COMMITTED FOR TRIAL.—Walter Liberty, an English street waif of stunted growth, but probably twenty years old, went to Mr. J P Roper's grocery on Tuesday to make some purchases for his employer, a farmer of this neighborhood. Mr. Roper says that he went to his cellar to fill a jug with vinegar, and hearing Liberty, whom he had left alone upstairs moving about in what he thought a suspicious manner, took a peep up and found the young man helping himself from the till. Chief Constable Bradley was immediately summoned, and arrested Liberty, on whose person was found a dollar bill which was identified by Mr. Roper and his clerk as having been in the till. The chief thereupon marched his man off to jail, and shortly afterwards brought him before Geo. Smith, Esq., J. P. who committed him for trial. Liberty bears a bad character and has already "done time," for robbing the house of a Trafalgar farmer with whom he was hired some time ago.
