Hildebrandt Wants Pressure Continued for 401 Access Road

Continued pressure on the highways department for a better 401 access was promised by Cr Charles Hildebrandt on Monday when he said he would urge another interview with the highways minister early in the new year.

The councillor also said he is considering circulating a petition for residents to sign to add to the town's case.

The matter was discussed after a letter was received from highways minister Charles McNaughton asking the town to take no further action until the results of a traffic survey are compiled. This will be ready before next summer, he said.

"We're not interested in a traffic study of the Toronto-Hamilton area", said Cr Hildebrandt. "We need a better route from 401 and I will continue to seek it."

Mayor Hyde said that while he thinks a highway is the best solution, he thinks this is not going to be.

"We have talked a lot about the 9th Line as a possibility, but we shouldn't ignore the 8th Line (the continuation of Georgetown's Main Street) which might be developed in co-operation with Esquesing Township" he said.

This route does not present the major construction problems of the 9th Line, he said.

Won't Vote Expense Not Budgeted, Deputy

"You can't stand prosperity just because we have some money left at the end of the year" said Deputy Reeve Hunter on Monday in opposing an unbudgeted $300 expenditure.

Mr. Hunter stressed that he was in favour of the idea — a $300 bonus to Mrs. John Oliver who takes calls for the fire, police departments and ambulance service.

"She's done a whale of a job" he said, "but this isn't in our budget and I can't vote for it."

Council voted the bonus with only Mr. Hunter's dissenting vote. Mayor Hyde explained that originally Mrs. Oliver was granted the fire hall apartment in exchange for answering fire calls. But through the years, she has had ambulance and emergency police calls added to her duties, while the fire department also has extended to serve a portion of Esquesing.
