ject of the New Brunswick School Law, and praying that the same may be disallowed.

The honorable gentleman made some remarks about religion, the purport of which did not reach our ears.

Mr. BALLERUSE said that religious teaching was necessary in public Schools, and hoped that the law in New Brunswick would be so amended as to permit it. He was in favor of a Separate School System.

Hon. Sir GEO. E. CARTIER said that the School Act of Ontario neither imposed nor witheld religious teaching in the Common Schools. He read from a New Brunswick document to show that no Roman Catholic could conscientiously send his children to a public school in which certain religions tenets opposed to his religious teachings were enrolled. He spoke of the liberality of the School Law System of Lower Canada. There were dissentient schools in almost every locality and these might be either Protestant or Catholic, according to circumstances, the majority giving the character to the school. He thought that the proposition of the honorable gentleman was of too sweeping a character to be adopted by this House. It was said that the law of New Brunswick was unpopular and caused much dissatisfaction amongst the Catholic population there. It was said that the power was given to the Governor General to disallow the Acts of any Local Legislature. This was not always advisable. It seemed to himthat the interests of a Catholic minority were by the resolution supposed to be controlled by a Protestant majority, and he could not agree to that notion. It was absurd to appeal to a Protestant Parliament to disallow the Acts of a Local Legislature with regard to a Catholic minority as the same rule would apply to Ontario where Catholics were in a minority, and to Quebec where Protestants were in a minority. If this Parliament had the right to disallow, it would also have the right to initiate, and so the power of Legislation, and the provinces would be completely overridden by that of the Federal Parliament. The difficulty was presented to the Governor General, and he was advised to take a certain action in the matter for which the Government were responsible. This proceeding was entirely irregular. It was an attack on Responsible Government. Let the House pass a vote of want of confidence in the ministry if they chose, but it certainly was not for the House, as the motion implied, to advise His Excellency. The ministry were His Excellency's constitutional advisers, not the House. No minority in any Province could by the Act of Confederation be tyrannized over by a Local Legislature. His hon. friend, in bringing this matter up had already attained a great object, and he (Sir G. E. Cartier) hoped that his hon. friend would not further press the matter.

Mr. MASSON (Terrebonne) readily understood the position. But there was a question with respect to religious liberty. He thought that the decision in cases of supposed unconstitutional action should be left to a Supreme Court, and not to a Federal Parliament. Unluckily, however, the condition existed. The veto did rest with the Dominion Government. Religion was the basis of education, and without education religion was nothing but bigotry. He cited from the book of Hon. Mr. Cauchon in French on Confederation, to show that no encroachment could be made on the Catholics of Upper Canada or the Protestants of Lower Canada without sewing the seeds of discontent. He would feel satisfied if the same thing had been done to the Protestants of Lower Canada as had been done to the Catholics of New Brunswick He thought that the Protestants of the House ought to join with him and his friends in asking the Government to disallow this Bill.

Hon. Mr. LANGEVIN said that the question which presented itself to the Dominion Government was whether the Government of New Brunswick had a right to pass their school law, and it was acknowledged that the Legislature of New Brunswick indisputably had the right. He then went over similar ground to that which Sir Geo. E Cartier had pursued and resumed his seat.

Hon. Mr. DORION said that the Government had no right to abridge the acts of the local legislatures. He hoped the Government would reconsider and not require a vote on the subject.

Mr. ALONZO WRIGHT considered himself bound as representing a large Catholic constituency and was unwilling to give a silent vote on this subject. He had promised to deal fairly with his constituents in such matters, and could certainly vote in favor of this motion. Catholic and Protestant had in his constituency invariably lived in harmony. He contended that the interests of a minority whether Catholic or Protestant should be protected. He recollected a missionary in his constituency who had most faithfully attended to the educational interests of both classes of the community, and it would be against his instinct and education if he refused to the Catholic inhabitants of New Brunswick simple justice.

Hon. Col GRAY was about to speak, but as it was late was willing that the debate should be adjourned.

Hon. Mr. DORION was opposed to delay and spoke of the urgency of the debate, and hoped that the Government did not wish to throw the debate over until it was of no use. He hoped the debate would be adjourned from day to day until a decision was come to.

Hon. Mr. ANGLIN said if he understood the hon. Ministers of Militia and Public Works aright it was that the recognition of the rights of the Catholic minority in New Brunswick would affect the rights of Catholic minorities or minorities in Quebec and elsewhere. He thought that, in this case, the exercise of disallowance was exceptionable. Yet the Dominion Government was invested with extraordinary powers for the express purpose of protecting minorities. There would have been no chance of endangering anybody's rights by the disallowance of this Bill. He wanted for his people, of New Brunswick simple justice and fair play.

Hon. Sir JOHN A. MACDONALD was quite surprised to remark the tone of his hon. friend from Hochelaga. There was not the slightest chance of the matter being thrown overboard. He said that the hon. member for Gloucester had deliberately mistated the meaning of the two Act. The Act was passed on the 18th of May 1871. Three weeks must yet expire before the disallowance of the Act could possibly take place.

Hon. Mr. ANGLIN was somewhat surprised, and hoped that the matter should be the first order of the day on Wednesday.

The House adjourned at half-past twelve p.m.

AGRICULTURAL INTERESTS.

The Select Committee on Agricultural Interests met yesterday and adopted the following series of questions, to be printed and sent to leading agriculturists, millers, &c.:

1. What was the effect on the farming interests of the cessation of the duties on foreign produce imposed in April, 1870, and repealed in April, 1871?

2. Not having reciprocity with the United States in the exchange of grain and flour and farm produce generally, do you think it for the in erest of the Dominion that we should continue to admit American produce free, while Canadian produce exported over the border has to pay a toll of 20 per cent.

3. What duties, if any, would you impose on flour and on the various grains respectively, or what general guiding rule as to the imposition of such duties would you recommend?

4. Has the free admission of American Indian Corn any effect on the prices of coarse grains in your sections of country, and, if so, what effect?

5. Do you advise legislation with a view to establishing and promoting in Canada the cultivation of the sugar beet, and the manufacture of sugar therefrom, also the cultivation of tobacco and flax, and what legislation would best conduce to the end in view?

6. From what section of country in Canada or in the United States do you obtain your supplies of grain, and what is your average annual quantity received from such country, and for what purposes used?

7. Where is the most of your flour or meal actually consumed, and what market is it most to your advantage to sell in, the home market of the Dominion, the British or the American market? State reasons.

8. Does the free importation of American flour, without reciprocity, put you at a disadvantage as compared with American competitors? and, if so, state reason.

9. Have you found grinding in bond convenient and practicable and fair to all parties concerned, and would you recommend it in case of the imposition of a duty on foreign wheat?

10. As to ad valorem duty of 20 per cent imposed in the United States on flour, against the fixed specific duty of 20 cents per bushel on wheat generally operates as a discriminatory tariff against the Canadian miller, would the establishment of discriminatory duties by the Parliament of Canada, in your opinion, be advisable?
