Moderate Indemnity Only.

New York, July 25.—That Japan will demand an indemnity from Russia in the negotiations for peace, and that the war will be declared at an end at the conclusion of the negotiations at Portsmouth, N.H., next month, is the belief of Baron Komura, head of the Japanese peace mission, as voiced by Amar Sato, official spokesman for the baron. The party arrived here to-day.

Mr. Sato, in an interview to-night, said: "I am confident that peace will be successfully negotiated by the appointed delegations. The Japanese will be guided by moderation, and no excessive demands will be made, but the sentiment in Japan and Russia is for peace, and in the interests of humanity and propriety there must be peace.

"The cost to Japan, however, has been great. On both sides the loss has been 250,000 men, of which Russia lost 175,000. The war is costing Japan one million dollars a day, and there is a feeling that there ought to be an indemnity.

Asked as to the probability of an armistice Mr. Sato said that that probably would be among the first questions the plenipotentiaries would consider. Based on previous treaty negotiations, Japan will make the demands for Russia's consideration, he said. The peace terms were formulated by the emperor of Japan and his council.

Of the attitude of the Japanese plenipotentiaries toward the Russian delegates Mr. Sato said: "We admire M. Witte and Baron Rosen. The announcement of M. Witte's appointment was more welcome to us than that of any other person could have been. We recognize him as a great statesman."

Of the future of China, Mr. Sato said: "If the central government could work in harmony with the district or provincial governments, China would become a great power, but at present that seems impossible." Japan's attitude toward China was most friendly, and she felt that it was more or less under Japan's protection. This protection, by way of contrast, Mr. Sato said, was not so strong over China as that of the United States over South America.

Mr. Sato emphasized the announcement made frequently before, that Japan does not seek territorial aggrandizement. Saying: "We want to Manchuria equal opportunity, or, as Mr. Hay called it, the open door."

Mr. Sato said Japan is over populated, and that in the opening up of Manchuria and Korea, an attractive field for immigration would be nearer home than those offered in Hawaii or this continent.

Mr. Sato said that while a desire for peace was the sentiment of Japan it was not a desire for peace at any price. Japan is in a prosperous condition at present, he said, and the war taxes do not bear heavily upon the people yet. There has already been subscribed $200,000,000 to a new internal loan, and this prosperity is further indicated in the success of our foreign loans."

As to Japan's attitude toward America Mr. Sato laughingly asked: "You mean the yellow peril," and then continued enthusiastic: "We are almost boyish in our expansion and friendship for America. While we are friendly with all Christian nations, our greatest friends are England and America. We regard America as our ally almost in a treaty."

Good Roads by Simple Means.

An article last month in The Saturday Evening describing the great improvement effected in clay roads by the use of a simple split log drag has attracted wide attention and A. W. Campbell, Commissioner of Roads, has received about one hundred letters on the subject. The method of treating the road depends upon scraping it so as to fill all depressions and bring loose material to the crown, so that water is easily shed into the ditches or drains. The two parts of the split log are set on edge and fastened by cross pieces. A chain is attached so that the logs are drawn at an angle to the road and are driven down one side and up the other. The farmer who first adopted the expedient took out his logs on his stretch of road at odd times when he had leisure, probably two or three times a month. In a short time the road became perfectly hard and smooth, as no water could lodge on it. People remarked the fine condition in which the road was maintained but it was not for four years that others began to use the same means. At present, it is said, hundreds of miles in Kansas are being treated in this way with perfect results. The cost is no more than a dollar or two a mile a year.

Ontario Licenses.

Hotel and tavern licenses cancelled in Ontario since the incoming of the Whitney Government will number approximately one hundred, out of a total of [illegible]. The exact number will be known soon after July 31, when the list of the licenses for the year expire. The greatest number of licenses cancelled in any one county has been in Perth county, being from out of a total of [illegible] per cent. The License Department at the Parliament Buildings has been exceedingly busy during the last few months, owing to the appointment of new License Commissioners and License Inspectors throughout the Province, all of whom have to be fully instructed in the duties of their office. Out of a total of [illegible] license inspectors all but a dozen are new men.

Mrs. Kyle was committed for trial at Ingersoll on the charge of murdering David McGee, but she is not likely to be convicted. McGee was a desperado, who, it is alleged, was trying to force his way into the house of Mrs. Kyle, who killed him by a chance shot, when he was 30 yards away.

A deputation from Hamilton waited on the Fisheries Department on Tuesday morning to represent the difficulties involved for fisherman by the new regulations for Burlington Bay. Formerly they were permitted to fish anywhere, but, in consideration of the rights of cottagers and others on the Beach, a half-mile limit was recently established by the Government, within which fishing is not allowed.

AN ENGLISH PEERESS

Praises Dr. Williams's Pink Pills for Pale People.

From the London (Eng.) Star.

Though sharing with many of our old nobility their traditional reluctance to emerge from aristocratic privacy and come before the public as the subject of a newspaper article, the Right Hon. Lady Haldon has expressly permitted the publication of a statement recently made to a representative of the Star regarding her wonderful cure by Dr. Williams's Pink Pills.

Recognizing that the words of a titled lady in her position must necessarily bear great weight with the public; realizing that in respect to the ailments of the body, prince and peasant, lord and laborer are alike; earnestly desiring that the benefits she had derived from Dr. Williams's Pink Pills should be publicly acknowledged, in the hope that other sufferers might be influenced by her testimony, Lady Haldon waived all personal reluctance and told a story which cannot but impress every reader who considers for a moment the serious reasons which must have prompted a member of the British peerage to come forward in this way.

Lady Haldon's opening words emphasize the lofty motive with which she granted the interview.

"For the sake of all sufferers," said her ladyship, "I want to tell you what Dr. Williams's Pink Pills for Pale People did for me when I had given up all hope, even though, as was natural in my position, I had the best available professional treatment.

LADY HALDON.

"I have been a great traveller. Five years ago, when I was residing in Australia, my heart became seriously affected. Symptoms of advanced Anaemia showed themselves. One of the results was the most acute indigestion you can imagine. I suffered severely in the back and under the shoulder blades, but there were present in an aggravated form all the symptoms of indigestion including an especially severe oppression of the chest. I was most careful in my choice of food, but dieting brought no relief. Even after a glass of water my discomfort was almost unbearable. Food of any kind caused me such misery that I grew to have a strong aversion to it. I ate less and less, till I was practically starving myself. I could hardly get about, for in attempting to walk even the shortest distance the dreadful palpitations of the heart would make me feel as though I were suffocating.

As the anaemia developed, I grew still more alarmingly ill. I could not sleep at night. My whole system was deranged. My nerves broke down, my head ached constantly until I could only read by the aid of glasses.

Such suffering must have interfered with your enjoyment of life, Lady Haldon?

"It did, indeed, and it also took all the pleasure out of travel. When I was in Russia I really thought I was dying. I was ready to do anything or go anywhere to seek relief and release from anxiety. I had the advantage of the treatment of many leading physicians. My illness seemed so deeply rooted that I determined to go to Switzerland for a course of treatment at the Clinique de la Caroline, where I was, for a time, assiduously attended by physicians of European reputation.

"To attempt to enumerate the medical men who have prescribed for me at various times, unfortunately without any lasting success, would indeed be a lengthy task, and out-side the object of this interview. Suffice it to say that about August, 1903, after my return from Australia, I was nearly prostrate with one of my attacks. I was travelling by train, but felt too ill to read until casually picking up a small pamphlet referring to Dr. Williams's Pink Pills for Pale People, I became so interested in some cures mentioned therein that I determined to give a trial to the medicine which appeared to have effected such miracles.

"What arrested my attention was the straightforward simplicity of the stories. We are all human—all liable to the same complaints—and I found my sufferings were exactly like those of other women who had been cured. As I read the simple facts of their experience, I became convinced. I procured a supply of Dr. Williams's Pink Pills and commenced taking them as directed.

"Within a few weeks I was astonished at the change that had already taken place, and the great improvement that had resulted in so short a time. I procured further boxes of pills, and very soon I was delighted to find that all traces of my complaint had practically vanished.

"I could now walk moderate and even long distances with an entire freedom from pain. My appetite had returned with a heartiness and vigor that surprised me, and my general health was such as I had not enjoyed for many years.

"I have ever since made it a rule never to be without Dr. Williams's Pink Pills and both at home and abroad I find them to be my truest and best friends. Through their aid I have, at various times, in distant and out-of-the-way parts of the world, been able to give relief to sufferers. I remember how, when I was in Roustoff, South Russia, I met at the Hotel Continental, a poor, anaemic creature whose sufferings were terrible. I advised her to try Dr. Williams's Pink Pills, and gave her some from the supply which I always carry with me. To her great surprise and delight the pills speedily cured her, and she was so grateful to me that she gave me a beautiful Shake-ring as a keepsake. I treasure that ring," said Lady Haldon, impressively. "For I, too, know how to be grateful for relief from pain."

"Have I your permission, Lady Haldon," inquired the interviewer, "to publish these facts without reservation?"

"I shall be delighted if you will," her ladyship replied. "It gives me the greatest pleasure to testify as to the undoubted efficacy of Dr. Williams's Pink Pills for Pale People, and you have my full permission to publish my tribute to their merits."

Previous to his withdrawal, the journalist was entrusted with a portrait of the beautiful Lady Haldon, bearing her autograph, which he was desired to present to the Dr. Williams Medicine Company. A portrait sketch from the photograph is published with this interview by her ladyship's express permission.

FROM "THE HAT."

Silver Coinage, Home-Seekers, Wretched Hotels.

Medicine Hat, N.W.T., July 16th.—A further acquaintance with conditions here developes the fact that there is a deplorable dearth of cash in circulation, owing to the fact that no cattle had been sold for the last two years. Shipments were resumed since my arrival here, and it is expected that before winter, when the bulk of the surplus cattle will have been marketed, there will be a material improvement in conditions.

The crops are reported in excellent condition all through Alberta and in the region tributary to this town, but as this is a dry country, there is but little agriculture as yet. There is a limitless expanse of fertile land, much of which may in time be irrigated; but without irrigation farming will be an uncertain proposition. As the fall of the Saskatchewan is very slight and the general level of the country on either side is 150 to 200 feet above the river, no water can be raised to the highlands except by large and costly enterprises, which may develop some time in the future.

The mammoth irrigation system of the Canadian Pacific Railroad Company will irrigate a large area of land in the 170-mile stretch between Calgary and Medicine Hat, but it will use up so much of the flow of the river that the country tributary to the latter and east of it is likely to remain a pastoral region.

Considering the scarcity of ready cash it is no wonder that the schemes of the banking element to drive out the American money in circulation prove futile. As in every country, the people are very glad to get cash in any form, whether it is the coin of the Straits Settlements, United States, Great Britain, or the native article. The banks here discount American silver twenty per cent., but the people take it at par, and keep what they can get in circulation rather than sell it to the banks at four-fifths of its value. So long as the American and other foreign money circulates at par it is worth par performing in full all the functions of the very best money. If this foreign money could be driven out, this country would be in a deplorable condition indeed.

The only objection raised is one of sentiment. Some of the people say: "The Americans will not take our money at par in their own country, and we shouldn't take theirs if we didn't need it."

That is a sectional matter. Canadian coin commonly goes at par in the Northwestern States, and the people are only too glad to get it. They are forced to do business with a small amount of cash and a large volume of credit, and if there is any part of the United States where the people refuse to take Canadian money at par, the more fools they. They are the losers. The idea conveyed by the Monetary Times that in using American money the Canadians are conferring a favor on the Americans is the exact reverse of the facts. Every dollar that passes from the United States to Canada is a loss to the former and a gain to the latter. The use of all the money is so much gain to Canada at the expense of the Americans. The greatest possible favor to the Americans would be such a sane legislation as would deprive the Canadians of the use and benefit of this money, and give it back to the Americans who are seriously damaged by its loss. The more of it that flows into this country the more Americans will move over here to get the use of it instead of the credit system that is left to them.

That the effort of the banks to drive it out by discount has proved a failure is proved by the latest session of the contractionists in Parliament. The new plan is for the banks to take the American coin at par, and as fast as they get it ship it back to the United States. A most intelligent and beneficent proposal surely. While on the one hand the Government is expending large sums of money to attract immigrants of almost any kind Galicians, Doukabors, or anything but Chinese—on the other hand it is attempting to destroy the greatest drawing card for the most intelligent and desirable people, those who know that the place to make money is where the most cash is in circulation. Can the Canadian mint turn out an adequate supply of silver coin, from $12 to $15 per capita, instead of the beggarly $1.20 per capita of Canadian silver now in use, the wisest legislation for the prosperity of this country, and to accelerate its development, would be a law making all American and other foreign coin at the same approximate ratio and on the decimal system a legal tender in Canada.

This was the policy of the United States in the good old times before the government was dominated by the money power. Recognizing the evil effects of the shortage of their money, the Spanish milled dollar was made the unit of value and a legal tender, which proved to be the great good of the country and its people. There was no concern as to whether the people of Spain or its colonies accepted American money at par. That idea is an appeal to the meanest and narrowest traits of human nature. The idea was to get the money, no matter where it was coined, for the welfare of the American people.

Until the contractionists got the upper hand, the importance of an adequate supply of the precious metals from which to make the counters that effect exchanges of commodities was so well recognized that the miner was favored above other producers. While all documents affecting rights and titles to real estate have been of most fearful, wonderful and formidable construction, the crudest composition of the prospector, tacked to a stake or tree, or left in a tomato can in a pile of stones, of which a copy was placed on record, was and is sufficient in law to hold his claim. He was and is given rights over the agriculturist, for it he discovers mineral on the homestead claim of the latter before patent, and stakes a mining claim thereon, the latter held good. The legal rights of the miner still hold, but the value has been largely destroyed by the crusade against the use of silver as money. To off-set this handicap and encourage the miner to keep busy, the Canadian Government now pays a bounty on the production of lead.

In the light of the demonstrated fact that the people must and will have silver money, and will use it freely and gladly in the promotion of their business and industry no matter what country it comes from, how much better it would be to give them an adequate supply coined from the native product than to make these ridiculous attempts, at the behest of a few interested parties, to rob them of that which they have. And how much better to issue an order to the home producers of silver for enough of the white metal to bring the per capita of coin up to the strictly safe and conservative allowance in use by the French and Dutch, than to stimulate lead mining at the expense of all other producers. The legitimate encouragement of silver mining, with lead as a by-product, while vastly benefitting the whole country and all its industries by an adequate supply of coin, would be the most beneficent action possible to the Government. The bounty system, whether applied to lead or any other special product, is a relic of barbarism, grossly unfair, and radically wrong in principle. Why should the farmer be taxed to pay tribute to lead miners? The farmer has as much right to a bounty as has the lead miner or any other producer. And the lead bounty is costly by unnecessary.

While a good many homeseekers take a look at this region, the great majority go into the Black belt, where irrigation is unnecessary. That is the kind of country they understand, and they hope to profit by the boom in land values that will accompany the construction of the Grand Trunk Pacific and the Canadian Northern extension to Edmonton. As that region is not dependent upon the sale of cattle, and receives the bulk of the money brought in by immigrants from the United States and elsewhere, the financial stringency probably does not reach so far. Calgary also gets a tremendous business during the immigration season, and seems to be booming. The building permits for the first six months of this year aggregate nearly $500,000.

Vancouver is said to be growing rapidly, and is expected to have a population of 100,000 in ten years. This is a reasonable expectation. It is the engorging trade of the seaport that builds the city. Seattle, which had a population of about 3,500 at the time of my advent in the wild and wooly west, is now figured at 175,000 to 185,000 souls. That dwarfs all our attempts at city building in the interior. Victoria, which shrunk by thousands while Vancouver was making its first growth, has taken a fresh start. Its residents say it has 30,000 population. Of course it has no rapid growth in prospect, and what it has, like that of Los Angeles, is based on its climate and delightful environments.

There is one urgent need in every town I have visited in this region, and that is for a decently managed hotel, where the grafting disposition is not so prominent as here. At this leading hotel, for a flat rate of $2 50 per day, or $77.50 per month, the table would disgrace any cheap hotel in Ontario. While fresh fruits are abundant and reasonable in price, the guests of this house are not pampered with such luxuries. We are supplied with canned vegetables and fruits. They keep some small oranges hidden, and not mentioned on the menu, so that no guests who do not accidentally discover the scheme will think of asking for them. The run of the Chinese cookery here is such as to soon ruin the internal economy of one who is not taking such strenuous exercise as range riding. There is a marked indifference to the welfare of the guests, and few of them are acquainted with the manager or proprietor of this, or the Lethbridge or Lethbridge, or the Alberta at Calgary; each the crack hotel of the town.
