Arnott 'pleased' Tory agrees to vote on faith-based school funding issue

Progressive Conservative leader John Tory's assurance Monday that before extending public funding to private faith-based schools the issue would be put to a free vote in the Legislature is welcome news to Wellington-Halton Hills PC candidate Ted Arnott.

Arnott said he was "very pleased" Tory is allowing a free vote.

"It gives us as MPPs, if we are re-elected, an opportunity to consult with our constituents on the issue," said Arnott.

Arnott said he is a supporter of the public education system and of funding to the Catholic system, but in an interview with this newspaper yesterday refused to say whether or not he personally supports the controversial $400 million scheme to fund faith-based schools.

"I have listened to the people of Wellington-Halton Hills who have questions and concerns about Mr. Tory's proposal to fund faith-based schools. For the past six weeks I have explained his idea, while at the same time spoken in support of our existing publicly-funded system," he said in a press release issued Monday.

Arnott said he would consult extensively with the public if a bill on extending faith based school funding were introduced.

"I would want to hold public meetings in our riding to determine how my constituents would expect me to vote. I would want to take an Internet poll on my Web site, and also do a mail survey if time permitted," said Arnott.

He said he, "would listen to everyone, apply my own experience and judgment, and only then make my decision as to how I would vote on such a bill."

Over the past 17 years Arnott said he's always welcomed the advice of his constituents before representing them in the legislature.

"I could not ignore the wishes of the vast majority of my constituents."

Crews respond to minor fires

Halton Hills firefighters were called to a Sixth Line home Thursday evening (7:30 p.m.) for a garden tractor fire. A short in the wiring to the headlights was the cause. Damage is estimated at $100.

Fire crews responded to a smoke alarm activation at a Queen St., Georgetown apartment building Friday at about 3:30 p.m. When they arrived they found a smoke alarm sounding in one of the apartments and could smell something burning.

Firefighters forced their way into the apartment and found an unattended candle burning next to some combustible items. Damage was minimal.

"Respected by his Caucus and Opposition colleagues alike, Ted Arnott, the unassuming Waterloo-Wellington Conservative MPP, has long been known as one of the most decent politicians at Queen's Park."
