ARTHUR ENJOYS HIS BUSINESS MEN ROLES

There is no other kind of a role that Mr. Arthur enjoys playing more than he does that of the successful business man. He particularly likes to play the part of an American business man.

He had such a role in "The Millionaire." He portrayed business genius in the role of Alexander Hamilton," and he followed that recently with a part which made him one of the world's successful financiers in "A Successful Calamity."

He has another such role now, a role more than slightly reminiscent of the first American business man part in "The Millionaire," in his latest Warner Bros. picture, "The Working Man" which comes to the Gregory Theatre on Saturday, June 3rd.

"The Working Man," based on a story by Edgar Franklin and adapted by Charles Kenyon and Maude T. Howell, is a delightful comedy drama in which Mr. Arliss, a wealthy business man, masquerades as a small town fisherman in order to prevent the ruin of the son and daughter of a woman he had once loved.

FARMERS STUDY AND DEBATING SOCIETY

On Tuesday evening, May 23rd, about fifty farmers and a number of ladies foregathered in the Council Chambers at Stewarttown, under the chairmanship of Mr. K. C. Lindsay, to discuss any steps which might be taken to relieve the present disabilities of agriculture.

In his opening address the chairman pointed out that it would be waste of effort to start something, if it was not backed up by concrete knowledge. All the members were invited to contribute to the discussion to follow the address by Mr. Jay O. M. Bruyn, on the subject: "Farmers' Co-operation in Holland and Denmark."

The reason that so many farmers' co-operatives in the past did not flourish, according to Mr. Bruyn, is that a co-operation can only succeed when the co-operation spirit is rife among the members. This means a spirit of responsibility and service by all for all, and recognition of the fact that all farmers belong together, that the well-being of one means the well-being of all farmers. It is impossible to start a co-operation where this spirit is not strong enough, as it is to start a car with the battery run down. Neither will a co-operative be a success if it is subsidized by any government. Wherein a well balanced economy co-operation is totally unnecessary, in the past 40 years farmers have been forced into co-operation by inefficiency, greed or dishonesty of trade and industry.

Mr. Bruyns enumerated and briefly described some of the great co-operatives in Holland and Denmark:

Co-operative creameries and dairies.
Co-operative sugar factories.
Co-operative strawboard factories.
Co-operative potato, flour and starch factories.
Co-operative fertiliser factories.
Co-operative packing houses.

Federation of these factories with big warehouses and the most efficient system of marketing.

Co-operative buying organizations in every village, combined into one great central organization.

He described many more co-operative features, everyone of great interest to the audience.

The Dutch and Danish farmers with all these wonderful, the most efficient co-operatives in the world, however, are just as badly off as the Canadian farmer. The Dutch and Danish governments have to keep agriculture afloat by subsidies, a moratorium, etc.

This clearly shows that there is a more formidable farmers' enemy hid-
