Celebrated 72nd Birthday

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Bert Colman was the scene of a happy event last Friday evening, when Mr. Colman's mother, Mrs. E. Colman, celebrated her 72nd birthday. There was a large attendance at the fowl supper at Union Church last Thursday evening. The ladies of the church excelled themselves in the splendid supper provided. The program following the supper was also good and was provided by the following talent: Mrs. Fred Oakes, elocutionist, Rockwood; Miss Irene Jamison, reciter, Cooksville; Milton Male Quartette, Marchmant Brothers, Hawaiian music, Glenwilliams. Canvass for Funds for Relief

The Georgetown Central Relief Committee are planning to conduct a canvass of every household in Georgetown to secure contributions for the carrying on of relief work in Georgetown for the season of 1933-34. The canvassers will be calling on you on Monday, Tuesday or Wednesday evening, Nov. 13th to 15th inclusive. Will you please be ready to receive them generously and help the Committee finance the work successfully. Generous contributions are asked for as the need is great. Every dollar you give means three dollars available for relief. The Committee would like to have every home in Georgetown have at least a small part in the work.

Meals for Transients

The Central Relief Committee of Georgetown have planned a little change in the handling of the transients. For the next four or five weeks any householder or storekeeper appealed to for a meal by a transient, should refer them to Speight's Garage on Guelph St., where meal tickets may be secured. It has been decided to ask every able bodied transient to cut a small amount of wood for which he will receive a meal ticket.

The work of caring for transients will be greatly facilitated in Georgetown if instead of feeding or giving money to transients—every householder or storekeeper will refer them to Speight's Garage until further notice four or five weeks hence.

A figurehead representing a Chinese dragon, standing on a pedestal in Stanley Park, Vancouver, is all that is left of the 6,600 ton Canadian Pacific liner Empress of Japan, junked in 1922 after 31 years of service. The new Empress of Japan, of 26,000 tons, is the holder of all speed records on the Pacific between British Columbia ports and the Orient.

Behan's Weekly Letter

Calgary, Oct. 30th.

This morning I did the banks! No not the way you mean, but on a sight-seeing tour. I was advised to see the Bank of Montreal inside, but no mention of one golden sight which was to greet my eyes as I stepped inside it's portals. Gold and then more gold, grains of it on every side, on the ceiling, and walls, the very pillars, 12 of them, were covered with 22 carat gold. There is not another interior in North America and possibly the whole world just like it. All the inlaying on walls and ceiling is done in gold leaf, 22 carat, and the pillars also covered with gold leaf, except 3 ft. at the base which is black Italian marble. It is a beautiful sight, and one not easily forgotten.

I must have looked suspicious as I went in, because I hadn't been in there two minutes, gazing up at the ceiling, probably with my mouth open, before a police officer of the bank came over to me. "Quite a golden effect you have here," I said. "this gilt looks fine." "Gilt," he snorts, "that's not gilt my boy, that's real gold." And so it was. He took me all through this new bank, built in 1930, from the steel clad vaults in the basement, to the roof garden, the kitchen (a new idea) recreation room, the balcony. I saw it all, but the bank itself, the everyday bank where hundreds of people do their banking everyday. This is one of the sights of Calgary, the whole interior is done in bronze, blue and gold effect. Fifteen chandeliers, all the cages, gates and tables are in heavy bronze, while high up on the wall near the ceiling there is white and gold relief work. It took 3050 books of gold leaf for the ceiling alone.

I went through the Turner Valley Oil Field with Mr. J. H. Goodwin and Mr. Turnbull, president and secretary of the British Dominion Oil Co. After a 40 mile run southwest of Calgary, we came into the north end of the field. There is nothing beautiful or handsome about an oil field, in fact, it is ugly and is not very interesting until you become familiar with the process of drilling, shooting and refining. There are about 20 companies operating down there, the largest being the Imperial Oil Co. and it's subsidiaries. These people have an absorption plant the latest development in abstracting gasoline from gas vapor. The field is what is known as a naptha field not crude oil. There is a tremendous flow of wet gas, and out of this gas comes the naptha which the farmers and truckers use in its crude state. Every flowing well has a flare which burns up the waste gas. Calgary uses about one-tenth of the gas in its homes and the remaining 240,000,000 cu. ft. per day goes up in smoke as they are not allowed to ship it out of the province. No one seems to know why, but in spite of the fact that this gasoline is piped to its refineries right in the outskirts of Calgary, gasoline is the same price as in Georgetown or Toronto.

In spite of the fact that great wealth surrounds it on all sides Turner Valley village is a drab looking place, but I saw a fine looking new high school set out in the scrub, looking about as much out of place as a drop of oil in a dish of ice cream.

The whole process of drilling and shooting is difficult for a novice to explain. But after the drilling has reached a depth of about 3500 to 5000 ft. 500 qts. of nitro glycerine is put down and the well "shot." It costs about $150,000 to bring in a well, but when you consider that the income from a 400 barrel a day well would be about $15,000 a day, it doesn't look so bad. Until this new absorption process was discovered they only got one-third of the gasoline content out of the gas, now they get almost all. Eighteen miles down the field we visited the Anaconda II which was expected to come in at any minute to its full flow of gas. The manager was uneasy all the time we were there as it is considered a dangerous time to be around. Sometimes they strike a pocket of gas of tremendous volume, which lifts the mile length of heavy pipe right out of the well and wrecks about everything above ground. The whole plant was full of the sickening sweet odor of gas and the striking of a match meant the finish of everything alive around there. As dusk begins to fall we pass through the village of Black Diamond on our way home. The hundreds of flares light up the lowering clouds like the lights from a large city. We soon leave these behind and arrive back in Calgary about 7.30, the end of a perfect day.

There is two inches of snow on the streets as I pass through them at 9 a.m. on my way to the C.N.R. station, and an hour later we roll along on our way to Edmonton. Stubble and ploughed field, prairie and bush is covered with the first white blanket, and one which may stay on till the first soft chinook comes streaming down from the mountain slopes to bathe the land in a warm flood of life giving air. Half way to Edmonton and the snow has disappeared, there is a misty sky but prairies are bright and clear and the air mild.

And this is Edmonton, capital city of Alberta, at night. Exactly twenty years ago, I was in here for a few days and the night I left, in a hurry to get somewhere else, I have not forgotten. I was rooming about a mile from the station, and why I allowed such little time to get the train is a mystery. With about one minute and a half to make it I rushed to a taxi stand. "How much to catch the C.P.R. for Saskatoon," I asked, "we have about one minute to catch it." "$1.00" he replied. "Good," said I, "Step on it." He did, and how! I had a suitcase and it and I mixed things up considerable before we finished. Round corners on one wheel, then round another on the opposite side, and as a finishing touch, the earth seemed to drop away, we shot down into a ravine, like a roller coaster gone wild, and while my past life flashed before me in a swift panorama of evil deeds, we flew up the opposite incline. My head hit the back of the seat with a bang, and while I lay there in a daze, the car came to a stop. "Where are we?" said I weakly. "At the station, and there is your train," he answered briskly. I put out my hand to open the door, but there wasn't any. "Where is the door?" I asked him. "Oh we lost it on the way down!" And afterwards I remembered a sudden jolt and a bang as we passed a line of cars going in the opposite direction, and so close that we could have rubbed noses.—P. P. B.

Shower and Dance

On Saturday evening, Nov. 4th, a very interesting event in the form of a shower took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Aldwell, 9th line Esquesing, when friends and neighbors of Mr. James Burns gathered to honor his only daughter, Elva, who was recently married to Mr. George Raspin. The early part of the evening was spent in an old fashioned dance, the music for which was supplied by Mr. Alex. McKay and Miss Jean Sinclair. Mr. and Mrs. Raspin were presented with many beautiful and useful gifts for which they thanked their friends. Mr. Fred Sinclair was chairman of the evening and called on Messrs. Fred Havens, Stanley Sinclair and Bert McMenemy who made short and appropriate speeches. A delicious luncheon was served after which the singing of "They are jolly good fellows" brought the pleasant evening to a close.
