Ottawa.

Mr. J. W. Marston, Mayor of Hull, arrived in town yesterday, and was a guest at the Russell House.

Our telegraphic correspondent at Montreal, in his report in our last impression, spoke of Mr. Daly as a party to an affray, and brought before the Recorder's Court as the Dominion Immigration Agent. This was an error. The Mr. Daly in question was not Mr. I. I. Daley, the Dominion Immigration Agent, nor any connection whatever.

The following visitors are reported as having registered their names in the Library of the Dominion Agency at London, for the week ending 25th of September:—W. A. Blackmore, Ottawa; W. G. Beers, Montreal; W. F. Scott, M. D., Hull; Arthur French, Montreal; John Philip, M. D., Listowel; W. A. Molson, M. D., Montreal; Arthur Bristow, Ottawa; H. L. Gilbert, Sherbrooke.

TELEGRAPHIC SUMMARY.

State Senator Johnston, of New York, died of apoplexy, yesterday.

At a large meeting of German workmen, held in New York, for the purpose of expressing sympathy for the striking operatives of Fall River, Mass, the sentiment was expressed and endorsed by the meeting, that any man who controlled more than $1,000,000, was both a robber and a thief. That may be so; but there are those thrifty and enterprising persons to be found, who carry on a flourishing trade in the thief and robber business on even less capital than $1,000,000; and manage to take a very lively interest in the "wrongs of the labouring classes" besides.

Latest advices from Shanghai state that the authorities at Pekin have not yet complied with the demands of Great Britain, and that the prospects of a peaceful solution of the question of dispute between the two Powers are by no means flattering.

The Prince of Wales sailed for India yesterday. He was accompanied by the Princess Alexandra as far as Calais.

The North Carolina State Constitutional Convention has adjourned, after a session of over five weeks. Many important measures were acted upon, having a tendency to remove the restrictions under which legislation has laboured in that State since 1868.

A fire in the Utah (Nev.) mines destroyed property to the value of $250,000 yesterday.

A most destructive conflagration has taken place at Santander, Spain.

The British and French Government are in communication in regard to the most advisable steps to be taken relative to the Turkish debt.

Italy will appoint a Committee of Italian residents in the United States to represent her at the Philadelphia Centennial.

The Dutch Minister of Foreign affairs says that the relations between Holland and Venezuela are not such as to cause disquietude, but the situation is such as to counsel prudence.

The Carlist General Seballo is a refuge in Switzerland, and the authorities at Madrid have demanded his extradition on the ground that he is a robber.

Alex. H. Stephens, ex-Vice-President of the Southern Confederacy, is dangerously ill.

The judgment of the Reformed Presbyterian Synod, rendered some time ago, suspending Rev. George Stuart, for communing with churches, has been reversed by the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania.

Gen. Bartlett has declined the Democratic nomination for Governor of Massachusetts.

Joseph Sooby, ex-State Treasurer of New Jersey, has been indicted for embezzlement and malfeasance in office.

UNDER THE SEA.

HOW MESSAGES ARE SENT BY THE OCEAN CABLE.

From the Boston Herald.

The ocean telegraph operator taps the "key," as in a land telegraph, only it is a double key. It has two levers and knobs instead of one. The alphabet used is substantially the same as the Morse alphabet—that is, the different letters are represented by a combination of dashes and dots. For instance, suppose you want to write the word "boy." It would read like this: "— ... — — — —, — — —". B is one dash and three dots; O, three dashes; and Y, one dash, one dot, and three dashes. Now, in the land telegraph, the dashes and the dots would appear on the strip of paper at the other end of the line, which is unwound from a cylinder, and perforated by a pin at the end of the bar or armature. If the operator could read by sound, he would dispense with the strip of paper, and read the message by the "click" of the armature as it is pulled down and let go by the electric magnet.

The cable operator, however, has neither of these advantages. There is no paper to perforate, no click of the armature and no armature to click. The message is read by means of a moving flash of light upon a polished scale, produced by the "deflection of a very small mirror, which is placed within a "mirror galvanometer," which is a small brass cylinder, two or three inches in diameter, shaped like a spool or bobbin, composed of several hundred turns of small wire wound with silk to keep the metal from coming in contact. It is wound or coiled exactly like a bundle of new rope, a small hole being left in the middle about the size of a common wooden pencil. In the centre of this is suspended a very thin, delicate mirror about as large as a kernel of corn, with a corresponding lyasmall magnet, rigidly attached to the back of it. The whole weighs but little more than a grain, and is suspended by a single fibre of silk, much smaller than a human hair and almost invisible. A narrow horizontal scale is placed within a darkened box two or three feet in front of the mirror, a narrow slit being cut in the centre of the scale to allow a ray of light to shine upon the mirror from a lamp placed behind said scale, the little mirror in turn reflecting the light back upon the scale. This spot of light upon the scale is the index by which all messages are read. The angle through which the ray moves is double that traversed by the mirror itself; and it is, therefore, really equivalent to an index four or six feet in length, without weight.

To the casual observer there is nothing but a thin ray of light, darting to the right and left with irregular rapidity; but to the trained eye of the operator every flash is replete with intelligence. Thus the word "boy," already alluded to, would be read in this way: One flash to the right and three to the left is B. Three dashes to the right is O. One to the right, one to the left, and two more to the right is Y, and so on. Long and constant practice makes the operators wonderfully expert in their profession, and enables them to read from the mirror as readily and as accurately as from a newspaper.

The Produce Markets.

The Mark Lane Express this evening, in its weekly review of the produce market, has the following:—The weather has been much broken, there having been hail in some places, but the interruption to field labour has been only partial. Dampness has interfered with threshing, and the condition of samples is generally bad; an upward tendency in prices is continued, though business is restricted. In France, they are slightly dearer. There is less doing at Odessa, but rates are maintained. Dantzic is rather dearer. The receipts of wheat from India are unprecedented. The quality is low, however; but, if shipments pay, it places a vast acreage at the services of England.

A Father's Grief at the Death of Her Child.

LYNN, Oct. 11.—Mary Welsh, a deaf and dumb woman, the mother of three children, was to day, taken in charge by the police, after an obstinate resistance. She had in her arms a six months' old child, which had been dead for three days, and which she refused to part with. It is thought her grief at its loss had made her insane. She threatened to kill herself and her remaining children, if the dead child was not restored. She will be sent to the Asylum to morrow.

The Chicago Custom House.

CHICAGO, Oct. 11.—The Inter-Ocean prints extracts from an unpublished report of Mr. Blodgett, on the Chicago Custom House. It mentions in terms of approbation the system of appraising here, and speaks of the system of frauds and undervaluation in the New York Custom House. It repeats the charge already made, that Secretary Bristow suppressed this report on account of its indictment of New York officials.

NORTH CAROLINA.

State Constitutional Convention Adjourned.

RALEIGH, Oct. 11.—The State Constitutional Convention adjourned sine die this evening, after a session of thirty two working days. In the last few days of the session, many important ordinances were passed, amounting to a general emancipation of the Legislature from restrictions under which it has laboured since 1868, and giving it larger powers. The public debt question was not interfered with, several ineffectual attempts being made to repudiate special tax bonds.

Anti-Vaccination Rioters—Small-Pox—The Guilbord Case—Molson's Bank—Immigrants Returning—Money and Stock Markets.

MONTREAL, Oct. 11.—This afternoon, the Grand Jury, after being all day engaged in examining witnesses on the anti-vaccination riot case, brought in a verdict against H. C. St. Pierre, partner of ex-Premier Ouimet, counsel for Riel. The presentment caused great excitement.

The ravages of the small pox are increasing as winter approaches. Last week there were sixteen deaths from this disease, three cases being Protestants and thirteen Catholics.

There is no probability of B Battery being ordered to St. Helen's Island for some time, as the date of Guilbord's burial is not known in military circles. One gentleman believes that the coffin, after being incased in a stone casket, and well cemented, will be left where it is till next spring.

A Quebec special this evening states that the report of the Provincial Police being ordered to Montreal in case of any disturbance at the burial of Guilbord is confirmed, and men are being drilled daily. It is added that this is owing to the Police Force being considered unreliable in case of any emergency arising out of the religious excitement.

The annual meeting of Molson's Bank was held this afternoon, the President in the chair. The annual statement of affairs to the 30th of September shows a new profit of $211,529, to which is to be added the balance at the credit of profit and loss on 30th September, 1874, $1,997, being a total of $213,526. The customary dividends have been paid, and the rest has been increased to $500,000, a sum equivalent to 25 per cent on the subscribed capital of the bank. The adjoining premises, at present partially occupied by the Mechanics' Bank, have been acquired at a cost of $100,000. Full possession will not be obtained until May 1st, ensuing, at which time it is the intention to remove either the Savings Department of the Bank, or the Head Office.

Three immigrants lately arrived in Ontario, complained bitterly of the treatment they received from Emigrant Agents, who promised them work at good wages, but failed to keep their promises, and they were left to shift for themselves. They expected to find work in the country, but on their arrival found the country overstocked with labourers, and work scarce. Many of them spent their last money in the journey, and were obliged to sell their effects to pay their way to Montreal. An old gentleman called at the Emigrant Office, and left a considerable bequest for the holding of these games in imitation of the regular Olympic games, held at intervals in the stadium of Herodes, Atticus, and has further directed a large gymnasium to be erected in connection with them. As all Athens is perfectly satisfied, all the old nomenclature of Greek games has been raked up. The judges who appear on the course in tail coats and white ties and gloves are entitled Hellenodicai, fellows who climb up poles are called Olympionikai, though they have practised not in gymnasia, but more probably in orchards, and all the world of Athens collected on a Sunday afternoon at five o'clock. The stadium itself was very convenient for spectators, but hardly so for competitors. It is an oval, only 565 feet long, so excavated that (with the exception of the open west end) the sides rise up in a steep slope of about one hundred feet, like a huge oblong stewpan, thus offering an admirable sort of amphitheatre, in which people sitting on the ground are well raised one above another. But this advantage was coupled with some risk, for when quarrels arose, as was inevitable when ten or eleven thousand people of all classes are gathered together, the combatants rolled over, and, coming down upon their neighbours, produced a sort of avalanche of human beings, and clouds of dust, which were with difficulty allayed by the police, who drew bright swords and pretended to slash about with them, while all parties screamed and objugated, with much gesticulation.

A few rude wooden benches, one of which broke down with its occupants, were erected round the upper end of the stadium, and here the ephebi took their places for a fee of three drachms each. When I thought of the two obols in old days to hear several plays of Æschylus and Aristophanes and their compeers, it seemed to me that the price of things had risen at Athens. The course seemed not in the condition to be expected from the greatness of the occasion. Part of it, near the entrance, was in ridges like a potato-field; further up there was a straight pole about thirty feet high; and near it a green poor of stagnant water some seven or eight feet wide, for the purpose of long jumping with a pole. There was also an oblique pole for climbing with the hands, like the ladders in our gymnasia. This completed the arrangements. As for the keeping of the course nothing could be more ridiculous. The whole circuit of the stadium was pompously lined with soldiers; but the crowd pushed through them and formed rings in the middle of the course as the excitement increased, nor was any one disturbed, except by some very mild expostulation. People walked about as they pleased, and some accidents were very narrowly avoided.

The sports opened with a flat race of about two hundred yards up the stadium. Four competitors started. This was a good entry, as the whole number of competitors was not above twenty-five. They were all dressed in gray check shirts, fashionable fitting gray trousers, and tight well blacked spring-sided boots. In the middle of the race they overtook a very fat old lady, with two our dogs walking up the course before them, and with whose right of doing so no one dreamt of interfering. So the runners had to thread their way between the old lady and the dogs. After some time they approached a gentleman in a tail-coat and white tie, who had added to his costume a blue silk sash, and who held in his hand a flag. This the winner seized and danced about, waving it to the multitude, who cheered him vigorously. Then all the dogs began to bark, and the band began to play, and everybody looked very much pleased.

Next came the climbing of the straight pole. Here again four presented themselves; and here, as in every case, they were walked up to a table, where a man in a tail-coat and white tie took down their names, and I suppose their parents' names and ages and addresses also, for he was tediously long about it. After they had stood in military posture during the process they marched off to the course. One of them really showed great quickness in going up the pole, and would certainly prove a dangerous neighbor to an orchard. This performance was the best in the whole meeting. It was consequently not at all so amusing as the succeeding contest of jumping the stagnant pool with the pole. Most of the athletes with difficulty rose into the air by holding the middle of the pole and then climbing up in order to fall out as far as possible on the opposite bank. And fall they did, into the deep dust; especially one little man, who alighted twice in a violent sitting posture, but the third time got the pole between his legs and seemed certain to meet with a dangerous accident. But luck seemed ever in his favour, for in a subsequent trial he planted the pole against the opposite bank, so that it snapped when he rose, and ought to have killed him; whereas he only alighted with a great splash in the pool, and defiled the spotless dress
