A Few Verses Dedicated to Those Who Try to Live Up to the "Golden Rule."

Sometimes I wonder why it is,
I have so many friends,
And why they bring so many flowers
To gladden my week-ends.

First came tulips by the dozen,
Then peonies by the score,
Then roses by the armful,
Always someone at the door.

I don't know what I ever did
To merit so much care,
It seems like a wasting sweetness
Upon the desert air.

When I was young and well and strong,
It seems to me I never thought
Of doing all these lovely things,
I guess I just forgot.

Now when I'm old and ill and weak,
And can't go round to see
The ones with whom I used to chum,
Well! they just come to me.

I really don't deserve it,
But that's the Christian way,
Returning good for evil,
All through the live long day.
