Protection Against Corn Borer

All corn refuse around the barn yard and weeds along the headlands of last year's corn fields should be burned in the spring. This is the advice of agricultural officials in charge of the European corn borer campaign. The borer winters in the cut stalks of corn and the thick stem weeds bordering the fields, and emerges during early June in the moth stage. When the refuse is burned before that time the pest is destroyed.

Cattle Die of Blackleg

A serious outbreak of the disease known as blackleg has occurred in Kepple Township. Mr. Wm. Lemon, a farmer living near Murphy's had three head of cattle taken ill in the early fall, dying after a short illness. He removed the carcasses from the stable and buried them in a swale near the barn, not thinking anything seriously wrong and attributing their death to the effects of feeding sweet clover ensilage. A short time after ten more became ill and Dr. Follis, who was called in, called Dr. Porterfield in consultation. They decided it was blackleg, one of the deadliest diseases among cattle. These ten also died and were buried in a nearby field. They had drunk of the water near where the first three were buried. Five more are now ill and the doctors hold out no hope of recovery.—Meaford Mirror.
