Priceville

This week we will try to give a brief and historical sketch as possible of the gravel road, Glenelg and in do ing so we will make our starting place at the corner of Princess Street, at Mrs Butter's Hotel.

On a beautiful and frosty morning in the month of November we started out pretty early knowing we had a big day's journey ahead and letting our imagination have its course we fancied that we would land safely at Bunessan before dark even though we use the old method of travelling on foot, and before the obliging Post master. Mr Gray closes the office.

So now as time is passing on we must be passing on too.

Mrs Butters keeps a good House and a large number of boarders chiefly Railroaders find good accommodation there. Across the street are J. McArthur & Son, with shutters off early preparing to do a rushing business for the day. Peter is always found at his post waiting on numerous customers and always obliging.

Mr and Mrs Brander although getting on the decline carries on a dry good store besides other business and receives a good share of pat onage. Across the street is the old McAulley place. Mrs McAulley is living there yet, being a resident of over fifty years; the venerable lady is quite smart for her age.

We cannot pass the good old Presbyterian church without taking a note of its fine appearance and accommodations for both man and beast in their proper places and all we can say is "Pray that Jerusalem may have peace and felicity, let those that love thee and thy people have still prosperity."

But we must pass on. John McRae is busy blacksmithing, obliging as ever and doing a good business in that line.

Mr Ross our good tailor is next he with his good daughter Miss Ross, one of our teachers, are the only members in the family.

In passing the old cemetery, we halt and in viewing the common slabs and tall monuments that mark the resting place of the dead, we cannot fail to have the thought that here rests the remains of some near and dear ones who have passed from the scenes of action many years ago.

Mr McLachlin and Willie Conkey's residences are next. Willie is pump-maker and doing a good business. Down lower is Mr Hector McKinnon an old retired farmer living alone generally, but his good daughter and grand-daughter looks to his comfort too.

On the opposite side is the old Simpson residence. The old people are gone and now the place is kept by the daughter Mrs McArthur and her daughter Jennie.

Dan McInnis and John Brown's residences are a little farther up the town line.

Now we climb the 'Highland hill.' In olden times there stood two hotels on the hill top this being the original Priceville over 50 years ago. No local option on the hill top then! but now we must pass on as dry as usual for there is nothing left of these once busy hostelries but a few old rotten logs to mark the place.

Now we are out of town and as the farmers feed us all there will be no necessity of going hungry, and we call on Sandy Livingstone and we are sorry to find him not as active as he was long ago when stage driving from Durham to Maxwell.

On the opposite side is John Stothart; had a new barn erected a couple of years ago. It is said the new Railway station is to be on his place but not quite certain.

Thos Nichol is next. has a good veneered residence and fine frame barn, Railroad going right across centre of his place. Tom is always a good fellow at home and abroad. Crossing the road to the south we come to the residence of Mr John Nichol, Sr. Mr Nichol has a beautiful brick dwelling and a large frame barn with all the conveniences required. Mr Nichol and family are good supporters in church matters, as well as every other good cause. Mr Nichol's farm was originally the old Robertson farm being the residence of the late tailor Robertson of Durham, in olden times. On the opposite side is Angus McKechnie, son of the late John McKechnie, teacher. Angus is always foremost on duties on the farm. The railroad comes to the corner of his barn and takes a direct course across the farm.

Again on the south side is John McKechnie on the late Arch Robertson's farm. John spent a few years in Dakota but preferred making his home in the place of his birth. Mr McKechnie was unfortunate in losing his first wife, a fine young lady, but was fortunate in course of years to replace her by getting one of Artemesia's finest damsels. Crossing again the highway we come to the home of John Nichol, Jr. John got a new barn up last summer in place of one burnt by lightning over a year ago. John and his young bride look the picture of happiness. Back again we visit the McLachlan boys, three pushing young fellows, run an extensive farm. None of them married, their aged mother being the only housekeeper, fine young men, doing well. Willie McLeod is along side of McLachlin's on the old Ferguson place. Willie bought the late H McDonald's estate. South line and is doing well.

We come now to the residence of Duncan McDonald, being on the old McLeod and McLellan farms originally. The Railroad passes a few rods south of the dwelling house. Mrs McDonald enjoyed a couple of months of well earned holidays during summer, visiting her brother Hugh and John McInnes and sister Mrs Shannon, in the Northwest. John and family, late residents of this place, are greatly missed since their removal from our midst. Opposite is the old McLachlan farm the late John "Ban." Mrs McLachlan has it rented to the McLachlan boys.

Along side is Malcolm McPhail, being the McArthur place originally. Malcolm's son Neil runs the place and is doing well, being a good worker at home and elsewhere.

Now we come to the place where we spent our boyhood days. Opposite McArthur's the residence of late Arch McDonald, now owned by his son Hugh and other members of the family and as we were taking a short cut as in days of old to the house, our attention was directed, while getting over the fence that here lies some of the relics of the old school house, where we received our scanty education and as we gazed upon the four corners, which are still visible, our thoughts were directed first to the master builder, who in our estimation was the best man living, (as every dutiful son does towards a dutiful father), second, to the time since these corners were built being 54 years ago, third, to the corner builders, who were the late John and Neil McLachlin and late Hector McLean and Robt McDonald, who is yet enjoying good health at over 80 years, in Montpelier, U S A, and fourth, to the thought that once this unpretentious building was used for school house, church, political meetings, etc, in the early history of the place.

Amongst those who preached the gospel in simplicity were the late Rev Robt McIntyre, in his beloved language, the Gaelic, the house being always crowded. No organ was used for leading the singing for they were few and far between in those days. The late Duncan McInnes was chiefly the leader in the praise part of the service, until some years later on, some of the young men or boys rather had the audacity to undertake to lead the singing, who only knew two tunes, the one being Old Hundred and the other wasn't. The first Sunday School was opened and kept by the late John McLachlin and sister Mrs Dugald McCormick of Priceville. Mrs McCormick, (then Miss McLachlin), was a young lady who won the love of all her classes.

The Sovereign Bank of Canada

Office of the 2nd Vice-President and General Manager.

To the Shareholders, MONTREAL, 10th November, 1906.

THE SOVEREIGN BANK OF CANADA.

We have pleasure in enclosing herewith statement of the Bank's position as at the close of the fiscal half-year, ending 31st October, together with comparative statistics for the past five years. The figures require no special explanation, and we feel sure the progress and stability which they indicate will afford the proprietors and friends of the Bank complete satisfaction.

The Bank's American and Foreign business has now attained considerable importance. Our connections abroad, as well as our facilities at home, enable us to handle British, Continental and American transactions entrusted to us on a favorable basis, and the results so far have been satisfactory to all concerned.

Our principal business is, of course, confined to Canada, and is concentrated in the provinces of Ontario and Quebec, which long experience has proven to be the safest territory in the Dominion for the conduct of a general and commercial banking business. In these two provinces the Bank has 55 branches and 22 sub-offices, the latter being managed from central points, and in some instances open only two or three days a week. We have not yet opened any branches in the North-West, as competition there seems to be unusually keen, but with the undoubted progress which the country is making, these conditions will probably right themselves later on, and in the meantime we have very satisfactory banking arrangements for the conduct of our business throughout that territory.

The capital of the Bank ($4,000,000) will be fully paid up in a few months, and it is a source of great satisfaction to know that our shareholders number nearly 1,200 and include some of the most powerful financial people in the world.

The Sovereign Bank is at present the eighth largest chartered bank in Canada in point of capital. Its assets amount to $25,343,401, a large part of which are "liquid," and the continued growth of deposits testifies to the popularity of the institution throughout the country.

The Note Circulation shows an advance of 83% over last year, and both the Circulation and Deposits have increased materially since the present statement was compiled.

The past half-year is the best the Bank has ever had, and we have every reason to think that the current half-year will be at least as good.

Your obedient servant,

D. M. STEWART, General Manager.
