The boy that could fly

Once upon a time there was a boy that could fly.

Every day he would fly to the clouds and one time when he went to the clouds he found a bird. He took him home and then when he went to the clouds there was a storm and the storm made the boy get lost and it blew the boy to New York.

He did not know the way home. He went to the store. He asked if he could have some food and the man said not unless you have some money. And he said no. So you can't have any food.

The boy said, I don't live in this country, so the man gave the boy some food. He was hungry. He gave the boy a hamburger and he went out of the store.

He went to a house and the man said come in. He was really bad and the boy tried to fly out the door and he did. He flew to the clouds, so no-one could see him.

His Mom and Dad were flying to look for him. He could fly higher than his Dad and Mom. He went down to the country but he did not know which country he was in.

He was thinking that he was still in New York. Then he saw one of his friends. He said, am I in Canada? Yes, why did you ask me? I was lost in New York.

NEW YORK! How did you get to New York? I have wings and I can fly. He said to his friend, where is my street? His friend said way, way down the road.

He walked and walked until he got home. He went to his Dad and Mom and said I was flying but I forgot I was flying and there was a storm and it made me get lost.

And then he went to bed.

Looking forward to spring

When is it spring?
When raindrops fall to the ground,

When the flowers grow everywhere,

When the grass begins to get greener everyday,

When there's something magic in the air,
When we hear baby robins sing,
We're absolutely sure it's SPRING!

Le pays de mon coeur

Tu es froid,
Tu es sombre,
Tu es humide.
Mais, tu es aussi brillant,
Et je te cheris avec tout mon coeur.

Depuis que je suis absent tu me manques.
Tu me manques beaucoup.

The Santa Claus parade

When we went to the Santa Claus Parade, it was funny.

The clowns were upside-down. The Pipers were playing Jingle Bells.

They were wearing skirts. They were red and black and brown.
