BURNING QUESTION

Here's the way a writer in The Financial Post sums up the prosects for our three major heating fuels:

Oil consumption has jumped 79 per cent since 1946 and now helps heat one out of every six Canadian homes. Oil burner sales last year showed a 69 per cent jump over 1948.

Coal interests are increasing mine mechanization, offering new automatic heat-controlled furnaces with burning efficiencies up to 75-89 per cent, have a coal-fired gas turbine engine under way.

Natural gas, within the next two to five years, could sweep one-quarter of Canada's population and a big segment of industry into its market orbit via big new pipeline projects. Costs would be competitive with the other fuels.

Disease of Sled Dogs

Epidemics among sled dogs in the Canadian Arctic have been investigated by Science Service workers in the Divison of Animal Pathology, Canada Department of Agriculture, and it has been shown that wild animals are the reservoirs for the rabies disease and that dogs become infected from this source.
