His work lay chiefly in Edmonton now a city of 20000 population, and which he thinks is destined to be the great city of the North West, next to Winnipeg. He has travelled with an observant eye, as we found after a pleasant half hour's chat with him. In common with all travellers he bears testimony to the anxiety over this years crop, which is certainly looking well so far. Another year like 1907 would be a serious blow.
