Her Majesty's Theatre—Continued Success.

Tact is above all things necessary in a theatrical manager. On the judicious selection of a play almost as much depends as on the wise selection of actors. A play must suit the audience, and it must suit the capacities of the actors. In the selection of "Across the Continent," as exemplifying life in New York and in the Far West, Mr. Marshall has produced something in which even a Canadian public can feel a deep interest. It is a drama of human life everywhere. As life is in New York so is it everywhere among the human family. In this play the ill effects of drunkenness are strikingly illustrated by scenery and by histrionic effort combined in such a way as to appeal vividly to the senses. The author presents phases of character in connection with a social evil so graphically that one is startled by the close semblance to reality, and the mind of the spectator follows out the results of nobleness of character, under adverse circumstances, in connection with innate rascality, and its sure issue, with a distinctness which plays of greater pretensions have not always produced. Wealth and wretchedness, poverty and true nobility of soul are wonderfully contrasted in this play, while scenic effect has been studiously brought in to add to the illusion. The characters in the piece lose their individuality in the piece itself. Mr. Byron is "the Ferret," Mr. Little "John Adderly," Miss Peterson, the "Brokenhearted wife," while Mr. Ward is only the garret shoe maker, with those fine impulses, which the poorer classes, to a much greater extent than the better classes so frequently exhibit in the way of sympathy for the sufferings of others. In "Across the Continent" domestic misery is made apparent in connection with bar-room tippling, "the practice of the bar" is seen, without personal risk of contamination, or degradation, and the results of honesty, where honesty has been tempted and even grossly wronged, shown to be, what it ever is, "the best policy."

In his selection of an admirable band, of a good company of players, and in agreeable, instructive and entertaining pieces, Mr. Marshal has recently been eminently successful, and it is to be hoped that a continuance of good houses will reward his exertions.

To-night a new piece, fully equal, we are told, to that intitulted "Across the Continent," "steam era," will at once add to Mr. Marshall's fame as a manager and to his pecuniary benefit, without which latter fame to him would be of little consequence. Theatrically, Ottawa is, indeed, reviving

CAUTION.

CORNWALL BLANKETS.

THE CORNWALL MANUFACTURING COMPANY beg to caution the public against a spurious shoddy imitation of their celebrated Blankets, now being imported into this country from England, and got up so as to cheat the public into the belief that they are of Canadian manufacture. The style and general appearance of the Cornwall Blankets have been closely copied, and so have the shape and printing of the tickets, except that the words "Cornwall Manufacturing Company" are omitted, and the words "Canadian Manufacture" substituted. Persons desiring a really good and genuine article will have to see that the words "Cornwall Manufacturing Company" are on the ticker of each pair of Blankets.
