The Canadian Champion
MILTON, March 12, 1925.

The following appeared last week in the bulletin of the Canadian Weekly Newspaper Association, headed "The Biter Bitten": "Members of the C. W. N. A. in every province have suffered more or less from the strenuous efforts of printing solicitors from the big cities to secure printing orders for the small towns. Apparently some of the smaller town printers are getting busy and soliciting work in the cities. Recently an organization in Toronto passed a resolution deploring the fact that many Toronto business concerns were getting their printing done in the smaller towns. Toronto people are great howlers when they have to pay a little of their own medicine. It's good to know that they are being dosed. Milton is constantly canvassed by agents of Toronto printers who get many orders from business men who expect their neighbors to 'buy at home.' They fall easy victims to the glib canvassers, and pay higher prices for inferior work than the local printers would charge them for the best."

County Judge's Criminal Court.

On Monday Wray Smith, a young man, formerly of Oakville, was tried by Judge Elliot, on the charge of stealing $98 from Miss Lydia Whitfield in Trafalgar, in February, 1921. At that time Miss Whitfield was teaching in Trafalgar, near the Sixteen Mile Creek bridge on Dundas Street. Smith was staying in the house in which she boarded, stole the money from her room and disappeared. He went to Mount Albert, where he worked under an assumed name for a while, then he went to Toronto, where he lived with a woman named Coyne, having assumed her name. He was arrested in Toronto, brought to Oakville and committed for trial by Police Magistrate Shields. A number of witnesses gave evidence on Monday. Smith was convicted and sentenced to two years in the Kingston penitentiary. He has a wife and two children, who he has supported them for some time. He is an old offender, convicted in 1917 at Burlington of theft, and again at Oakville; also of burglary at Oakville, sentence two years in penitentiary, and of forgery in Saskatchewan, sentence not learned by Champion reporter.

Live Stock Judging.

Halton's Annual Live Stock Judging for Junior Farmers was held on Friday. Thirty-three boys took part in the competition. The prizes consisted of five registered animals donated by the following parties:

Shorthorn Heifer, donated by Duncan Campbell, Moffat, Ont.

Shropshire or Oxford Ewe, donated by McCann Bros., Milton.

Yorkshire Sow, donated by W. A. Irving, Tansley.

Yorkshire Sow, donated by J. Vaughan Gurney, Tansley.

Yorkshire Sow, donated by C. H. Jarvis, Milton.

Winners of the coveted prize were:

Hector Worstold, Campbellville, R. R. 1, Shorthorn heifer.

Robert Croft, Rockwood, R. R. 2, Yorkshire sow.

Frank Brown, Norval, R. R. 1, Oxford ewe.

Frank Stark, Milton, Yorkshire sow.

Stanley Chisholm, Milton, R. R. 2, Yorkshire sow.

This was a very keen competition and the following prominent men handled the different classes:

R. S. Stevenson, Dairy cattle.
J. A. Carroll, Hereford heifer.
J. F. Whitelock, Berkshire sows.
Mr. Page, Hampshire ewes.
J. E. Brethour, Yorkshire sows.
R. H. Harding, Oxford ewes.
J. Gardhouse, heavy horses.

The competition was under the direction of R. R. Fleming, Agricultural Representative, and his assistant, Mr. Wildman.

MILTON HORTICULTURAL SOCIETY

The Milton Horticultural Society has arranged for a series of illustrated talks on Horticulture. These talks are free and the Society hopes they will be well attended by not only the people of our town, but from the surrounding country. The society is offering two options the year, any one of which is well worth the membership price of One Dollar. Preserve the list that you may make your choice. A list of speakers will be made when the date is called on you.

CURED BY ACCIDENT.

Cures Accomplished Which Medical Skill Has Been Unable to Effect.

The remarkable case of Mr. W. G. Harbord, whose memory was restored by the kick of a horse, is the latest addition to a long list of cases in which accidents have accomplished cures which medical skill has been unable to effect.

A curious story of a similar kind was told some time ago by Maj.-Gen. Maxwell, of Tiverton, says The Boy.

It is claimed, he said, eight or ten officers quartered near Lahore went out hawking ravine deer and obara, and drinking a run Col. Fisher's horse bolted over some rough ground, and he with him.

The only injury he received was a [illegible] memory. We got a hackney and he rested on it for three days, when he was getting better. We asked him what he was doing, he answered, "Why, we were going out to shoot ravine deer, and I want to know what we are doing about it." As we approached Lahore he said, "I should like to know what I am to do." We consulted together and insisted on his going home. A another officer took his place. By the time we had reached Lahore it was dusk, and we had lost our way over a heap of stones by the side of the road. We had to bivouac, unharnessed the horses, and wait for daylight. Early next morning we found ourselves within a few miles of the place we had left the day before. We had been driving in a circle. We had to wait there for the horses to be fed and watered, and then we had to drive back to Lahore. A another officer took his place. Early next morning we found ourselves within a few miles of the place we had left the day before. We had been driving in a circle. We had to wait there for the horses to be fed and watered, and then we had to drive back to Lahore.

He was picked up in a dazed condition and on recovering his senses he remembered that he had accepted the invitation to shoot ravine deer, but beyond that he could not remember anything about it. In the course of the evening his memory returned, but he was still dazed and unable to talk.

The next day he was the case of a Parsee Student, who was knocked down by a horse which was being ridden by a native and rendered unconscious for several days. On recovering his senses he was absolutely blank as regards his past life. He had forgotten his name, his home, his friends, his trade, and even his own language. He was picked up in a dazed condition and on recovering his senses he remembered that he had accepted the invitation to shoot ravine deer, but beyond that he could not remember anything about it. In the course of the evening his memory returned, but he was still dazed and unable to talk.

In his alarm he rushed to his father's house, but his father was not at home. He was detained and questioned by the police, who, finding that he was a stranger, locked him up for four years when, on his release, he was found to be in the same condition as when he was picked up. He was alarmed and ran away, and again until he was completely restored.

SHAVES FOR SHIPS.

Millions Spent Annually Cleaning Ships.

No fewer than one hundred and ten tons of live mussels have been scraped off the bottom of the R.M.S. Glamorganshire. This amazing quantity of shellfish had accumulated in a period of eighteen months, during which the vessel had been lying idle.

The money which molluscs cost steamship companies must run into many millions annually, for even when a ship is in constant use these pests are always collecting on that part of her which is under water.

Barnacles and mussels are the worst enemies of the ship-owner. They collect with amazing rapidity, and as soon as one layer has covered the submerged surface, another forms on top of it.

The first sign that a ship is becoming "foul" is a decrease in speed. After being laid up for only six months a vessel that is good for eighteen knots, when clean, will do barely fifteen.

To the big Atlantic liners speed is everything. They have their mail contracts to fulfil, and, in any case, their speed is their great advertisement. If they are allowed to go foul, they not only lose in this respect, but they burn much more fuel, and there is increased wear and tear of machinery, extra wages for the crews, and extra food and attention for passengers during a longer voyage.

A crack liner is cleaned every few months. She has to be unloaded, dry-docked, cleaned, coated with anti-fouling fluid, and undocked. The expense of this is enormous. There is not only the loss of her enormously valuable time, but also the payment of her crews' wages, which goes on just as usual.

Once it used to take a whole fortnight to clean a ship, but now the time has been cut down to about three days. Gangs of cleaners relieve one another and the work goes on night and day until finished.

Many attempts have been made to perfect an anti-fouling composition, and hundreds have been produced. Some of them are of great value, and enable ships to remain clean for a considerable period. But I believe I am right in stating that the perfect anti-fouling composition has yet to be invented.

The cleaning is done with long steel chisel-bars. Then the whole bottom of the ship is scrubbed, and finally several coats of anti-fouling composition are applied with long handled brushes.

How Far Can You Walk?

For the average amateur mountain-climber in the Alps, an ascent of 3,000 ft. in a day's tramp is looked upon as the ordinary thing. An experienced mountaineer in perfect condition can climb 7,000 feet.

While one constantly reads about the amazing feats performed by specially trained athletes, it is more interesting to learn that an ordinary man in good average health can, or does, achieve in a day.

He ought to be able to walk from twenty to twenty-five miles without undue fatigue. Many policemen cover twenty miles daily on their beat.

A Bigger program of farm development

THIS is the time of year when many farmers contemplate greater farm development—purchasing more stock, more seed, increasing acreage, buying additional machinery.

To go through with such a progressive program, borrowing money to cover initial costs is usually necessary.

Securing a loan of this kind is a simple matter for farmers of sound character. All that is required is an interview with the local branch manager of the Bank of Toronto. He will be glad to listen to your problems, give advice, and lend every reasonable financial assistance in his power.
