"TURTLE-SHELL"

Romance and Adventure In Quest of Hawksbill Turtle.

The tortoise-shell combs, cigarette-cases, vanity boxes, powder bowls, and other articles now so popular have a romantic story behind them.

In the warm waters round the island of Ceylon, says a writer in Answers, in the clear blue sea near the north coast of Australia, and in the white-capped waves of North American waters lives the hawksbill turtle. He is usually a big fellow, with yellow-grey flippers protruding, before and behind, from under a glorious golden-streaked brown roof. The expression on his face is perpetually sad—which is not surprising.

For he has probably seen many of his family follow each other to oblivion. A boat containing a man with a cord lasso will come along and hang about his neighborhood until some unfortunate relative unsuspectingly swims into sight, head well above water, slow-moving and placid. The man with the lasso waits till the turtle is sufficiently near.

Then he "rings" him in true rodeo style—from which moment Mr. Turtle may bid farewell to this life. The hunter takes his prize ashore and lays him on his back on the beach, thus rendering him powerless to move. Then he kills him and scrapes out the shell.

Most valuable of the hawksbill shells is the rich blonde transparent gold, vaguely veined and flecked. Next in value is the demi-blonde kind, which many consider even more beautiful than the blonde. It is a richly mottled mixture of deep brown and gold, and is a much bolder contrast than the other. Finally, there is the dark jaspe shell.

At the factories the shells are taken to a grading department, and then sent out into the manufacturing rooms. To make them sticky and plastic they are heated in ovens to a temperature of about 212 degrees Fahrenheit, when they can be then built up to any thickness and moulded to any shape required.

For thickness the shells are pressed together—they require no glue or gum to make them stick. Their own natural stickiness, produced through heat, is sufficient. Shaped and moulded, they are allowed to cool. Then they are given a first polish with oil and pumice, followed by a rubbing with tripoli powder.

The final gleaming gloss is imparted with chamois leather. If inlaying is necessary, the shells are cut with special fretsaws to specified designs and stuck to a wood base together with the inlaid metals.

A hint as to the care of your tortoise-shell things. Never expose them to very great heat, and never wash them with soda.

HALTON COUNTY ANNUAL RE-UNION IN REGINA, SASK.

Old friendships were renewed and new friendships made when the sons and daughters of Halton county, Ontario, gathered in their annual reunion banquet at the Champlain Hotel, Regina, Sask., Tuesday night of last week.

Jollity and good-fellowship marked the evening as a delightful program of community songs, led by M. Simpson, interspersed the dinner. This was followed by a number of toasts, solos and recitations.

Percy E. Reid, president of the Halton County Association, proposed the toast to the King. Dr. H. M. Stephens in proposing a toast to Halton County, discussed the industrial development of their home county. In past years Dr. Stephens has delivered several addresses on the historical and geographical aspects of Halton, and knowing his intimate knowledge of the county, the guests were delighted to hear him speak once more.

Mr. Stephens told something of the political history of the county, the number of parliamentarians it had given to both federal and provincial houses, and that at the present time three of the members of the Saskatchewan legislative assembly came from Halton. He explained how, in the very early days, Halton county had belonged to the original county of York and was a part of the great Indian reserve Nassagaweya.

He told of the mills and factories along the Credit River, the great flour, woollen and paper mills that were established as far back as 1826, 1828 and 1829. The county was also noted for its limestone quarries, its berries, fruit, grains, light horses and perhaps most of all, for its prize-winning Shorthorn cattle.

Petit, one of the founders of the Dominion Shorthorn Association, was instrumental in bringing in cattle from Scotland and helped to produce the fine Shorthorn cattle that have been shipped from Halton county to all parts of the United States. Mrs. A. C. Shaw responded in a few well-chosen words.

Mr. Reed then introduced a number of old timers that were attending the banquet. Joe Craddock, the oldest gentleman, was born there 78 years ago and came west 48 years ago. Mrs H. A. Reed, the oldest lady, born 1850, lived many years in Halton County and came west in 1913. D. C. Reid, of Balcarres, came west from Halton in 1882. He was on the first train to cross the Louise bridge at Winnipeg and went to Brandon, where the rails were laid on the ice before any bridge was completed. The trains crossed on the ice until April, when the water covered them. He arrived in Regina ahead of the steel by ox team from Brandon, returning after the Y was completed so that the engine could be turned around.

Miss Jean Brown of Regina College, entertained the guests with a number of excellent readings. Mrs. D. R. Lamont sang several Scotch and Irish folk songs

W. J. Moffat, Moose Jaw, proposed a toast to "Saskatchewan, Our Province." Mr. Moffat took the place of D. S. Hutcheon, M.L.A., Arm River, who could not attend because of pressing duties at the Parliament buildings. N. L. Given, M.L.A., Rosetown, responded saying that although Halton was their birth place and they expressed pride in it, still Saskatchewan is their present home. He dwelt on its great opportunities.

B. F. McGregor, M.L.A., Gravelbourg, proposed the toast to the ladies and Mrs. F. L. McCargar, Moose Jaw, responded with a good deal of Irish wit in evidence. Mrs. McCargar at the last moment took the place of Mrs. H. M. Stephens, who was ill.

Dr. S. H. Corrigan, Lampman, the honorary president, although unable to be present, sent beautiful deep coral corsages of carnations for the ladies.

At the conclusion of the banquet the election of officers was held. The officers for the coming year are: Honorary president, Dr. S. H. Corrigan; president, Mr. P. E. Reid; vice-president, R. J. Moffat; treasurer, Mrs. J. J. Wilson; secretary, Miss Winifred Wilson; executive, B. F. McGregor, M.L.A., L. Spence, L. C. Stephens, Mrs. R. J. Moffat, Mrs. Geo. Speers, Mrs. V. G. Mason, Mrs. J. R. Petrie and W. Moffat, Moose Jaw.

Those in attendance were as follows: Mrs. H. A. Reed, Regina; Dr. and Mrs. H. M. Stephens, Regina; Mrs. Margaret Curry, Regina; Mrs. R. E. Chapman, Moose Jaw; Margaret E. Brown, Moose Jaw; Miss Winnifred Wilson, Regina; Mabel M. G. McCargar, Moose Jaw; Elizabeth Spence, Regina; J. Spence, Regina; Ena Wilson, Regina; J. J. Wilson, Regina; Mary M. Lamont, Regina; Wm. R. Milne, Balcarres; Mabel Moffat, Moose Jaw; W. J. Moffat, Regina; Jennie C. Moffat, Regina; R. J. Moffat, Regina; Mr. and Mrs. Harvey E. Cartwright Regina; Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Wilson, Regina; Archie Reid, Balcarres; D. C. Reid, Balcarres; M. Simpson, Regina, G. Speers, Regina; R. A. Speers, Regina; W. G. Copeland, Regina; Mr. and Mrs. J. E. McGregor, Regina; Florence McGregor, Regina; B. F. McGregor, Vanguard; Mr. and Mrs. F. L. McCargar, Moose Jaw; Mrs. C. Given, Delisle; Wm. D. Donaldson, Regina; Evelyn Donaldson, Regina; Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Petrie, Regina; Mr and Mrs. L. C. Stephens, Regina; Mr. and Mrs. D. Reid, Milestone; Mr. and Mrs. V. G. Mason, Regina; M. Jean Brown, Regina; Mrs. A. C. Shaw, Regina; Percy Reed, Regina.—Regina Daily Post.

Be a Bass.

If you have a good bass or low contralto voice, now is your opportunity of achieving fame.

There is at present a remarkable dearth of really good low bass and contralto voices, due possibly to the tendency of singing teachers to train pupils' voices to the higher registers

According to a musical authority, it may be that there is always a risk in training a voice downward of doing damage to the voice; but there is no risk in training it upward.

England, says an Old Country newspaper, has no basses with the same quality of tone as those to be heard in Russia. Although there are five or six pupils at the Royal Academy of Music who can produce a top "D" or "E," those who can produce the low "E" are rare.

THE DRUG HABIT.

It is estimated that there are 8,000 addicts of opium in Canada, and only 15 per cent., or about 1,200, of them are Chinese.

Court proceedings reveal that $30 an ounce for morphine and $25 an ounce for cocaine is often paid. Judge Widdifield recently sentenced a man to 3 years in Portsmouth Penitentiary at Kingston for having nine pounds of opium in his possession, and it was estimated that the retail value of the drug was between $50,000 and $100,000.

Drug addicts are very hard to cure of the drug habit, and there is no hospital to care for them in the initial stages when cure is possible. Mothers, teachers, and all who mingle with young people should be alert to the dangers of the drug habit for a drug addict may be the result of only ten days use of the drug. Judge Jean Morris of New York says that cures do not amount to one in 200 victims.

International co-operation has been undertaken to combat the traffic in drugs. Fourteen nations have entered into a formal agreement for closer co-operation among Government officials engaged in combatting the traffic in narcotic drugs as an aid in curbing their international sale.

For the stricter control of this illicit traffic, it is suggested that the drug enforcement officials of the various nations arrange a direct exchange of information to include evidence with reference to persons engaged in the narcotic traffic, photographs, criminal records, finger-prints, Bertillon measurements, description of their methods of operating, places from which they have operated, the partners they have worked with, and other useful data. These exchanges would be carried on by cable message, and by mail, and the co-operation would comprise detective work and investigation. The countries in the agreement as yet are Great Britain, United States, France, Belgium, Italy, The Netherlands, Germany, Czechoslovakia, Denmark, Greece, Japan, Poland, Spain and Turkey.

NATURE'S NIGHTMARE.

"Aye-Ayes" In London Zoo Weird Creatures.

The Irishman who, visiting a Zoo, saw a weird creature and exclaimed, "Shure, there's no such animal alive!" should see the Aye-Ayes at the London Zoo. It is difficult to believe that these weird creatures are actually alive. They are literally "living nightmares," says an article in Tit-Bits.

In size the Aye-Aye may be compared with a large cat with an enormous bushy tail. The head resembles that of a bat with large naked ears, and the body is covered with long fur, blackish brown in color, streaked here and there with whites. Its hands and feet are furnished with enormous talon-like claws. One finger, that corresponding to the human middle finger, is remarkable, being of great length and very slender. This finger is used for conveying food to the mouth.

The Aye-Ayes live in Madagascar, robs birds' nests, eats honey out of the comb, and is very fond of beetle grubs. It has brought egg-eating to perfection. The smallest of holes is picked at one end by means of the long middle finger and then the same finger is inserted and withdrawn with lightning rapidity until the whole contents of the egg have been transferred to its mouth without a drop being wasted.

LEGISLATIVE COMEDY

Results of Freak Legislation—Fines for Divorce Suitable for Comic Opera.

The law just passed by the Senate of Utah limiting the height of women's heels to a modest inch and a half is matched by a recent Act which makes it a misdemeanor for a Maryland woman to appear in a public place in a hat with a greater diameter than ten inches. But such samples of freak legislation are quite thrown into the shade by many others familiar enough across the border.

Thus it is not long ago consternation was spread among the young people of Texas by the publication of a new edict making it unlawful for any person to practice tickling another person.

"It shall be unlawful," the ordinance runs, "for any person to punch another with thumb, finger, or stick, or other thing in the manner commonly known as 'tickling.' Any person convicted of this offence shall be fined a sum not exceeding $100, and shall stand committed to goal until the said fine and costs are paid."

One can sympathize with the edict which forbids a Chicago man to slap his wife, under a penalty of a fine ranging from one dollar for a smack with the left hand to five dollars for a slap while sitting down; though not with the husband who recently qualified for the whole series, and handed over his eleven dollars "like a man," declaring that it was "cheap at the price."

But what are we to say to the law that inflicts a heavy fine for a kiss, which may be as innocent as, no doubt, it is pleasant, says a writer in the Glasgow Evening News. Thus, at Rochester, N.Y., one Charles Drobble recently paid $400 for kissing Mary Himple, his clerk, once only. Joseph Branigan was fined $11.50 for kissing a pretty widow of his acquaintance on the cheek; while Marshall McDaniels got off with a $150 fine for kissing Sallie Jones 150 times—a modest dollar a kiss.

In Milan, too, over 500 couples were haled before the courts last year for saluting each other labially in the streets or open places.

The bachelor is the unhappy butt of many of these freak laws. Thus in Maine all the unmarried men over thirty years of age are taxed $10 a year, the sum to be used as a pension fund for spinsters.

In the Argentine all single men between twenty and eighty must pay a heavy monthly fine until they do their duty by putting a wedding-ring on a girl's finger. And in Illinois a bill was recently introduced to prohibit bachelors from being called "Mister," their first and last names only being used "so that no one can be deceived."

In Illinois, too, any woman whose hatpins exceed nine inches in length must take out a permit, "as for any other deadly weapon," and, before marrying, any man must make an affidavit that he has not been intoxicated more than twice during the previous year. Utah makes it a misdemeanor not to bathe at least once a week. Oregon has a law compelling hotels to provide "nine-foot bedsheets of linen or good cotton"; and Texas makes it a criminal offence to swear over the telephone, and a "penitentiary crime" to steal a chicken.

In at least two states—California and Illinois—the campaign against the masculine flirt has taken such an acute form that "professional flirt-catcher" in the guise of attractive girls, are appointed to act as decoys to the unfortunate Lothario, and to hand him over "hot-handed" to the custody of the detectives who are their shadows.

But it is in the realm of divorce that the United States excels in legislative comedy. Indeed, the ease with which the shackles of matrimony can be shaken off across the Atlantic seems more suited for comic-opera than for the Law Courts.

One woman petitioner secured her divorce because her husband had "dared to remove his beard." "He has not enough dignity to pass as my husband," she pleaded, "unless his weak little chin is covered up and hidden away by a beard."

Among other grounds for recent divorces have been "the husband's pernicious habit of snoring, which could be heard several blocks away;" and which made sleep impossible for his wife; and a wife's equally pernicious habit of "leaving her bed in the middle of the night, planting herself in a rocking-chair and singing at the top of her voice, 'Oh, won't it be joyful when we meet to part no more'."

Record Breaking Bridge.

The highest suspension bridge in the world, with an altitude of 1,052 feet is being constructed over the top of the Royal Gorge, near Canon City, Colorado. The length of the main span will be 880 feet, and the total length 1,260 feet. Steel towers on each side of the gorge rise 150 feet, and two cables, each 9 inches in diameter, will have a strength of 120,000 pounds per square each. When completed this suspension bridge will be twice the height of its nearest rival, a bridge in the south of France.

Heavy Sarcasm.

The street car was already well filled when a very stout gentleman pushed in and sat down, part of his ample proportions falling on a very thin and rather sour-looking gentleman on his right.

The latter glared at him. "They ought to charge by weight in these cars," he said.

"In which case," was the genial response, "it wouldn't be worth while stopping to pick you up."

EVERY BELL TELEPHONE IS A LONG DISTANCE STATION

Ready Now For Bigger Business

Long Distance telephone facilities were never so complete — so effective, speedy and far-reaching as they are today.

Our 1929 building programme added about 14,000 miles of talking channels to our lines. The standard of service was improved —is steadily improving.

And it costs less than ever before, because on January 1st reduced rates on calls to points 75 to 800 miles distant became effective—the second reduction within a year.

Why not lay your plans now to take advantage of this speedy, dependable, time-saving service?
