LUKE TRAVERS.

OR

A Tale of the Dominion. Commencing in Years Back.

matters were unusually acrimonious and personal. Mr. Aylwin, one of the members for Quebec, was peculiarly remarkable for the coarseness and offensiveness of his language. After the Christmas recess the House reopened on the evening of January, and Ministers, with a very small majority, attempted to carry some of their but necessary measures. They were, however, most fiercely opposed. Nearly the whole of the members of French Canadian origin were adverse to the proceedings on the ground that they were [illegible] and were of lesser importance of Nobl Square Ex. [illegible] of position, who [illegible] to their party if not to themselves. Draper, now a judge for Upper Canada, was never so powerful with all his ability, could scarcely govern or rather lead the House. His colleagues were of little or no use to him. Vigor and no friends in the House, and few out of doors. Smith, the Attorney-General, not rated about the written Constitution of England, and Daly was dumb. Mr. Johnson, the Inspector-General, had gone back to his constituents to receive their approval of his acceptance of office. Scandalous scenes, such as only could be perpetrated in a most tavern meeting, were of painfully frequent occurrence. On one occasion that on which Mr. Johnston, the member for Carleton, a shrewd but uneducated man, moved for the appointment of a Committee to investigate the manner in which the Crown Lands Department was conducted, language the most calumnious, insulting, and of course unparliamentary, that it is possible to conceive, was used by gentlemen on both sides of the House. Mr. Johnston himself bluntly accused the Commissioner of Crown Lands of incapacity and negligence, and it is not improbable that he told the truth. Mr. Papineau was old in years, but new to office. He was, however, a gentleman and a scholar. To the offensive allusion he made no reply, and even Mr. Lafontaine, his political opponent, was constrained to say that Mr. Johnstons motion and remarks were improper, and to suggest that it has friends were not satisfied with the manner in which the business of the country was conducted they should endeavour to obtain a vote of want of confidence in the Ministry. The Hon. George Moffatt hoped the motion would be withdrawn, and Mr. Johnston did withdraw it. Mr. Aylwin now became perfectly furious. Rising to his feet he exclaimed against the withdrawal of the motion. As he fiercely eyed the venerable Commissioner of Crown Lands, and pointed at him with his finger, he declared that Mr. Denis Benjamin Papineau was most grossly and stupidly ignorant, and, as the brother of the celebrated Papineau held a position as disgraceful and ominous as it was possible to conceive, representing, as he did, no part of the people. The Speaker, of course, cried "order" and there were cries of question on all sides of the House, but Aylwin persevered and continued speaking of the Honourable Commissioner of Crown Lands in terms still more offensive until his voice was drowned in the tumult which he had caused. M. De Bleury craved permission to speak. He termed the remarks of the honourable member for Quebec impertinent, when the Speaker cried "order" and ruled that the word "impertinent" was unparliamentary. De Bleury bowed and explained. He would not avoid again using the unparliamentary expression in doing so, and was a second time called to "order." The interruption was but momentary. De Bleury resumed the honourable member for Quebec, who had spoken in the most contemptuous terms of French Canadians, of the time when he was the acknowledged hangman of that race of people. Again there was a clamour; and Mr. Coughon bawled out that the member for Montreal had made use of a term that could not decently be applied to "the dregs of the people." The honourable member for Quebec seemed pleased at the storm which he had created. While some hissed and others cheered, and some increased din and confusion in their efforts to obtain order, Mr. Aylwin, touched his spectacles peculiarly with two fingers of his right hand, and endeavoured to see more clearly what all the fuss and fury was about. When Mr. Attorney Smith expressed his surprise that not a French Canadian gentleman on the benches of the Opposition had said a word in favour of his honourable colleague, the Commissioner of Crown Lands, the member for Quebec said somewhat ludicrously "ah! ah! that's it" and the Speaker called "order." Mr. Attorney for a minute or two appeared confused, but having collected himself he stammered forth these words:—"The member for Quebec says my honourable colleague does not represent the French Canadians; pray, what class of persons are represented in the person of the ex Solicitor-General?" Aylwin's reply was more emphatic and expressive than ordinary. Rising to his feet, he extended his right hand, shut it, and shook it curiously at Mr. Attorney, said not a word, and sat down. The attitude and appearance of the ex-Solicitor-General were so odd that the Speaker could scarcely reprimand him and threaten to name him. However, he did so, when Lafontaine, Prince and others expressed themselves to the effect that Mr. Attorney was the party out of order. The galleries were cleared as Mr. Attorney General Smith attempted again to obtain a hearing

HORSES SAVED.—The lives of thousands of horses have been saved during the past year, and the credit is due to "Darley's Condition Powders and Arabian Heave Remedy." This preparation is being extensively used, and exacts from all the highest praise. Nothing of the kind has ever before been half as successful, or given such universal satisfaction; it can not be equalled. We can confidently recommend it, and would advise all who own horses to keep a supply of it on hand—it may be the means of saving your horse's life. Remember the name, and see that the signature of Hurd & Co., is on each package. Northrup & Lyman, Toronto, Ont., proprietors for Canada. Sold by all medical dealers. 3796.

THE ANIMAL BODY is made entirely of substances primarily derived from inorganic nature, the rocks, the water, and the air. Natural forces, light heat electricity and time, in their process of reduction, carry us through the grand procession of their changes, from the inorganic to the organic state. The miracle of vitality is sustained by the compounding by nature (as above) of the tissues, which are wasted in the ordinary nervous and muscular operations of thinking and acting. And in proportion to the capacity of the animal economy for restoring the waste, is being preserved in health and strength. The ingredients wasted by thought and action, are identical with those of which Fellows' Hypophosphites are composed; the ability of this preparation to furnish the restoring capacity, and its power of sustaining and increasing vitality in the subject, enables him to combat and overcome disease, and so to lengthen his days. 3000
