Lost parrot flies around Georgetown neighbourhood

LISA TALLYN
Staff Writer

A group of residents in the Russell St. area of Georgetown are hoping the owner of a parrot that recently flew into their neighbourhood will contact them to claim the bird.

A Meyer's parrot is temporarily caged until his owner found.

Russell St. resident Sheri Martincourt said last Thursday morning she and neighbour Pierre Galipeau managed to capture the bird after they saw it fly into their area from the direction of Hwy. 7 and land on a nearby tree.

Upon closer look they discovered the bird was a parrot and although the bird wouldn't come to Martincourt when she put her finger out to it, it did fly onto her head, then started to walk down her back.

A veterinarian identified the bird as a Meyer's Parrot.

The bird, which is grey, green and yellow, is currently staying with a resident in the area.

Neighbourhood residents, including about 10 children who were on hand when the bird was found and have named the parrot Chubby, all want the bird returned to its owner.

The bird's owner, or anyone with information about the bird, is asked to call Martincourt or her daughter Jamie at 905-877-7702.
