IMPORTANT TO
HOTEL KEEPERS, GROCERS, PROVISION STORES AND OTHERS.

I hereby give notice of my intention to supply PICKLES, mixed or steawise, TOMATO SAUCE, TOMATO KETCHUP, &c. wholesale.

The increase of trade during the last four years having compelled me to enlarge my manufactory I have decided to make the wholesale trade my special purpose.

The stock I have now is undoubtedly the largest in Canada, and the question of quality is readily settled by making known the fact that I raise my vegetables from seed procured at any expense providing it is the best; they will therefore bear favorable comparison with any imported.

And another and important fact is that being raised and manufactured in Ottawa thereby avoiding freight, packing, duty and other expenses, I am enabled to sell full 49 per cent lower than any importer.

These advantages, I think, cannot fail to satisfy those who may favor me with their orders.

Agencies.

THE RECENT FAILURES
of two of the largest
ENGLISH ASSURANCE OFFICES
naturally causing much anxiety in the minds of assurers in all companies, the directors of the CANADA LIFE
have published a report and net valuation of all its policy and annuity obligations, by an actuary totally unconnected with it, the Hon. ELIJAH WRIGHT, of Boston, late Insurance Commissioner for the State of Massachusetts.

It is believed that such a voluntary submission of the Company's position to an eminent and independent actuary of the Hon. ELIJAH WRIGHT, well known high character and professional skill, will add to that public satisfaction and confidence which the "Canada Life Company" enjoys.

Copies of Mr Wright's report may be had at the Head Office, or at any of the Agencies throughout the Dominion.

Persons who may be assured in the companies whose condition is unsatisfactory, desiring to join the "Canada Life," will be dealt with upon such terms as are reasonable and fair.

COLD CHURCHES,

WARM CHURCHES.

We have bought the right to use the REVD L WARNER'S improved system of heating churches and other buildings, and also for ventilating the same.

The Revd John N Lake, Wesleyan Minister at London, Ont, says: Having preached in a church during the winter of 1867 8, heated by the Rev L Warner's improved method of heating buildings, I am prepared to say that during the coldest weather the church capable of seating over 800 was always delightfully warm and well ventilated. I am confident that it is the most economical, safe, simple and complete arrangement for heating and ventilating buildings yet offered to the Canadian public. We have testimonials similar to the above from ministers, trustees and sextons of churches in various parts of the Dominion.

We are prepared to take orders for heating churches, school houses, stores and dwelings. Our work will be guaranteed to give satisfaction.

Orders from a distance likewise promptly attended to.

By this system the air in any building is at about the same temperature at the floor as it is near the ceiling.

THE EMPRESS AND THE TURKISH WOMEN.

La Patrie—Paris, Oct. 27.

The influence of the great Sultana of the Franks, as the people of Galata say, bowing with respect, is manifested in a most visible way in the sense of the regeneration of women in this part of the European continent.

The signal is given, and nothing will be able to stop this advance in its course. The little feminine revolution which is going on is significant; already, since the day before yesterday, many Turkish ladies have given up the veil in the streets; others, less bold, or whose husbands are not so easy, continue to wear it, but it is of such fine gauze, so transparent, that it serves rather to deck the face than to hide it.

Almost all have spontaneously renounced the hideous begnin which imprisoned their heads and although still veiled, they have a very pretty headdress consisting of the little Hungarian cap or the little plate of flowers which people have agreed to call a bonnet; lastly, the papouch—the hideous papouch (slipper)—in yellow, red, or blue morocco, in which the foot widened and the ankle was spoilt, is generally replaced by the elastic boot. One bootmaker has completely sold out his stock since the day before yesterday; as for the milliners, they do not know what to do first, they are so busy.

The revolution, thus commenced, will never stop; and before a year, perhaps, the Mussulman woman in European Turkey will have conquered her place in the house; she will no longer be the wearied, idle, and most useless being we see her now; she will become a woman, and on that day, willing or unwilling, the Turks must think of becoming men like others; and when that happens, this people, which is regarded, not without an appearance of reason, as a people asleep, will be able to accomplish great things. In this respect, the stay of the Empress at Constantinople, awakening new ideas amongst the Turkish population, is considered by thinkers as the commencement of a new future. The old molahs cry out; they shake their white beards in terror: they are allowed to say and do as they like, but the movement on the path of progress continues its onward march.

AN EMINENT DIVINE—says, "I have been using the Peruvian Syrup. It gives me new vigor, buoyancy of spirits, elasticity of muscles." J. P. Dinsmore, 36 Dey Street, New York, will send, free, a phamphlet of 32 pages, containing a full account of this remarkable medicine, to any one sending him heir address.

"Queen's Birthday was kept in the usual loyal style last month, and next month the citizens of the Dominion of Canada will celebrate the birth of their new and and rising existence; but recovered invalids still feel that a public holiday would be too short to celebrate all th virtues of that celebrated Indian Medicine, the great SOZODONT REMEDY, now on sale by the respectable druggists in your locality.

TOM THUMB REDIVIVUS.—We read there has been a race between the New York showmen to obtain possession of one George Washington Nutt, who is said to be several inches shorter than General Tom Thumb, and that P. T. Barnum has succeeded in getting him for three years for $50,000, board and expenses. Is it not a great thing to be a small man! and is it not equally as great to have a medicine that can be depended upon for curing colds, rheumatism, burns, bruises, summer complaints, chills, &c.? If so get at once a supply of the "Canadian Pain Destroyer," at he nearest medicine dealer's for 25 cents.

BREAKFAST.—EPPS'S COCOA.—GRATEFUL AND COMFORTING.—The very agreeable character of this preparation has rendered it a general favourite. The CIVIL SERVICE GAZETTE remarks:—"The singular success which Mr. Epps attained by his homœopathic preparation of cocoa has never been surpassed by any experimentalist. By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills." Made simply with boiling water or milk. Sold by the trade only in ½lb and 1lb tin-lined packets, labelled—JAMES EPPS & Co., Homœopathic Chemists, London England. 1138SW6m

FISH CULTURE IN ONTARIO—GREAT RESULTS FROM SMALL BEGINNINGS.

From the Toronto Telegraph.

Within a mile of the town of Newcastle, in the county of Durham, (some fifty miles East of Toronto), may be seen one of the most marvellous exhibitions of scientific and productive industry, that Canadian enterprise can boast of.

A good many people have heard, we daresay, of Wilmot's Creek, and of the experiments in the artificial breeding of fish, that have there been carried on by the lord of the manor—Mr. Samuel Wilmot.

The elder Mr. Wilmot, a man of clear discernment and quick intelligence, picked out a splendid piece of land—1,000 acres in extent—through which ran and still runs, a swift, clear, pebbly-bottomed creek, besides smaller streamlets the outlet of natural springs on different parts of the estate. At that time, nearly all the larger creeks and many of the smaller, on the North shore of Lake Ontario, were the favourite haunts of the genuine salt-water salmon, such as is now chiefly found in the Jaques Cartier, the Saguenay, &c., &c. Mr. Samuel Wilmot, however, although early and always devoted to fishing as a sport and recreation, does not seem to have had his mind practically turned to the subject of pisciculture until a few years ago.

It was early in 1866, or about four years ago, that Mr. Wilmot, remembering the traditions of the worthy pioneer from New Brunswick, as to the superabundance of fish—especially salmon—bethought him the importance of practically testing the question; whether the stock, then all but killed out, could be revived; whether the empty spawning beds of the creek could not be replenished; whether, in short, a vast source of natural wealth, all but drained dry, could not be restored. Once afloat on this current of thought, Mr. Wilmot determined to launch out on the enterprise (in which we shall show, he has now achieved most marvellous success) with all the resolution, all the patient industry, all the courage, and all the means at his command.

At the time we speak of (in the spring and summer of 1865) Mr. Wilmot had his attention specially drawn to the fact that there must be occasional visits to the creek from remnants of the salmon family—so famous, so numerous and so flourishing in the early pioneer days of his father. The unmistakable footprints (if the word is lawful) of the male and female were visible in the gravelly bed of the Creek, where they had been at work hewing out their nests for the deposit in succession of the eggs and the melt. This evidence of the presence of a few survivors, at least, was encouraging; and it was further supplemented by the actual discovery of several of the rare visitors themselves; no fewer than fifteen having been secured, after some labour and search, and all placed under cover in a small building erected over a branch of the Creek—where Mr. Wilmot hoped they might breed unmolested either by predatory fish or still more predatory barbarians in human form. As far as the predatory inhabitants of the Creek were concerned, Mr. Wilmot's first batch of patients would have fared well enough—for he had a dam erected above his shed to prevent their passing higher up the Creek, and the wire grating by which they were prevented from escaping until they had spawned, served to exclude from their temporary hospital all such depredators as eels, &c., &c. But as regards the vandals whom Mr. Wilmot had to own as neighbours, neither he nor his finny proteges made so fortunate an escape. Some of the baser sort of ruffians of the township, who felt that their filthy habit of preying on the salmon in spawning time, when they are foul, was likely to be interfered with, broke into the building containing the fifteen fish secured there, and deliberately killed eleven of them; leaving Mr. Wilmot to begin his first year's experiment with only four salmon. Out of these, however, by careful watching and judicious manipulation at the proper time, Mr. Wilmot got no fewer than fifteen thousand ova; and of the latter, a large proportion, after being subjected to a hatching process of little more than two months in perforated pans, over which a constant stream of water was allowed to run slowly—came to life—were then sedulously watched and nursed until (six or seven months afterwards) they were found strong enough to be turned loose into the Creek, a few only being retained for further experiment.

That was Mr. Wilmot's first year of operations—operations undertaken at very considerable expense in actual outlay, and carried out with unremitting toil, without any assistance or countenance from the Government, except that at his request, an Order in Council was passed in 1866, setting aside Wilmot's Creek for the natural and artificial breeding of fish.

Encouraged by the result of his first effort—Mr. Wilmot proceeded with increased hopes and resolution to prosecute his adventure in 1867. He got a new reception house erected for his patients, (their former quarters having been found inadequate), and in this building he managed to secure some twenty-five or thirty salmon at the usual breeding time, and from this number of breeders he secured about 50,000 ova, a considerable portion of which, however, proved barren; and the year's operations did not give him the same satisfaction as the first, although they were conducted on a larger scale.

In 1868, Mr. Wilmot had the assistance in his operations, of the Fisheries Department; Mr. Mitchell taking a deep interest in all that concerns the progress, protection, and increase of this branch of our national industry. A portion of a creek, near Grafton, was utilized in the same way as Wilmot's Creek, to attract the breeding salmon' and give them shelter. The eggs deposited at Grafton were in due time transferred to the more commodious premises near Newcastle, and there experiments were made to test the fact as to the effect of the temperature of the water on the hatching process. At a temperature of 40 to 44 degrees, the time required to bring out the young fry is from 60 to 70 days; when it falls as low as it does in the Creek in winter, to 32° and 33°, the time required for hatching is nearly double.

In the early fall of 1868, the first grilse of the season made his appearance in the reception house; and before the end of October there were one hundred and fifty more under cover—a most remarkable fact as Mr. Wilmot points out, considering that for twenty years before, scarcely a single grilse had been seen in the Creek; and a fact going to show, very conclusively, we take it, that Mr. Wilmot's first offspring were coming back to their native place with a grateful remembrance of the kindness they had there received. In the few months of there travel they had grown from a weight of two or three ounces to lively young fellows of between two and three pounds—nearly all males and all good for purposes of propagation. Besides this large family of returned grilse. Mr. Wilmot's establishment, in the fall of 1868, was visited by some thirty mature salmon, many of which weighed thirteen pounds. The result of that year's breeding was about onehundred thousand young salmon, which the writer saw disporting themselves in a small branch stream, which supplies from the main creek an open pond, where they will pass the winter under ice, and thence push out towards the world as best they can; coming back, however, as we have seen, to the paternal roof in the shape of grilse for a short sojourn in the fall.

The operations of 1869 at Wilmot's Creek have so transcended in magnitude and practical success, all that was ever expected, or dreamt of, that any but an eye witness could be blamed for doubting the truth of any report—the least colored report—that could be written. The winter speaks from personal observation. The buildings in which Mr. Wilmot's fall visitors are housed, and in which their spawn are left for a time to be cared for, and parallel to the main stream—and are erected immediately below the dam or fall of which we have already spoken. Water conducted by a seperate cut runs through to the reception house, into which the large fish come voluntarily, at breeding time, when they find they cannot jump the fall and go higher up the stream. It was almost full when we saw it on Saturday, and the total number of patient it has contained this year, probably cannot be less than between two or three thousand. A large number having spawned have gone back to the feeding grounds, weeks ago, and the remainder will be let loose this week, leaving, however no fewer than HALF A MILLION sound ova, which will turn into live fry in a few weeks, and will be sent into the outside ponds in the spring, when the one hundred thousand now there have been set free in the creek, to proceed thence as they find themselves able into the Lake and down to salt water.

The second building used for Mr. Wilmot's purpose, is called the breeding cellar, built of stone, 60 feet long, and 20 feet wide, containing several rows of longitudinal frames or benches, on which the perforated zinc pans are placed, which contained the ova, and which remain here undisturbed until the hatching is one, when the fry pass thence into troughs filled with running water in the same building.

The most wonderful and the most attractive feature of Mr. Wilmot's establishment, to our view, is the comparatively small amount of artificial aid that is needed by his process of breeding. The salmon come into the creek as they did 60 years ago, because they are protected. They lay their eggs in the open stream all the way up from the lake; and Mr. Wilmot reckon that now, since he has driven off the poachers, twice as many salmon has set to breeding in the creek, (without any aid whatever), as have come up to the foot of the miniature fall, and into the reception room. This is surely a most surprising and a most gratifying fact.

Much more could we say about this marvellous enterprise, if we had space. Our Ministers should visit Wilmot's Creek. Mr. Mitchell has been there in his official capacity, and we are satisfied he has been profoundedly impressed with all he saw, as every one indeed of ordinary intelligence would be. The bagatelle of $2000 which the Commons voted to Mr. Wilmot last year, will not meet probably a tithe of the expense he has gone to; but that vote was an acknowledgement—in which members of both sides of the House heartly joined—of the value of the services he had rendered. We trust the liberality of Parliament is not to be measurer by that grant. We ought to have a score or more of such establishments as that at Wilmot Creek in different parts of Ontario, not only for the breeding of salmon, but of white fish, salmon-trout, &c. And here we would respectfully invite the attention of the Attorney-General to the consideration of the question—whether Mr. Wilmot has not rendered services to this Province especially which deserve recognition at the hands of our Government. He asks for nothing; but we do not think it less due to him on that account, that we should show that we appeciate his labour.

GRAND TRUNK

The Railway Times of 6th November has the following:

"It must indeed be a gratification of no ordinary import or extent to Mr. Potter that he will have the opportunity, on his return, of assuring his colleagues and proprietors that Canadian capitalists have at length, and through his instrumentality, been induced, for the first time, to take part in the financial vicissitudes and prospects of the undertaking. The bond and shareholders will thus have an opportunity, on their reassembling, of addressing themselves to topics of practical importance, and of considering whether or not the interests of the undertaking have been damaged or benefited by postponement of a report from the directors until the results of Mr. Potter's examination and negotiations should be laid before them.

We are not impressed with the folly that any sudden revulsion can restore the fortunes of the Grand Trunk. To effect this object is a labour of years, and a work in which personal assiduity and no little self-sacrifice, instead of self-laudation, must take part. We are simply beginning to look for a commencement of these labours, and are prepared to wait patiently for the results."

A DISTRESSING COUGH.—causes the friends of the sufferer almost as much pain as the sufferer himself, and should receive immediate attention. Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry speedily cures coughs, colds, influenza, sore throat, &c. It will always relieve consumption, and in many well attested cases it has effected a perfect cure.

Retrospex may be profitable, but when yoo cast your piercin eye back and onto a time yoo made a oussid ass uv yourself, they are far from bein pleasant. I am doin that thing at this present moment. I arrived in that city two days before the recent eleckshun, feelin that wher votes waz in sich a demand there must be suthin to be made for me. By inquiry I found where the headquarters of the Democratic General Committee for the city wuz located, and at about 10 a. m., which means in the mornin, I went there intendin to offer myself ez a man uv all work for the two days succeedin. I found there a vast crowd uv men, who were all uv em like me in some respects varyin, uv course, in many pints, but all uv the same species. The chairman uv the committee was distributin funds to em to be yoozed, and they waz a walking up to get instructions in a sort uv a procession. Noticin that the biznis was bein done loosely, I dropped into the procession, and shoor enuff the man distributin handid me a package, sayin "Terence, be shoor you git em all up from the ship—Barney McShane will give yez the papers for em, and tell yez wat names to vote em under!"

He had mistook me for Terence some body. Shood I undeceive him? Never! So, slippin the package into my pocket I answered, assomin the Irish brogue:

"Arrah, musha, be jabers my jewel, I'm the bye."

Fortunitly I wuz crowded out before I had time to air much Irish. I wuzn't a
