The Prairie City.

(From the Independent to the Champion.)

Winnipeg, November 20th, 1908.

The traveller who enters western Canada from the south or east, almost invariably passes through the chiefest gateway to this part of the continent. It is hardly possible to do other way to do so, if he would be made that will afford the most accurate and so pleasant a means of measuring the development of the countries of this remarkable region known as western Canada. Out of the prairie Winnipeg has sprung from a tiny trading post, has mounted and stands as the living evidence of the wonderful fertility of the prairie soil, a magnificent tribute to the spirit of progress and good upon the people of Western Canada and of the prosperity that follows in their wake. One hundred and twenty-five thousand people are now within the Board asphalted business streets of this lavish length across what a few years ago was a prairie wilderness, wide and smooth streets make up a residential section in beauty comparable with many cities in the south. Splendid stores, fine banks plentiful in number and in their capacity to meet the financial needs of the city. Warehouses Thoroughly equipped to serve the large mercantile territory of which it is the centre, at service, too, is a public school system that affords opportunities for education. Parks, libraries in short all things that go to make up a well organized city, has been gathered in Winnipeg, and made a place that in 1870 was not in the collection of a few score had a population of 25,000 souls that clearly set Winnipeg is optimistic, and its interests are so closely allied to the progress and general prosperity of Western Canada.

Winnipeg's new $250,000 High School is one of the finest in the country, and is in cases of fire the most advanced in the past week a meeting of the board of underwriters gathered here to witness a practical test. The civic officials who were present were greatly impressed by the test made which proves to be a pressure places Winnipeg in the best fire protected city in Canada.

The annual convention of the Municipalities of Manitoba, which opened here on Nov. 24, 25 and 26, was a success. The programme was a very important discussions and the delegates and the election of officers for the ensuing year.

Winnipeg's bank clearings for the month of this year can be compared with any other bank clearings are comparatively small. The Winnipeg bank clearings for the week ending last Thursday were $14,[illegible] as compared with $14,8[illegible] and $14,3[illegible] in the banks of Toronto.
