HONEST TEMPERANCE.

How Prohibition Works Where Popular Sentiment Does Not Support It.

Burlington, Ia., Oct. 3.—[Correspondence New York World.]—Robert Graham, a well-known English temperance lecturer, now Secretary of the Church Temperance Society of New York City, declared that his observation and experience have taught him that prohibition not only is an utter failure, amounting to free rum in large cities, but even in small cities has not been successful. On this point he says: "I was in Maine recently, and during my week in Portland, of forty-one arrests thirty-two were for drunkenness. I spoke to twenty prominent citizens, and ten were strongly opposed to the tyranny of the law. Clubs of boys and young men with lock cupboards were numerous, and a man who had been three times imprisoned for breaches of excise had been lately returned to the council. In Bangor the mayor had entered into a tacit compact with the liquor dealers that the law should be held in abeyance if they closed early Saturday night and Sunday."

[And these were the results of thirty-two years of Neal Dow's double and twisted system of coercive teetotalism.]

Up to two years ago Iowa was a high-license State, and then adopted prohibition. The following table shows that the change resulted, in nearly every instance, in an increase in the number of saloons and, therefore, an increase in the temptation to drink:

	Population.	Saloons under license.	Under Prohibition
Des Moines	37,900	70	175
Davenport	28,000	133	175
Dubuque	23,000	124	250
Burlington	20,000	50	100
Sioux City	20,000	40	89
Ottumwa	12,000	22	43
Keokuk	12,000	27	40
Marshalltown	10,000	16	23
Clinton	12,000	45	70
Council Bluffs	30,000	65	64
Iowa City	10,000	40	29
Cedar Rapids	18,000	7	100

In Iowa they issue what are called "pop licenses"—that is, allowing the use of what they call pop, and the drinking of intoxicating liquors takes place under these licenses, so that there was no increase in the number of regular saloons. Charles Sabin, the City Marshall of Marshalltown, says: "There are thirty three open saloons here now and seven drug stores." We had sixteen saloons two years ago under a $500 license. There are a great many secret places. The sentiment is opposed to enforcing the law, and the police would not be sustained in suppressing the traffic." S. M. Marsh, the District Attorney of Sioux City, says: "We have about eighty saloons, exclusive of drug stores and breweries. The number has increased in the last two years. No one seems to attempt or expect to enforce the law. Before the law our grand jury would indict saloonkeepers. Now it refuses to do so."

Kansas passed the Prohibitory law in 1885. It has reduced the number of its saloons and breweries, but in their place the rum selling drug stores have multiplied wonderfully under the provision of the law of last year, which throws the sale of liquors for "medicinal, mechanical, and chemical purposes" into the hands of the druggists. The druggist must be licensed by the Probate Court, but as the judge derives a revenue from every drug-store sale, he readily grants a license to the applicant. The applicant for liquor signs a printed blank specifying his diseases, and these applications are filed with the Judge, who has a fee of five cents each for storing them. The income of these officers has risen under this provision from about $1,500 a year to $5,000 or $15,000, according to the number of stores in his district. In other words, the Kansas saloons have been nominally reduced in numbers, only to be replaced by the Kansas "drug store." The wholesale liquor-dealers of Kansas City, Mo., each keep two drummers constantly employed in Kansas. The United States Internal Revenue Collector's books show that 1,894 permits to retail liquor were issued in 1881, 1773 in 1885, 2,832 last year, and for the fiscal year which has now begun the number is expected to reach 3,000.

The experience of the State of Missouri furnishes a most forcible argument in favor of high license as a means of diminishing the evils of the liquor traffic. "In 1882," says the St. Louis Republican, in which year the high license system was adopted, "there were 3,601 saloons in the State, paying in licenses an aggregate of $547,000. The number was large for a population of 2,300,000. Nevertheless, in four years it has been reduced nearly one-fourth, the number July 4, 1886, being only 2,800. The 2,800 now in the State yield in license fees about $1,500,000—nearly three times as much as the larger number yielded in 1882." High license increases the aggregate revenue of the city and compels the traffic to bear a large proportion of the cost of crime and pauperism, and it is believed will untimately diminish the aggregate quantity of liquor sold.

The revenues of Chicago have been increased under high license from $200,000 to $1,700,000, and the saloons reduced from 3,900 to 3,300. In Springfield, Ill., the saloons have been reduced 43 per cent, in Peoria nearly 30 per cent, in Quincy 40 per cent, in Cairo nearly 20 per cent, and in Hyde Park 50 per cent. In every instance the revenues to the Government have been great increased and the character of the saloons improved, except in Chicago, where the Mayor refuses to revoke licenses.

In Joliet, where the tax is $1,000, the number of saloons was reduced to one-third and the vile ones have nearly all been wiped out. In Bloomington the number was cut down 60 per cent and so of 100 other towns.

To restate the case in the light of these facts it is clear that prohibition does not and will not prohibit, while high license will close up groggeries, decrease the number of paupers, and somewhat reduce the evils of drink. But above and beyond all this high licouse is an honest and practical remedy, not a sentimental fraud. For it faces squarely the truth that the great majority of upright, intelligent people of sober lives, who abhor drunkenness, do not regard total abstinence as the only temperance. Prof. Brewer, of Iowa, an old-time Prohibitionist, confesses that the daily habit of 45 per cent of the people of Iowa is not squared with total abstinence. If this is true of a rural State like Iowa it is of course true of older State that contain many large cities and towns. It is not only not true that all men who use stimulating beverages at all ultimately drift into excess of drunkenness, but it is not true that any very large proportion of them do. The fallacy of the prohibition statistics on this subject was thoroughly exposed a year ago in an able article in the North American Review. The argument that all money spent for stimulating drinks is wasted proves altogether to much; it can be logically extened to all commodities that stand for frivolous taste, for luxury, for worldly folly and vanity. It is as good against the turtle, the turbot, the oyster, and the lobster salad that accompany the champagne as it is against the champagne itself. It is as good against the expensive plume of feathers, the diamond, and silks worn by the total-abstinence woman as it is against the cup of wine quaffed by her lover. Total abstinence is the fundamental principle of the so-called policy of prohibition, and so small a portion of mankind believe and practice this that it rests for life on pretense in action and demagogy in speech. A vast number of people do believe in and practice temperance who do not believe in or practice total abstinence, and for this reason we say that high license rests on an honest conviction for its public support.

A REAL NECESSITY.

We presume there is hardly a lady to be found in our broad land who if she does not already possess a sewing machine, expects some day to become the owner of one.

But after the mind has been fullly made up to purchase one of these indispensable articles, the question arises as to what kind of a machine to buy.

It should be so simply constructed that the most inexperienced can successfully operate it. The other points mainly to be considered, and which are the most desirable, are durability, rapidity, capacity for work, ease of operation, regularity of motion, uniformity of tension, and silence while in operation.

The "Light Running New Home" fills the above requirements, and is said to combine the good points of all sewing machines, with the addition of many new improvements and labor-saving devices.

The price is no higher than that of other machines, and every lady who is the happy possessor of one may rest assured she has indeed a treasure. See advertisement.
