes when a mother dies.
The littlest one with the withered hand,
Nobody thought he could understand;
But he gathered up the air of gloom,
And his voice rang out in that quiet room;
If ever a baby spoke in air,
That little one cried—"It is not fair!"
"Come out awhile," the father said,
"That kid's sharp voice goes through my head."
Outside was a day of sparkling sun,
Which warms old Winter his days are done—
The cattle fed at the oat straw stacks,
Enjoying the sunshine on their backs;
And fat pigs did long tunnelling stunts
Filling the air with contented grunts;
A young colt frolicked beside the mare,
That lazily yawned in the soft Spring air,
As she licked it about with motherly care;
While hens and roosters crackled and crew,
And openly gossiped of prospects too.
"You have lots of machines"—the preacher said,
Looking around at the rakes and drills
Which had overflowed from the big red shed;
"You've paid some big machinery bills!"
Machines were there, blue, green, and red—
A threshing machine with a canvas head!
While broken ones were weathered and grey,
As if they'd lain there many a day.
"We have to have them," said Mr Brown,
"No matter what we have to pay;
The seasons are short, and it's up to us
To make the most of every day.
These things cannot be borrowed or lent,
So it's foolish to scrimp for the sake of a cent.
But of course, a man must use his sense
People try to do you every day.
It isn't more than a month ago
A fellow came all around this way,
And he was surely a smooth tongued sink,
And was bound he would sell me a kitchen sink!
Jane would have taken it on the jump,
For she always wanted a kitchen pump,
But I showed her 'twould give us no return,
And told her I hadn't no money to burn.'
Then the neighbours came and they laid her away,
And they blamed the Lord, in the same old way;
And they wondered how, if God is good,
He could take her from her little brood,
But looking down on that tired face,
The minister knew what had taken place;
The Great Physician—from the skies
Had looked on her with his kindly eyes,
And prescribed the cure he thought the best.
"For Mrs. Brown a Change and Rest."
Then he did as the country doctors do,
Not only wrote, but filled it too;
So the minister blushed as he read the word.
'Inasmuch as it hath pleased the Lord;"
And all the way home, the gray bird's song
Piped out, "It's wrong! it's wrong!
Mrs Brown passed out on Saint Patrick's Day;
Mr. Brown dried his eyes by the end of May,
He painted his buckboard, and looked abroad
And decided he'd try Bud Thompson's Maud.
For Maud was willing and big and strong,
And he tho't she'd be able to get along.
So he went to Maud and he laid his case,
And told her he thot she'd a lovely face,
He had always liked her quick, bright ways,
He believed he'd marry her some of these days
Did she think she'd like to be his wife?—
But Maud replied—"Not on your life!
Of endless work I'm afraid I'd tire,
For an early grave I've no desire.
You've had great success in working land,
Now at housework why not try your hand?
When you've worked at that a month or two
You'll learn the truth your poor wife knew;
Your work has been done by gas and steam,
By man and tool and four horse team;
Your yard looks like a machinery shower,
But your house all ran on woman power,
And one day of course the power gave out
And this is how it comes about
That you must fill that woman's place.
And you think I have a lovely face!
And you'd like it well if I would come
And pitch right in and make things hum!
But I am wise—and so decline
You're very kind but—'not for mine!'"
John Brown drove slowly down the lane,
And wished he hadn't lost poor Jane.
