Brother Foster on Prohibition.

Empire.

Hon. Mr. Foster said he took no stock in the criticism of the petitions at all. Every person who has arrived at the age of understanding had a right to be heard on such a subject. So far as he was personally concerned he proposed to be perfectly honest with himself, with the country and with the cause. He would not forestall what he had to say in the House, but he would say this, that they might be equally strong prohibitionists and yet not agree as to methods and times. This was not a Government question, not one of parties even, but of the people. What was to be done depended entirely on the people themselves. They must remember, however, that there was the widest possible difference between the enactment and enforcement. Then he noticed this, that the delegates spoke of obtaining prohibition in the near future, whereas the Jamieson resolution contained no future; it was essentially of the present. Did they mean that there was to be no grace—that the carrying of the resolution was to be followed the next day by the passage of a prohibitory liquor law; or did they mean that the resolution was to be adopted and carried into effect when the Government saw methods and means at their disposal? Was it to be what Mr. Jamieson's resolution asked, or what Rev. Mr. Breth our said? Then again, if the law was passed, the first thing to be faced was a loss of seven and a half millions of revenue the next moment. Moral sentiment said: Let it go; the loss of men's souls cannot be weighed in the balance with money; but it was a practical difficulty nevertheless, because the Finance Minister would have to come down to Parliament with a scheme to provide that revenue? How was it to be done? Not by the collection of customs duties; that was out of the question. In plain words, it could only be got by direct taxation. Were they prepared to do this? Was it not a fact that the people had never come face to face with the question in this light? If the people were prepared to support their sentiments out of their pockets, then they stood on square ground; but was it not the fact that there was a general belief that they could get around this question of revenue in some way? Well, they could not. He was not prepared to pass a prohibitory law, be unable to enforce it or raise the revenue, have a reaction set in with the result of sweeping the Government that enacted the law out of power, and a return to a state of things ten times worse than they were before. His position was this. The people had a right to what they asked, but the first duty of Government was to ascertain if the people really did want it, and would they stand by it and take all the attendant consequences.

Dignity in Worship.

In writing upon the subject of comparative church worship, Rev. D. J. Macdonnell says: Have we Presbyterians in Canada—we ministers especially—anything to learn regarding public worship? Few of us think we have reached the ideal. There is no reason why we should not strive to attain it. We may, I believe, have a service that will combine the dignity and beauty of the liturgical service of the Church of England with the spontaneity and life on which we properly lay so much stress. The treasures of all the old liturgies are ours, to be used either as forms or as models. I put in a plea for dignity in the conduct of public worship, especially of the service of prayer. This is one characteristic to be commended in the Church of England service. The leading of a congregation is a part of the work for which a minister ought to prepare himself by earnest thought as well as by devout secret prayer. The man who stands up and utters random thoughts in a slovenly way, under pretence of trusting to the guidance of the Holy Spirit, is guilty of a grievous impertinence.—Toronto World.

Canadians Are Temperate.

Canada Presbyterian.

The Queen's Birthday this year was kept with more than the usual degree of cordiality. Monday was generally observed as a holiday, the people enjoying the respite from business and toil in a rational manner. It is noticeable in Canada that people who go for an outing on holidays are remarkably well behaved. At the close of the day they return somewhat fatigued, no doubt, but few, indeed, are to be seen who have given way to the temptations of over indulgence in strong drink. The police court docket on the following morning is not heavily crowded with the names of delinquents.

Helena Hot Springs.

The great plunge bath building on the grounds of Hotel Broadwater, at Helena, Montana, is the finest specimen of Moorish architecture in America. The bath is 300x100 feet in size, and covered with 20,000 square feet of stained glass. The water supply exceeds a million gallons a day, and possesses wonderful curative properties. The water pours in over a cascade, at a temperature of 160°, but is tempered to human use. In a sunlit valley, surrounded by the noble Rockies, it is the finest watering place of the continent. Reached direct by the Great Northern Railway Line, from St. Paul, Minneapolis, Duluth and West Superior. Publications and information sent free by F. I. Whitney, G. P. & T. A., St. Paul, Minn.

Hezekiah Butterworth, of the Youth's Companion, and author of the famous "Zig Zag Journey" books, is preparing a volume to add to his interesting series, from material gathered on a trip over the Great Northern Railway, through Minnesota, North Dakota and Montana, during the summer of 1890. He thinks the Park Region of Minnesota is one of the most delightful sections of America for a summer outing.

The population of Winnipeg is placed at 26,000.

Sir George Stephen has been elevated to the British peerage.

Port Arthur is complaining because the C.P.R. steamers pass them by and dock at Fort William.

Saturday was Decoration day in the United States, and the usual homage was paid to the memory of the dead soldiers.

The Indian Plenty-Horses has been been acquitted of the murder of Lieut. Casey during the late outbreak in Dakota, the judge charging the jury to that effect.

A petition has been unanimously signed in Regina to have every Wednesday afternoon in June, July and August proclaimed a civic holiday. The board of trade and town council favor the scheme.

Anarchy is said to prevail in the New Hebrides islands. Severe fighting has taken place among the natives, in which 600 were killed. The victors eat the bodies of those of their opponents who are slain.

The Century for June.

The June CENTURY has an interesting frontispiece portrait of George Mifflin Dallas, formerly Vice-president of the United States. This portrait accompanies the second and last instalment of the papers extracted from Mr. Dallas's journal, written, while he was American Minister to the Court of the Czar Nicholas I. In the fourth instalment of the Talleyrand Memoirs, Talleyrand replies directly to his accuser, General Sherman's last speech, delivered at the Press Club dinner to Henry M. Stanley, January 31, is for the first time printed in this number of The Century from manuscript dictated by General Sherman before the speech was made. The new paper in the California series is by Dr. Charles B. Gillespie of Freeport, Pennsylvania, and is substantially a transcript from his California journal of 1849 and '50, being a description of a Sunday in Coloma in which the rougher life of the mines is most prominent—the auctioneering, racing, gambling, thimble-rigging, etc. There is an illustrated article entitled 'Women at an English University,' in which Newnham College is described, with pictures of the College and portraits of Mrs. Clough and Miss Gladstone. The first paper in the number is one of Mrs. Burton Harrison's sketches of Old Virginia life. This is very handsomely illustrated, and is entitled 'Colonel William Byrd of Westover, Virginia.' Mr and Mrs. Pennell have papers on 'Play and Work in the Alps.' In the series of American Pictures a full-page engraving by Closson is given of 'Sometimes,' from a painting by Ernest L. Ipsen. Edward Eggleston's 'Faith Doctor' is continued in this number, and the second instalment of Stockton's 'Squirrel Inn' is numerously illustrated. In addition, a new writer, Florence Wetters Snedeker, is brought out, with a pathetic story entitled 'The House with the Cross.' Hamlin Garland has his first Century story in this number. It is entitled 'A Spring Romance.' Mr. Garland will have a number of stories in The Century during the next year or two—all in his peculiar field of western life. Another short story is 'A Girl without Sentiment,' by Eugene Bradford Ripley. Another new writer makes his appearance here with six brief sketches entitled 'Haroun and Caliph and Others.' This writer's name is given as Ferid el din Attar. The essay of most importance is another of the Present Day Papers contributed by the Sociological Group. It is written by Professor Sloane, of Princeton, and is on the subject of 'Pensions and Socialism.' In 'Topics of the Times' another popular hobby of Money Panaceas' There are also editorials on 'Judicial Control of Contested Election Cases' and 'Law or Lynching,' the latter having to do with the mob incidents of Cincinnati and New Orleans. There is a very interesting Open Letter by Theodore Roosevelt, in which he compares the force and loss of the combatants in the battles of Waterloo and Gettysburg. The poems outside the one on Sherman are by Edith M. Thomas, the late Anne C. L. Botta, Clinton Scollard, Laura E. Richards, Mary E. Wilkins, Bishop Spalding of Peoria, Bow Hackley, Marion M. Miller, Kate Putnam Osgood, C. H. Truax, and Douglas Sladen.

CONSUMPTION CURED.

With the blessing of Almighty God, I now feel that I am justified in publishing to my fellow sufferers the means by which I was enabled to cut off the dreadful disease Consumption, after having tried its wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases, and have found it invariably effect a positive and radical cure for Nervous Debility and all Nervous Complaints, after having tested its wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases, has felt it his duty to make it known to his suffering fellows. Actuated by this motive and a desire to relieve human suffering, I will send free of charge, to all who desire it, this recipe, in German, French or English, with full directions for preparing and using. Sent by mail by addressing with stamp, naming this paper, W. A. NOYES, 149 Power's Block, Rochester, N. Y.

The Eclectic for June.

The June issue of THE ECLECTIC contains its usual quantum of attractive articles. 'Talleyrand's Memoirs,' which have excited great interest, are ably discussed by Lord Acton. Mr. F. W. H. Myers, well known as a student of psychology, is the contributor of a paper on 'Science and a Future Life,' and Mr. Edmund Gosse treats of the effects of democratic institutions on letters. Mr. P. G. Hamerton discusses the foundation of ethics in "A Basis of Positive Morality" with great acuteness and suggestive force. One of the trenchant papers is by Erastus Wiman, who treats of the relations of Canada and the United States and the "Barbed Wire Fence" recently erected between them. Mrs. Eliza Priestley has something of interest to say on "The Realm of the Microbe," one of the great questions of modern science. Apropos of Italy, Mathilde Blind gives her reminiscences of the patriot Mazzini, and Mrs. Jessie White Mario, daughter of the great singer, enters into the conditions of the recent imbroglio with the United States. Literary sympathy will be keenly attracted by the symposium between Paul Bourget, Besant and Hardy, all eminent novel writers, on "The Science of Fiction." There are many entertaining lighter articles, stories, travel, sketches, poems, and popular science papers. Published by E. R. Pelton, 25 Bond Street, New York. Terms, $5.00 per year; single numbers, 45 cents; trial subscription for 3 months, $1. Eclectic and any $4 Magazine, $8.

Scribner's Magazine

THE NUMBER FOR JUNE AND ITS MOST IMPORTANT FEATURES.

The reputation which the conductors of Scribner's Magazine have established for the treatment of practical subjects in an interesting way is well maintained in the June number of that periodical. Francisque Sarcey furnishes a vivid and thoroughly Gallic sketch of the boulevards of Paris. His paper is the second in the series on "Great Streets of the World." An article which will interest a host of people in these days of transatlantic travel is that on "Safety on the Atlantic," by William H. Rideing.

Evarts Jansen Wendell writes on "Boys' Clubs." Andrew Lang has a scholarly and critical essay on Moliere, the great French dramatist. John C. Ropes writes on "The War as We See It Now." His judgment of President Lincoln's conduct of the war is one from which believe historians of the future will strongly dissent. Amateur photographers will like to read Wallace Goold Levison's description of the photography of luminous objects. The fiction is from the pens of Maria Blunt, F. J. Stimson and Bliss Perry. Charles F. Lummis, Louise Imogen Guiney and Edith M. Thomas contribute poems.

Harper's Monthly

The June number of Harper's Magazine contains the opening chapters of 'Peter Ibbetson,' a novel written and illustrated by the celebrated artist George du Maurier. This story is one of peculiar psychological interest, and being Mr. Du Maurier's first effort in the field of romantic literature, its publication will prove to be one of the chief literary events of the year. Louis Frechette, the famous Canadian poet, contributes to the same number a picturesque description of 'The Royal Chateaux of the Loire,' accompanied by numerous illustrations drawn by C. S. Reinhart and others. A. T. Quiller Couch's second paper on 'The Warwickshire Avon,' relating to the scenery and associations of 'Shakespeare's country,' is accompanied by newly thirty illustrations from drawings by Alfred Parsons, and forms a very attractive feature of this number. Henry Loomis Nelson writes a timely article on 'Town and Village Government,' in which he presents for consideration some interesting facts regarding the efficiency and economy of the system of local government represented by the New England town meeting, and compares it with the more centralized but less democratic methods adopted in other sections of the country. Anna C. Brackett, in a practical article entitled 'The Technique of Rest,' discusses some subjects of special interest to busy people whose supply of nervous forces is in danger of being overtaxed. Theodore Child, in his ninth article on the Spanish republics of South America, describes an inland voyage of 1350 miles, 'Up the River Parana, from Buenos Ayres to the Paraguayan town of Villa Concepcion.' The attractiveness of this valuable article is enhanced by numerous illustrations drawn by T. de Thulstrup and Harry Fenn. Walter Besant contributes the first of an important series of papers on London—the life of its people, and the features which characterize its existence during the various periods of its history. In 'London—After the Romans' he gives an entertaining account of the last days of the Roman occupancy of the city, and of the probable nature of the catastrophe by which the memories of its former prosperity were so utterly buried. The fiction of this number includes, besides the opening of Mr. Du Maurier's novel, a short story, 'The Failure of David Berry,' by Sarah Orne Jewett, and the conclusion of the two serials by Charles Egbert Craddock and Thomas Hardy. The sonnet entitled 'The Closed Gate,' by Louise Chandler Moulton is an affecting tribute to the memory of Winifred Howells. Other poems are contributed by Elizabeth Stoddard, George Horton, and Will Carleton. The editorial departments, conducted by George William Curtis, William Dean Howells, and Charles Dudley Warner, embrace discussions on a variety of timely and entertaining topics.

A Companion for your June Outing.

With over 120 illustrations, the COSMOPOLITAN for June sets a fast pace in the handicap for magazine honors. The frontispiece is a portrait of Madame de Pompadour and pertains to a bright sketch of a summer spent in the home of that famous woman by Amelie Rives and her guests. Miss Julia Magruder, the writer, was one of those guests, and instantaneous photographs are used to illustrate the scenes of a delightful holiday amidst unusual surroundings. A pleasant insight into the attractiveness of Japanese women is given in a paper by Henry T. Finck, illustrated by a large number of photographs of pretty faces. The art article of the month describes the work of Gustave Dore, with elaborate engravings which illustrate very well the masterpieces of that wonderful artist. Thomas B. Connery, formerly managing editor of the New York Herald, gives interesting reminiscences of the first work of Stanley for that Journal, and of his neighbor, Thomas A. Edison. S. G. W. Benjamin, ex Minister to Persia, tells the true story of Noor Mahal, the Light of the Harem, celebrated by Thomas Moore in Lallah Rookh. This bit of Eastern biography is illustrated from Oriental sources. Three continents furnish material for the June number. The European contributions consist of a description of a Model Municipality; the Woolwich Arsonal, which Mr. Pelham-Clinton, through influential relatives, was permitted to have photographed expressly for the Cosmopolitan; and a charming sketch of Beau Brummell and his times. Hjalmar Hjorth Boyesen's story is illustrated by Wenzell, whose story on Life has made him so well known the country over. Mr. Frank Howard Howe, for some time one of the editors of a New York monthly, gives his personal experiences of the manuscripts of the 'Great Unpublished,' and offers much advice that will be found useful. Perhaps the most valuable article of the number is that contributed by Mr. Abner L. Fraser to the literature of the farmer's movement. The Cosmopolitan prize of $200 for the best article on 'the needs of the farmer, his hours of labor, and the national legislation necessary to his prosperity,' was awarded by the judges to this gentleman. The article itself is brightened by a series of cartoons by the famous artists, Attwood of Boston and Dan Beard of New York.—Cosmopolitan Publishing Co., Madison Square, New York, price, 25 cents.

The Ladies' Home Journal.

A never failing charm of The Ladies' Home Journal is that it is always abreast of the season; somehow it presents just the things one wants most to see at the particular time it comes out; this seems especially true of the June number, with it dainty pages for the Brides of June, Florence Howe Hall's 'In Church, or at Home?' Mrs. Mallon's suggestions for brides and their maids, and Ella Wheeler Wilcox's clever comparisons between women and flowers. Quite as timely, also, are the portrait sketch of Lady Agnes Macdonald, the wife of Canada's Premier; Sister Rose Gertrude's description of 'Life Among the Lepers at Molokai;' Charles J. Dunar's article on 'Women as Type-setters,' and Wm. H. Rideing's 'Hints on House Building.' Those whose thoughts are turning towards summer outings, will find helpful suggestions in 'Horseback Riding for Women,' by Carl A. Nyegaard, of the New York Riding Club, and Miss Le Garde's 'How to Dress for Bicycle Riding;' Helen Jay and Kate Upson Clark have treated very acceptably the two sides of the farmer's summer-boarder controversy, and the same breezy out-door spirit pervades also the usual department pages. Mrs. Whitney's 'A Golden Gossip,' and 'A Soul from Pudge's Corners,' Jessie F. O'Donnell's strong serial, are both continued, and 'Buck' Ewing, of the New York Base-Ball Club, contributes an article which will delight the boys. The Journal promises also some particularly delightful things for each of the coming summer numbers. Issued at One Dollar a year, or Ten Cents a copy, by the Curtis Publishing Company, 435 Arch street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Washington Letter.

(From our Regular Correspondent)

WASHINGTON, May 25, 1891.

Few people who gaze upon the treasures inclosed within the fragile glass cases near the main entrance of the National Museum dream of the actual worth of their contents. Gold and silver by the hundredweight are there exposed to view, while the intrinsic and historical value of the exhibits mounts up into the millions. Among the treasures the museum contains of great intrinsic value are the presents made to Gen. Grant while he was abroad. Among them are three large caskets of gold, each as big as an ordinary four-pound confectionary box and very massive, which were given by London, Ayr and Glasgow containing the freedom of those cities. Gold cigar cases and knives are merely incidental, but a most interesting and precious relic is a gold card of invitation sent to Gen. Grant by friends in San Francisco in a silver envelope with his address on the outside, an ordinary two-cent stamp affixed, and a request engraved upon the envelope that the missive should be returned to the sender if not delivered in two days. The invitation was to the most superb ball ever given on the Pacific coast, and Gen. Grant attended. But in addition to the Grant presents, these glass cases at the museum hold ever so many treasures of value. There are a great number of gold-hilted swords with sold gold scabbards. Two of them were given to Gen. Shields by the states of South Carolina and Illinois, respectively, for services in the Mexican war. Others are mounted with diamonds and studded with rubies and other precious stones. A golden scimitar given by the Emperor of Morocco to Thomas Jefferson is one of the most precious relics. A collection of Japanese gold coins included in the same assemblage of curiosities has a value of many thousands of dollars. There are in addition numerous gold medals granted to the Smithsonian Institution and to the fish commission. Besides, there are ever so many presents of great value given by foreign powers and potentates to Presidents of the United States and other officials of this country, which by law they were not permitted to accept. There are also specimens of all moneys mentioned in the Bible, including the "widow's mite," worth half a farthing, of Judea, the silver Roman "tribute penny," valued at ten cents, the shekel of Jerusalem, and the tetradrachm of Sidon and Tyre.

As the days pass it begins to be apparent that no such agreement will be made between this government and that of Great Britain as might insure that during the coming season no seals shall be taken in Bering Sea. The sealing season commences within a month at furthest, and, as the period of that commencement is now very near at hand, it is evident that this year the killing of seals will go on as before. Already the Secretary of the Treasury has authorized the Alaskan Company to take 40,000 seals. His agent has been dispatched to the islands, and the revenue cutters are awaiting their orders to police those waters. Some months ago an effort was made by the State Department to obtain the assent of Great Britain to a close season. Lord Salisbury is understood to have acceded to Mr. Blaine's proposition and the matter would probably have been arranged in time had it not been considered necessary to make a subsequent proposal to allow the Alaskan Company to take several thousand seals for the support of their establishment on the islands. To this latter proposal the English government has made no response, and, altogether, the outcome, or rather the resultlessness, of the negotiation must be regarded as unfortunate; for Lord Salisbury's delay is attributed to his desire to favor the Canadian sealers, while the varying action of our government is held to have been at the instigation and in the interests of the Alaskan Company.

The June ARENA is one of the strongest and most attractive issues of this brilliant review that has yet appeared, as will be seen from the following partial table of contents. Camille Flammarion writes on 'The Unknown.' Julian Hawthorne on 'A New Columbus.' Julius Chambers, the editor of the New York World, on 'The Chivalry of the Press.' B. O. Flower on 'Society's Exiles.' Prof. James T. Bixby, Ph.D., on 'Evolution and Christianity.' James Realf on 'The Irrigation Problem in the Northwest.' Prof. Jos. Rodes Buchanan on 'Revolutionary Measures and Neglected Crimes.' Rev. T. Ernest Allen on Herbert Spencer's, 'Doctrine of Inconceivability.' Will Allen Dromgoole, 'The Better Part,' a strong story. The No-Name paper, 'The Heiress of the Ridge,' is a brilliant character sketch. Mr. Flower in his editorials discusses 'Optimism, True and False,' and 'The Pessimistic Cast of Modern Thought' in his usual vigorous and thought-inspiring manner. In addition to this attractive array of talent the June Arena contains a supplement which consists of an admirable photogravure of Bishop-elect Phillips Brooks, printed on cardboard suitable for framing. The frontispiece is a steel engraving of the editor of The Arena. Mr. Flower's paper on 'Society's Exiles' is also illustrated by ten photogravures made from flashlight photographs taken for this contribution in the slums of Boston. Excellent full-page photogravures of Julius Chambers and the Rev. T. Ernest Allen accompany their papers. Magazine readers cannot afford to overlook this issue of The Arena.

A New Volume of Short Stories.

A notable volume of short stories will be issued early in June, by The Arena Publishing Company, written by the brilliant realistic author, Hamlin Garland. Main Travelled Roads; Six Mississippi Valley Stories, is the most unique of this volume. The first two stories are in reality novelettes, of about seventy pages each. They have never before been published, and are said to be bold in thought and original in treatment. Though an ardent realist, Mr. Garland is a critical artist, and the appearance of his work will be eagerly looked forward to with anticipation of keen delight by his many admirers.

Mr. Giffen, the statistician, the Montreal Gazette says, shows that wages have increased in Great Britain during the last half century from 50 to 100 per cent., while hours of work have diminished by 20 per cent.—the average being from 8 to 10. Bread has become 20 per cent. cheaper; sugar, 60 to 70 per cent. less expensive; tea, 75 per cent. less costly, and clothing can be bought for half of what was once paid for it. And so on, through almost every item that enters into the sum total of popular consumption. The working people are housed better and fare more comfortably than formerly, and are in the main correspondingly healthier. Their wealth is proportionately great, as shown by the savings banks and various friendly societies.

The words must be written in ink on one side of the paper only, and numbered in rotation, 1, 2, 3 and so on to the end of the list, for facilitating in deciding the winners. The list containing the largest number of words will be awarded first prize, and so on in the order of merit. Each list as it is received at the office of the "Canadian Agriculturist" will be numbered, and if two or more tie on the largest list, the first received will be awarded the first prize, the next second and so on. Therefore the benefit of sending in early will readily be seen. Each list must be accompanied by $1 for 8 months subscription to the "Canadian Agriculturist." One person can send in one or more lists, accompanying each list with $1, for which the paper will be sent to any address for six months. The best family paper in Canada. It is by no means a new paper, but has been established upwards of seven years, and each year grows in the estimation of the subscriber. It contains no trashy, highly colored fiction, but has interesting stories of a higher class by the most popular authors of the day. It is emphatically THE paper for the home circle, and at 89 a year is the cheapest and best paper in the market. This competition will positively close on the above named date. Remember, you are paying $1 for six months subscription to one of the best home papers in Canada, and at the same time run a good chance of winning a valuable prize.

AGENTS WANTED.—The object of the publisher of the "Canadian Agriculturist" in giving away these large amounts in cash, is to extend the circulation of the paper, and a number of agents are required in every locality, to whom liberal pay will be offered. Send three cent stamp for particulars as to clubbing rates, etc. Address, THE CANADIAN AGRICULTURIST, Peterborough, Ontario.
