

Lambert family cheque lights up Hospital Foundation

The Lambert family of Georgetown received more than $10,000 in donations during their annual Christmas lights campaign. Earlier this month, $8,006.50 was donated to the Georgetown Hospital Foundation, and an additional $2,400 was donated to a local family in need.

The Lamberts have now donated more than $50,000 over the last six years to the Georgetown Hospital Foundation— thanks to the donations made by those viewing the Christmas lights at their home on Johnson Cres. Mounted at the front of the driveway is a donation box, which gets filled by those driving by to see the display.

The Lamberts have been putting on spectacular Christmas lighting displays for more than a decade. This year the Lamberts used more than 50,000 lights, a mix of 40,000 LED lights and the rest made up of various lights. The display is pretty much a year-round project for the Lamberts. The displays and stands are all built by Darryl Lambert and he starts assembling the display outside in late September— it takes about two months to complete.
