Green is the new gold for Chevrolet Volt

The next-generation 2016 Chevrolet Volt was awarded Green Car of the Year award by U.S. publication, Green Car Journal, at the Los Angeles Auto Show.

This is the second time the Volt has won the award.

The Volt, which started arriving in dealerships this fall, also won the award when it debuted in 2010 as a 2011 model. Green Car Journal praised the Volt's increased range, all-new propulsion system and bold design. The Green Car of the Year award is determined by an 11-member panel, and is based on fuel efficiency, Environmental Protection Agency and California Air Resources Board certifications, performance and affordability. Other criteria include availability and accessibility.

The other finalists were the Audi A3 e-tron, Honda Civic, Hyundai Sonata and Toyota Prius. According to independent surveys, Volt owners are the most satisfied in the industry, and 70 per cent of those owners are new to General Motors.
