Alleged Slayer Arrested at Norval

Edward Harlton, Accused of Killing Constable in London Taken at Geo. Faulkner's Farm

More than a year and five months after the crime with which he had been charged had been committed, Edward Harlton, alleged to have shot and killed County Constable John Waddell in London, Ont., on Sept. 12, 1925, was arrested at the farm of George Faulkner, near Norval, Monday afternoon by Provincial Police officers.

Harlton was lodged in Brampton Jail and an officer of the London police will take him back for trial.

Credit for the arrest was tonight given by Deputy Commissioner Cuddy of the Ontario Provincial Police to the police of Toronto and London.

Harlton it is alleged, shot County Constable John Waddell of Middlesex when that officer attempted to arrest him for chicken stealing. Constable Waddell died in a few minutes, and the countryside was searched for days without result.

The Chief Constable at London wired the Toronto Detective Department that the man wanted was known to have left a train at Norval last week. This information was passed to Deputy Commissioner Cuddy, and as a result the Norval district was combed by Provincial Officers Owens and Reevely. It took the two officers from Thursday until Monday to locate the farm on which the man worked.

When the officers arrived at the farm Harlton was in the barn, and at their approach he made a dash for liberty. However he was quickly overtaken, and without any struggle was removed to Brampton Jail.

Harlton had been employed by Mr. Faulkner about a month ago, and was working under the name of William Campbell. According to Magistrate Robert Crawford, the man admitted that he was Edward Harlton.

—Little complaint in regard to the condition of fall wheat is being received. There is more ice on the wheat than farmers care for, but it is considered too early to make a forecast of the crop in this district.

Mothers' and Daughters' Banquet

On Tuesday evening Feb. 22nd the three organized girls classes of Knox Presbyterian Church entertained their mothers to a banquet. The church parlours were beautifully and appropriately decorated in the class colours blue, white and gold. About seventy of the hostesses and guests sat down at the tables and leisurely chatted away the hour of banquet. Many of the guests could not refrain from remarks concerning the daintiness and refined taste which characterized every feature of the banquet.

As one of the honoured guests was Miss Robson, a returned missionary from India, the tables were decorated with miniature beasts of the jungle so that all might be reminded of our interest in the people of that far-away land.

At the close of the banquet Miss Margaret McKay accepted the responsibilities of toast-mistress and began a long and interesting toast list by proposing a toast to King and Country, which was responded to by all singing the National Anthem.

Then followed a toast to the Church proposed by Miss Edna Hill and responded to by Mrs. K. MacLean.

The next was a toast to the Classes by Mrs. Hodgson and Miss Margaret McDougal.

Then a toast to Our Mothers by Miss Jean McKenzie and Mrs. J. J. Allan.

The last was a toast to Shanti and Ruth by Miss Jennie McDougal and Miss Robson of India. Shanti and Ruth are two girls of the Bhil district in India and their education is being provided for by the members of the C. O. S. class of Knox Presbyterian Church. In her address Miss Robson gave a most interesting account of the conditions of life among the Bhils, and gave particulars of the parentage, home conditions and life of Shanti and Ruth.

At the conclusion of the toast list, Miss Isabel Wilson who is about to leave for training as a nurse in Guelph Hospital, was called to the platform where she was presented with a beautiful umbrella; the presentation was made by Mrs. Dorothy Gregory and a beautiful worded address was read by Miss Jean Allen. During the evening Mrs. Bessey sang a solo which was very appropriate and much enjoyed.
