Moratorium to Continue
The Ontario mortgage moratorium will be extended in its entirety for another year, Hon. G. D. Conant, attorney-general, informed the legislature last Friday. Earlier this session, the government had proposed to extend the moratorium insofar as it applied to principal payments but to terminate it on Oct. 31 next insofar as taxes and interest are concerned. Members on both sides of the house had protested, however, that this might cause hardship; and Mr. Conant yesterday agreed to continue the full immunity from foreclosure until June of 1939. "It is not the government's desire to impose hardship on anyone," the attorney-general gave assurance.
