NEWS

Local home's backyard to be featured on a new Cogeco cooking TV show

Local resident Glenn Heshka worked as a cameraperson and the backyard of his Georgetown South home served as the setting for an episode of the new cooking show A Taste of, which is expected to air on Cogeco in the fall.

The half-hour program features Chef Mike Benninger of Burlington using a Big Green Egg grill and conventional barbecue to cook four massive Black Angus porterhouse steaks, while providing tips to viewers on how to properly and safely do so.

Carl 'The Crusty Rancher' Cosack of the Peace Valley Ranch in Mulmur Township, just north of Shelburne, provided the steaks and hosted the first segment of the episode.

Heshka, a professor in the advanced camera and lighting program at Seneca College, is the director of photography for A Taste of. It's filmed in several different locations around Ontario and features various on-air personalities, and the crew is about halfway finished with production of the 13 episodes.

Sunday dinner complaint sends HHFD to Georgetown home

On Sunday, Aug. 9, about 8:30 p.m. Halton Hills Fire Dept. responded to a burn complaint on Cleavehome Dr.

On arrival crews found a small contained fire for the purposes of cooking food. The resident was allowed to continue and directed to extinguish the fire when cooking was complete. No further action required.
