The SNAPSHOT GUILD

CLOUD PICTURES

Clouds add much to the beauty of the sky. Include them in every picture. It's easy to do.

IT seems that too often we forget all about the fleecy white clouds, which add so much to the attractiveness and beauty of a snapshot. The average amateur will put forth great effort to secure sharpness, contrast and good composition in his ground subject and then completely overlook the possibilities of beautiful cloud effects.

One thing that really adds to the interest in a landscape picture is clouds. Suppose we are taking such a picture and use a film which responds only to ultra-violet, violet, and blue light. We should not be able to distinguish between the clouds and sky if we give enough exposure to show detail in the landscape. This is because the light from the blue sky and the white clouds is very rich in light rays to which the film responds.

Although clouds and blue sky are both rich in ultra-violet, violet and blue, there is a marked difference between the two. The lights from the clouds, being white, actually contain, however, a lot of green and red light, while that from the blue sky does not.

This then, suggests a way to effectively show clouds and sky in a snapshot. We must use a film which will respond to green, or to green and red light, and put over the lens a filter which does not let through the ultra-violet, violet and blue. The green or green and red light from the clouds will thus affect the film, while practically no light from the sky will get through to it, and in the finished print, the clouds will appear whiter than the sky.

Some film is sensitive to green light only but super-sensitive panchromatic film will respond to both green and red light. All these films will, therefore, show up the clouds against the sky if used with a yellow filter.

From time to time you have perhaps heard of "filter factors". Here's what it means. Since the filter cuts out some of the light which would otherwise affect the film, a longer exposure must be given. The amount by which the exposure must be increased is known as the "factor" of the filter. It is noted by the number of times the exposure must be increased when using a color filter, as compared with the exposure without one.

The deeper the yellow color in the filter the more violet and blue it removes, or "holds back". The greater the "factor" the more the exposure must be increased.

As you will no doubt surmise, there are various types of filters and each type has its limitations. In choosing a filter you must make your own decision based on your general requirements.

If you do not want to seriously consider filter "factors" there is a filter known as a Sky Filter used extensively by amateurs to photograph clouds in a landscape with no increase in exposure time. Half of this filter is yellow and the other half clear. This filter can be used without increasing the exposure because the sky is photographed through the yellow part while the landscape, or general subject is photographed through the lower half, which is not colored. Yes, you can even get clouds with a silver lining.

SWINTON PARK

And this is another week! Harvest is nearly done; you are all tired, but we hope you will be able to take off a couple of days to visit the C.N.E. and benefit by the display, not only of farm produce, but the inventions and experience of people all over the world. Even a walk down the Midway will help after all the hard work and strengthen us for the days to come.

While we cannot travel, we enjoy meeting those who can and last week we enjoyed a call from our old neighbor, John L. MacDonald, wife and son Hugh. John has had long experience in the schools of Ottawa, and has this year received another promotion. Long may he continue.

Sunday morning we enjoyed an hour's chat with Mr. Chas. Mundy, president of the Mundy-Goodfellow Printing Co. of Oshawa, a man who has travelled far and in a quiet manner can make you see the sights.

Then on Monday evening our good friend across the road, Marjorie McLeod, R.N., came in and with map and pencil, took us over the 2000 mile trip, from which she with three lady companions, has just returned, pointing out hill and dale, mountain and cave, city and hamlet of interest, as far south as the mammoth caves of old Kentucky, and giving a goodly measure of praise to our American cousins for their painstaking and time, in directing the better way to see the places of beauty and note. We enjoyed the trip as seen by young and capable eyes.

Mrs. Hugh McMillan spent last week at Wasaga Beach with son Donald and other friends.

Mrs. Delbert Haw who has been over at Bayfield helping her mother for three weeks, came home the other day, leaving her mother not very well

Mrs. Christena Ferguson of the Park, enjoyed a visit from her cousins, the Misses McNeal of Drafton, last week.

As we drove up through the Park last week, we noticed all the new hydro poles and wire now strung; also many of the houses and barns ready-wired, expecting the power on in about a month. About 20 places are being lit up: surely a great change from the old candle of 80 years ago. Times do improve, and in many cases the days will be longer, especially for the hens, as the electric light is supposed to make them do extra work

Sorry to hear that our village blacksmith is thinking of taking his departure. He will be missed, being a good mechanic.

Glad to hear that Ross Hill is gaining in health and hope he may soon be up and out again. We are all thinking of you, Ross.

A young man of ability conducted service in the Presbyterian church last Sunday, Mr. Taylor being away on holidays. He will also be here next Sunday. He is an earnest and fluent speaker.

Swinton Park corr.:

Mrs. Jno. Aldcorn and Mrs. Neil McLeod are at present nursing some bad bruises, all as the result of a runaway, which occurred on Wednesday last when the ladies were going to the Ladies' Aid at Mr J. L. Ferguson's. The horse became frightened, overturned the buggy, throwing the occupants out and was soon free of harness and buggy, and it ran to Sackett's Corner before being caught. The ladies were taken in to Mr Witter's and medical aid was summoned. Although they are badly shakened up and bruised, we hope to see them about as usual in a short time.

North-East Normanby Corr: Miss Mary McAlister returned last Friday from spending a 6 week holiday with her sister, Mrs. E. Hoy of Welland.

Holstein Corr: A serious tragedy was enacted in our village Sunday. One of our citizens was missing early that morning. Various rumours were in circulation regarding the mysterious disappearance. It was even thought by some the mill pond would be the spot to find the missing man and when evening came on and still no news, some of the most interested ones decided to try opening the window of the room in his dwelling. Scarcely had the window been raised when it was immediately closed down from inside and the voice that was supposed to be stilled by death was heard in no uncertain sound, ordering the would-be friends to mind their own business.
