the bullet was marked with rings and considerably flattened. No, there was nothing in the flesh, and nothing in the saddle to make these marks, and they then must have been made before firing.

I then proposed that we should search with dogs for at least two miles around from where the shot was fired, to see if any traces could be found of either the man or the gun.

We made the most careful search; presently I came to a stone on the road itself, marked in a peculiar manner.

'What's the cause of these marks?' said I to the farrier of the troop, who had volunteered to help, and who said he never felt more grateful to any one in his life, than he did to me for squeezing his hand so hard as I did that day.

'What's the cause? It's been used as a hammer for something—a nail in a shoe.'

'Nail heads are square.'

'True for you—these are round.'

'Do you think a ramrod would make these marks?'

'It just would. Somebody's been driving down a hard bullet with it.'

'So I think. Now take this stone and throw it over that gap into the middle of the copse, and I'll mark where it seems to fall.'

He threw it, and marking the spot, we found our way into the jungle; and there within a few yards of the stone, under the long leaves we found what we sought—the remains of a native, stripped of flesh and bone, except on the hands and feet, and with a great gaping wound in the skull; and on the inside which the ants had perfectly cleaned out, was a large piece of the breach of the burst gun that he had by his side.

The whole evidence was there; two empty cartridges; another No. 2 bullet; eight untouched cartridges. It was evident that the man whoever he was, had taken the captain's gun, and putting in two charges of powder, rammed down the two large bullets with the blows of the stone on the now bruised end of the ramrod; and the loud report which all the witnesses spoke of was as loud as the simultaneous report of the discharge of three charges of powder could make it, while the want of force in the bullet was accounted for by the bursting of the gun.'

We took home the skull, and the burst rifle, and the cartridge cases, together with some remnants of the clothing; and we found there the intended murderer to have been one of the syces, or grooms of the captain, that he had horse-whipped a month before for ill-using a horse of which he had charge.

Of course there was a new trial ordered, and as the evidence was unquestionable, Gerald was discharged.

'Did he leave the regiment?'

'Not a bit—why should he? The men worshipped him, and the officer who was wounded was invalided; and he and his comrades managed matters among them so well, that at the first parade of the regiment at Calcutta, some six months afterwards, the old colonel presented to the men a new officer, Capt. Ashton, adding, 'if he makes half as good an officer as he did a soldier there will not be a better in her Majesty's service.'

'And your sister Margaret.'

'Oh, I've just seen a little case, lined with velvet, and something inside engraved, 'Wm. Gerald Ashton, from his affectionate uncle.'

No Stamp on It.

A good joke came off quite recently at a court house. A person living a short distance out of the village is in the habit of frequently coming into town and drinking to inebriation. At such seasons he is apt to call on his Honor, Judge M——. Recently, he made one of his visits, became decidedly tipsy, called on Judge M——, and desired the Judge to write him a pledge asserting his intention to cease drinking. His honor wrote the pledge as desired, and the tipsy individual affixed his name thereto. He then desired to have the pledge that he might take it home and show it to his wife. His honor thought that he was himself the proper custodian for the important agreement, but yielded to the solicitations of the man, at the same time assuring that if he broke the contract and appeared before him again in a state of intoxication, he would have him locked up. A week elapsed, and the judge was confronted by the same man, as drunk as aforetimes. 'How is this?' said his Honor; 'did I not tell you I would have you locked up if you did not keep your agreement?' 'Judge M.,' said the tipsy fellow, 'do you think I am a fool. I know what I am about. I'll show you if I'm a fool!' and he drew forth his wallet from his pocket, took out his pledge, unfolded its worn creases, and holding it up, triumphantly exclaimed: 'Will you just show me the U.S. Internal Revenue Stamp on that agreement? The Judge caved.

John Wesley, the founder of Methodism when one day riding through the country, was saluted by a fellow who was lying in the ditch:

"Hallo, Father Wesley, I'm glad to see you. How do you do?"

"I don't know you," said Mr. W., reining up his horse. "Who are you?"

"Don't you know me? Why, sir, you are the very man who converted me."

"I reckon I am," said Mr. Wesley, putting spurs to his horse;" at least one thing is evident, the Lord had nothing to do with it."

CROCKERY.

HUGH McKAY

HAS now on hand the Largest and Best Assorted Stock of CHEAP FAMILY GROCERIES ever brought to GEORGETOWN. Our daily increasing list of customers plainly show who has the Best and Cheapest Goods. To say that we sell 10 to 15 per cent cheaper than our neighbors, would only expose a weakness alarmingly prevalent among advertisers. All these cheap advertised impossibilities are just so many flags of distress only hoisted to public view when the ship appears sinking. Our general assortment of goods was never so large and well selected, and never were our prices more favorable to the buyer. We want 300 Kegs of Good Dairy Butter, also some 500 Dressed Hogs, and any amount of Good Shipping Apples, for which the highest market price will be paid.
