

IN CHARGE FOR THE DAY: Josh Metler and Terri Digout got to see how Terry Alyman, the Town of Halton Hills' Commissioner of Community and Corporate Services, spends his day as the Directors for the Day at the Civic Centre recently. Both university students are in their sixth year as summer camp instructors for the Town and after spending the morning performing administrative duties in Alyman's office, took in an afternoon webinar that demonstrated how the local Council can become paperless in the future. Christ the King graduate Digout has graduated from Carleton University with a degree in history and will now take her Master's in teaching at the University of Toronto. GDHS grad Metler is entering his final year in the University of Guelph's environmental engineering program and has been with the Town's aquatics camp program in all six years. Alyman spent his day out of the office poolside overseeing the aquatics program.
