Pool chemistry: There's no substitute for the experienced pro

Whether you're a new pool owner, or a seasoned pro, it's always a good idea to get your water tested regularly by your local pool specialists.

For the new pool owner regular water testing can help you keep your pool sparkling, and catch any little problems before they have a chance to get bigger. Also, once your pool professional gets to know you, they can help tailor a pool care routine that's just for you.

Depending on the water in your area there are specific tips and tricks that your local pool experts can offer, to help you have the best poolside summer possible.

Your pool professional will ask you a number of questions about your pool, and how you care for it, and will also be able to do a complete water analysis in the event of any problems.

Pool chemistry is a bit of an art, and not just a science, and it's important that you are trusting your pool care to someone who is able to interpret both the test results, and the information you provide. There's a lot of good computer water-analysis programs out there, but it's best to get your pool care advice from an expert.

Water testing is a great service that can take the mystery out of pool care. So next time you're visiting your pool store, take them a sample of your water, and get some expert advice.
