

Georgetown Bach Chorale to sing Advent Canatas

Each season presents us with a distinct mood and sensibility. The latter part of autumn does not disappoint with its impending darkness and gathering gloom. Liturgically speaking, Advent falls in the later part of this period and dispels the darkness with the anticipation of the birth of Christ, thus bringing hope at the bleakest time of year.

The Georgetown Bach Chorale has just the remedy for you— a complete concert of Advent music to help brighten and give meaning to this inward time of year.

The performance will take place at St. John's United Church, 11 Guelph St., Georgetown on Saturday, Nov. 28 at 8 p.m.

The program will consist of rarely performed choruses, arias and duets from wonderful Cantatas such as Bach's rendering of Nun komme der Heiden Heiland and Christum air sollen Loben.

The performance not only highlights these wonderful sublime sounds in the beautifully renovated sanctuary of St. John's United Church, but the orchestra, consisting of five strings, two oboes and two harp-sichord, also plays an important role with tremendous concerto like displays in the orchestral texture.

Local protégé Matthew Pope, now in his first year in the doctoral program at Western University, will be featured in Bach's Double Concerto in C minor alongside Artistic Director Ron Greidanus.
