THE BALL.

The ball which took place last night, and the series of entertainments which it was intended to inaugurate, were but the revival of a programme under consideration last year, but which had to be abandoned for reasons that need not now be mentioned. Shortly after the opening of the year 1868 several of our most prominent citizens, including his Worship the Mayor and our city representatives conceived the idea of extending the courtesies of the city to his Excellency the Governor-General, and to the members of both Houses of Parliament. Before the plans were matured, however, a melancholy event plunged the city into mourning, and the project was, for the time, postponed.

The arrival of Sir John Young, as our new Governor-General, set the friends of the scheme again in motion. All of our city members were visited by his Worship the Mayor, and all, together with a number of other gentlemen of the city, entered warmly into the spirit of the undertaking. Meetings were held in the City Hall, a large committee was formed, and James Fraser, Esq., was chosen secretary; and, with little trouble, something over two thousand dollars was subscribed towards the fund for the purpose set forth, and much more might have been raised, had it been deemed necessary.

The following is a list of the subscribers, who contributed sums varying from twenty to one hundred dollars:—

LIST OF SUBSCRIBERS.

Hon Jas Skead, J M Currier, M P, Thos Reynolds, Esq, E McGillivray, J B Taylor, Messrs Bronson & Weston, J R Booth, N S Blaisdell & Co, E B Eddy, Alonzo Wright, M P, Mr Keefer, Mackay Estate, David Moore, James D Slater, H J Friel, Mayor, H O Burritt, G E Desbarats, Robert Skead, Thos McKay, Magee & Russell, W R Thistle, G W Eaton, R W Cruice, C T & H N Bate, Thos D Tims, Thos Hunton & Wm Hunton, A Bowie, B A Bank Note Company, Robert Lyon, M P, Samuel Christie, R S Cassells, A C Kelty, Andrew Drummond, Roderick Ryan, Dr Hill, W McKay Wright, Dr Grant, M P, James Cotton.

It was now decided that the series of entertainments to be given during the present Session of Parliament should commence with a grand ball, at which his Excellency the Governor-General and Lady Young, with the staff, the Senators, Members of the House of Commons, and some other distinguished persons, should be invited guests. Afterwards a grand promenade concert should be given to the same parties, this to be followed by a conversazione, and such other entertainments as might seem most desirable. The mode of procedure being now determined upon every exertion was made to command success. The only place in the city suitable for a ball of such proportions as that contemplated was the Skating Rink. This, therefore, was taken for the occasion, and as soon as possible the work of rendering it fit for the purpose was begun.

ARRANGEMENTS, DECORATIONS, &c.

A large number of workmen were employed as carpenters, decorators, &c., under the direction of Mr. John Webster, and it was decided to make the ball-room one hundred feet in length, the width of the Rink proper being sixty feet, thus an ample space would be left in the rear for supper and ordinary refreshment-rooms. The apartments formerly used as dressing-rooms were refitted, cleansed, painted, carpeted and furnished, to be retained as dressing-rooms for this occasion. The front of the gallery was to be appropriated to the band, and was fitted up for that purpose.

THE BALL-ROOM.

This, as we have said, is one hundred feet in length by sixty feet in width, with a wide promenade platform raised about two feet from the level of the floor, extending along three of its sides. From the inner edge of the platform, on two sides, there are nine posts to support the roof, and at the north, four to support the gallery. Those at the east and west sides were decorated with spiral wreaths of evergreen, and from a convenient height, there sprung arches of the same material, in the pointed gothic style, extending to the roof, the point of commencement on the posts being ornamented so as to appear like capitals of the columns.

The music gallery was festooned and wreathed with great taste, the same material being principally used for that purpose, but it was also varied with beautifully arranged flags and drapery, the centre of the front displaying a large Prince of Wales' plume and other tasteful and national devices. At the sides within each of the eight arches was a variegated Chinese lantern, and in the spandrels of the arches, immediately above the capitals of the column, were medallions, some bearing the Royal monogram, and others the Prince's plume.

From the ceiling depended thirty-two chandeliers, above each of which were evergreen wreaths, linked to each other by graceful festoons, all covering the ceiling with a tasteful net-work of verdure, enlivened with flowers. And, as if this were not sufficient to produce the brilliant effect sought after, there were innumerable variegated Chinese lanterns sprinkled about the great hall, to mingle their mellow light with that shed by the chandeliers.

At the south end of the hall, was a raised dais for his Excellency the Governor-General, Lady Young, and suite. On this was placed the magnificent civic chair for his Excellency, and others for her Ladyship and friends. Over the dais was a transparent picture of our Sovereign Lady the Queen, life size, and underneath, the city arms. The back ground of the dais was beautifully draped with scarlet, and on either side a beautiful mirror was placed to reflect what was passing from the further end of the room.

The platform, which served as a promenade, was carpeted all round, and the panel from the platform to the dancing floor was faced with scarlet, which served admirably to warm up the tints of the gorgeous dresses in perpetual gyration and undulation before it. The inner life, however, had not yet begun. The distinguished guests had not arrived. Others were there, wound up to the highest pitch of expectancy, waiting the arrival of the vice-regal party.

Half-past nine, the hour fixed for their arrival, had come.

The Ottawa Brigade of Garrison Artillery, commanded by Major Rose, was drawn upon the platform outside, ready to receive them, and in a moment more, the lamps which lined the street showed the State coach. At his approach, the brigade presented arms, Gowan's band struck up "God save the Queen," a deputation received his Excellency outside, and on entering the building, he was received by the Mayor and Committee, and conducted by them to the dais erected for his occupancy. The magnificent band of the Rifle Brigade took up the strain that had ceased from without, and filled the building with a flood of harmony till festoon, and wreath, and flags, and drapery, seemed to vibrate with the sounds.

His Excellency was pleased to cause the guard of honour to be dismissed from further duty for the night, and the officers entered the ball-room as invited guests.

Mr. Fraser, secretary of the ball, presented a beautiful bouquet, in a costly holder, to Lady Young.

The programme of the ball for the use of the vice-regal party was tastefully ornamented by M. Chabert.

The committee were on the alert to regulate the pleasures of the evening. The subscribers, whose names appear in our list, were present with their ladies. Mrs. Friel, we were sorry to learn, was absent in consequence of ill-health. The vice-regal suite in brilliant costumes, with their ladies, adorned with diamonds and costly jewellery, and dresses of all the hues that taste could devise for effect, were waiting for the signal. The members and officers of both Houses of Parliament, and all the distinguished guests from every part of the Dominion, surrounded by a constellation of elegance and beauty, such as the latitude of Ottawa has seldom seen. Some promenading, some standing in groups, and others reclining on ottomans, sofas and lounges, presented a scene of moving and still life, in the bright, yet softened light of the room, which is more impossible to describe than even the magical transformation of the kaleidoscope. Not long, however, had they to wait for the opening of the ball, for with the precision of preconcerted arrangement, the band struck up the quadrille, Le petit Grenadier, and his Excellency taking Mrs. Currier for a partner, Sir John A. Macdonald Mrs. Skead, his Worship Mayor Friel with Lady Young, Sir George E. Cartier with Mrs. Alexander, Hon. John Rose with Mrs. Kenny, Hon. Mr. Chauveau with Lady Macdonald, Hon. Mr. Cauchon with Mrs. Armstrong, and Col. Warren with Mrs. Tilley, entered into the fascinating business of the festivities in a spirit befitting the occasion, which was worthily emulated by all the participants through the night, in the following programme:

PROGRAMME OF DANCES.

1. Quadrille ..... "le petit Grenadier."
2. Galop ..... "Prince Imperial."
3. Lancers ..... "de le Closerie."
4. Waltz ..... "Pauline."

16. Waltz ..... "Innocence."
17. Quadrille ..... "Tyrolese."
18. Galop ..... "Posthorn."

Throughout the whole of the proceedings no sound or tone, or look, that indicated aught but pleasure, and whilst the elegant costumes of the ladies were well calculated to excite envy, each appeared to admire the taste of the others.

At midnight the assembled retired to the spacious supper-room, which was furnished with a table extending around three sides of the apartment, and three other tables in the centre. These were loaded with all the sumptuous viands in every conceivable variety, and wines of the choicest brands in the greatest profusion. The tables were further adorned with bouquets of natural flowers, and a fine collection brought from the Greenhouse for the purpose. The supper room was very beautifully decorated with evergreens, flags and a number of appropriate devices. If the parties enjoyed pleasure in the ball room, surely that which awaited them here was the more necessary.
