A NOTED STAGE ROBBER.

"BLACK BART," WHO TERRORIZED THE PACIFIC SLOPE.

This Picturesque California Highwayman Came From Near Alexandria Bay—His Chequered Career Outlined.

The last issue of the Utica (N.Y.) Saturday Globe contains the article printed below, but there are some things about the noted stage robber that the Globe has not mentioned. The highwayman, Charles E. Bolton by name, was born not far south of Alexandria Bay, N.Y., where relatives still reside. When gold was first discovered in California, there was a rush of young men to that country. A number of Canadians from that district formed a party to go to the gold fields. This, if the writer is not mistaken, was in '49. The party sailed from New York, crossed the isthmus of Panama, and sailed up the Pacific coast to San Francisco. In this party was Charles E. Bolton, a genial, manly fellow, who was the life of the crowd. Some years after his companions were greatly surprised to hear that he had been convicted of highway robbery and sentenced to a number of years' imprisonment at San Quentin prison. Some of the facts stated below are not in accordance with the many stories told to the writer by one these "forty-niners." The article from the Globe is as follows:

There is good reason to believe that Black Bart, the boldest and most notorious highwayman ever known in California, is operating again. The five robberies of stage and coach on lonely mountain roads in northern California and southern Arizona during the last few months have abundant earmarks of the famous lone highwayman of the Sierras. More than this, two of the passengers in the held-up stages knew something of the Black Bart when he held central California in terror twenty years ago, and, from his speech and figure, are sure that their robber is the noted bandit. Moreover, no one seems to know what has become of him since his release from prison at San Quentin, where he had been sentenced for eight years.

Like Jekyll And Hyde.

The trial of Black Bart for highway robbery in Visalia, Cal., in May, 1884, revealed a mass of information about this unusual bandit. For seventeen years highway robberies by Black Bart had taken place at intervals and in least expected localities, all the way from Portland, Ore., to Yuma, Ariz.

His arrest came about in this way. In March, 1884, the stage coach that travelled the rough road over the desolate hills and through the lonely gulches from a gold mining camp in the Sierras to Marysville, Cal., was held up by a masked lone highwayman, whom the driver and all the passengers recognized by his manners and speech as none other than Black Bart. The veteran highwayman had reduced his mode of robbery to a science, and when he had quickly harvested a crop of gold watches, purses and bits of jewelery, he shouted to the driver to go ahead.

When the coach had rumbled out of sight on the way down the mountain side Black Bart turned his attention to splitting open the wooden box containing the Wells-Fargo express company's treasure. Something must have disturbed the highwayman while he was gathering up the money from the treasure box, for when the stage coach passengers had armed themselves at the next station and hurried back to the scene later in the day, they found among the debris of papers, empty purses and wrappings of parcels a linen cuff. The robber had evidently dropped it in a hurried flight to his refuge.

The cuff was turned over to the express company detectives. They found after weeks of inquiry, that the indelible laundry marks were those of a Chinese laundry on Bush street, in San Francisco. When the detectives had learned from the Chinese laundryman that the marks on the cuff indicated that it belonged to one Charles E. Bolton, a regular patron of the laundry, they set about to hunt up Mr. Bolton. It came out that Charles E. Bolton, who owned the cuff, was a quiet, unobtrusive, spare man of about fifty years. He lived in a modest and quiet boarding house, where sedate, old-fashioned business men had rooms, and

Every One Was His Friend.

When a detective went to live in the same boarding house he found that Mr. Bolton was a studious man, lived a correct life, was a reader of new books, dabbled in poetry, and every few weeks went away to visit one of the several little mines about California in which he had investments. Bolton was an expert whist player, and evidently he had travelled far and wide in his early life. His hobby was water colors, and he spent whole days in painting bucolic scenes alone in his rooms. Then when he had dined in style along with the other bachelors in the boarding house he went alone to the theatre, where he took the least conspicuous seat. He never got mail and never sent letters, but he devoured the daily newspapers at times. Nevertheless, it did not take the detective long to connect this quiet, polished gentleman with the most dreaded outlaw in California.

For seventeen years he had kept half the sheriffs and constables, a lot of detectives, and all the United States marshals in California ceaselessly watchful for a fresh deed by Black Bart. He had many a time walked down to a local bank carrying a snug fortune in his gripsack—the proceeds of a recent affair out on "the road"—pass hundreds of San Francisco people, while they were excitedly discussing

Black Bart's Latest Hold-up.

The outlaw was convicted and because of his confession and apparent determination to lead a new life he was sentenced to San Quentin prison for only eight years. He was a model prisoner, and he earned all the commutation of his sentence for good conduct. He was liberated in July, 1890. For a few days he lived in Sacramento, waiting, he said, until he got some money from eastern relatives, when he meant to go to Seattle and earn an honest living. Then the man disappeared.

There is no doubt in the minds of the officials who participated in Black Bart's capture before, but that the accomplished stage robber is again at work and will once more lead the officers of the law a merry chase before he is apprehended.

A WARNING CRY.

Next Four Years Will be Crucial Years For Canada.

"The next four years will be crucial years in the west; every day's work done now will tell; and the night cometh soon—the night cometh so soon." These words come as a voice from the dead. They were written by the late Rev. Dr. Robertson, superintendent of Presbyterian missions in the Canadian north-west in his last appeal to the church, and which was undelivered when he passed away. Why the next four years? The Westminster answers this question. It is because settlement is going on at the present time with rapid strides along the line of the C.P.R., and a vast tract of country, rich in mineral, agricultural and timber resources is being opened up by the new transcontinental line, the Canadian Northern railway. Within the next four years the wilderness will be peopled, new villages will be located, and towns will spring up almost in a night. From eastern Canada, from the United States, from Britain, from central and northern Europe, from the ends of the earth they are coming, who in five years will be homesteaders in the west, and upon whom, as the foundation, western civilization is to be built.

The Westminster calls upon the theological colleges and upon the people of the Presbyterian church to gird themselves for the great task before them. If Canada is to continue a God-fearing nation, her people must follow up the settlers now pouring in, christianize them, and establish churches. The United States serves as a sad object lesson. That great republic failed to keep up with the colonization of the country, and now will never overtake the stream of settlement. The christian people of Canada have put their hand to the plough, and must not turn back.

Agricultural Societies.

Prince Edward agricultural society elected these officers on Wednesday: John A. Sprague, president; John V. Cooper, vice-president; G. N. Rose, second vice-president; directors, A. G. McDonald, Sidney Stanton, W. C. Gorsline, D. H. Fraser, W. T. Shaw, John Vancleaf, P. R. Young, Edward Grinnon, W. J. Jamieson; secretary-treasurer, Thomas Bog; auditors, James Gibson and Luther Platt. The thanks of the society were given to the several donors of special prizes. According to the secretary's report the expense of keeping the track in repair for the last four years was $142. The track tickets sold amounted to $50; loss, $92.

The annual election of the Cape Vincent agricultural society took place January 11th. C. C. Cook succeeded himself as president; Joseph Bates succeeded himself as first vice-president and Frank Desengremel as second vice-president; C. B. Wood succeeded himself as treasurer, and F. T. Burdick as secretary. Although last year was a cold season, the annual report showed fairly well, having expended several hundred dollars in improvements.

An Appeal To Mothers.

To Protect The Little Ones From Coughs and Colds That so Frequently Lead to Consumption in Later Years.

It is possible that you have been accustomed to consider that every advertisement is for the benefit of the advertiser only. In this you have been mistaken, as you will probably admit if you read about Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine, and have an opportunity of testing its value in your family.

Every mother is anxious to learn of effective means of combating the ills which cause her children to suffer. Many have learned how to conquer croup, bronchitis, whooping cough, sore throat, sever coughs and colds, by reading the advertisements of Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine. Some mothers have even taken the trouble to write letters thanking us for making known to the public the merits of this great cough and cold medicine. They realized that to them the advertising was news of great value.

It almost seems like wasting space to tell of Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine. So many know about it, have tested its virtues, and seek its healing power whenever in need of treatment for throat and lungs. But there are many rivals and many imitations. Hosts of druggists stand ready to offer a substitute if the buyer is not firm in his demands for the genuine and reliable Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine.

You cannot afford to let your child's cold run on and on, developing into chronic bronchitis, serious lung trouble or consumption. You cannot plead ignorance of effective treatment. Prudence suggests the wisdom of keeping Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine in the house all the time to protect the children, and grown people as well, from the ills of cold weather. 25 cents a bottle. Family size, 60 cents. At all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto.

THE DETECTIVE RESIGNS.

WAS HERO OF THE PHOENIX PARK TRAGEDIES.

Unravelled, the Conspiracy—Was Prominent in Several: Captures of Noted Fenians and Irish Party Leaders.

London, Jan. 20.—William Vesey Harrel has been appointed assistant commissioner of the Dublin metropolitan police, in the room of John Mallon, resigned. That simple communique recalls some of the most interesting chapters in the political history of Ireland, during the last half-century, in which Mr. Mallon played an exceedingly significant part.

In the days of the Fenian conspiracy Mr. Mallon rendered invaluable service to the authorities. He was one of the officers who in 1865 effected the seizure of the Irish People, the organ of the Fenian brotherhood, when the types and presses were seized and all on the premises placed under arrest.

Later on in the same year he secured the arrest of James Stephens, the Fenian head centre, whose death took place some months ago.

In the days of the land league Mr. Mallon again came to the front. He it was who, on October 13th, 1881, effected the historic arrest of Charles Stewart Parnell, in Morrison's hotel, Dublin. A few days later he performed a similar duty towards Michael Davitt, who had not been long released from penal servitude, and shortly afterwards he engineered the seizure of William O'Brien's paper, United Ireland. It was, however, in connection with the Phoenix Park assassinations on May 6th, 1882, that Mr. Mallon made his mark as a great criminal detective. Slowly but surely he unravelled the tangled web, and it was his marvellous tact and consummate knowledge of human character, based on an almost unrivalled experience, that finally led up to the confession of Carey, the arrests of Bradley, Curley, Kelly, Mullee, Fitzharris, and the other invincibles, and the final ending of the drama on the scaffold or in the penal cell.

ARE QUITE ALARMED.

Over The Acts Of The Germans at Metz.

Paris, Jan. 20.—The Liberte prints in italics an alarmist special despatch from Nancy, which states that there has been an extraordinary strengthening of the German forces at Metz, thirty-five miles away, and that great quantities of supplies have been accumulated there. The Liberte, which apparently desired to make the most of its scare, interviewed a French officer on the matter. This officer declared that the French intelligence department was very much alarmed at these preparations, which were out of all proportion to what was necessary to keep the German garrison on a peace footing.

The Temps says that all the state alliances are on unstable equilibrium. The Temps adds that the recent advances of emperor William toward America are very significant.

FATHER NOW ACCUSED.

Think Hired Man Did Not Kill James Geucher.

Ottawa, Jan. 20.—James Geucher of Kippewa has been arrested and lodged in Bryson jail on the charge of murdering his fifteen-year-old son who was found dead from gunshot wounds. The hired man was at first suspected of the deed, but the detectives now claim to have strong evidence against the father.

Britain's King And Queen.

As to the coronation musical programme, it is expected that the king will direct it to be much shorter than the one gone through at his mother's coronation, when four anthems were sung, besides the chanting of the Litany and the Te Deum, and the performance of the Hallelujah chorus. The service took close upon four hours.

Queen Alexandra comes of a long-living, well-wearing race; therefore her almost girlish appearance at fifty-seven years of age can be explained. Many ladies, years younger than her majesty, and with every toilette at their command, find it impossible to compete with her in personal attraction though their beauty may once have been great.

Delta Fair Association.

Delta, Jan. 20.—At the annual meeting of the Delta fair the following officers were elected: President, H. E. Eyre; first vice-president, D. D. Delong; second vice-president, Philip Halladay; auditors, Alexander Stevens; J. W. Russell; directors, W. M. Bass, R. J. Green, Hilliard Howard, Omer Brown, John Bowser, Arch Stevens, John Imerson, Alexander Atcheson.

The society commences the year with not one dollar of debt, and a surplus of $243.02. At the meeting of the new board L. N. Phelps was re-elected secretary, and W. A. Bell, treasurer. The fair will be held on September 23rd and 24th.

Big Surplus On Hand.

The annual meeting of the Bay of Quinte railway mutual aid association was held in Napanee on the 13th inst., when these officers were elected: Honorary president, H. B. Sherwood; president, M. Parks; vice-president, M. C. Dunn; secretary, D. A. Valleau; treasurer, C. A. Millener; directors, W. H. Robinson and Thomas Carr, for trackmen; M. Walker and J. Young for locomotive; T. Easterbrooke and H. Whiting, for trainmen; W. C. Weir and D. Axford, for agents.

The financial statement showed receipts to be $2,366.78; disbursements, $288.50; balance, $2,366.78.

Catarrh For Twenty Years and Cured In a Few Days.

Hon. George James, of Scranton, Pa., says: "I have been a martyr to Catarrh for twenty years, constant hawking, dropping in the throat and pain in the head, very offensive breath. I tried Dr. Agnew's Catarrhal Powder. The first application gave instant relief. After using a few bottles I was cured. 50 cents. Sold by E. C. Mitchell.—1.

IN LOVING MEMORY.

A Tribute to the Late Rev. Samuel Houston, M.A.

At the conclusion of his sermon in St. Andrew's church on Sunday morning, Rev. Mr. Mackie referred to the death of Rev. Samuel Houston, M.A., late minister of Cooke's church, Kingston, in these words:

"I desire to pay my tribute of respect to the memory of Rev. Samuel Houston, the news of whose death must have come to all of us as a painful surprise. Of fine physical form, and robust health all the years, and showing no signs of advancing age or growing infirmity, he suddenly dropped out of a life of activity and anxiety combined into the rest and peace of immortality through Jesus Christ. Passionately fond of his native land, as all good men are, he doubtless had his wish fulfilled, when, in Belfast, he breathed his last breath and his mortal remains were reverently laid in the Irish graveyard till the day break and the shadows flee away.

"Standing in solemnity of thought by that grave, into which the coffin has been lowered, we say to the mourning friends around; to the bereaved dear ones in far off Omaha, all unconscious of the approaching loss; to the people of Kingston, and friends almost everywhere throughout the dominion—there lies a man who with independent spirit, scholarly mind and faithful heart, discharged the duties of a long and arduous ministry, according to the ability given him of God, and in a manner that men and circumstances mainly fashioned.

"Having had several charges, and none of them sufficiently large to engross his whole time, he continued to keep up his studies to an extent that ministers in similar positions seldom succeed in doing. Especially did he do so in Latin, Greek, Hebrew, making the dead languages living ones to him; while at the same time, ever able to exchange views on the most recent publications of biblical students. Nor yet was his time wholly taken up by ministerial and student work. He was an ecclesiastic as well. His services to the presbytery and the church at large, were many diverse and ungrudgingly given, and no one had a better practical knowledge of the real work and state of the presbytery or a clearer understanding of ecclesiastical procedure than he. So that he was recognized as a leader in presbytery work and a chief adviser in cases of doubt and difficulty.

"Nor did he confine his time and attention to his own things and the things of his church; he looked out on the things of others. The bible society, ministerial association, evangelical alliance, religious conventions, conferences, movements far and near received his patronage and helpful effort; while as a pleasing pastime he turned to antiquarian questions and historical research, and as a member of the historical society of Kingston often contributed the fruits of his labors.

"Yet in this case, as in many, we see and understand and value the man better in death than we did in life. We wonder when we see many a man inferior in scholarship, in ministerial service, and personal worth to Mr. Houston, occupying high position, receiving bountiful remuneration and wearing badges of honor. We regret that he went without his due, but what recks he now. He sees His face and it sufficeth."

Coronation Babies.

London, Jan. 20.—A great many suitable names for girl babies born this coronation year have been suggested.

Among them are Corona, Coronatia, Rona, and Edwarda. Queenie is a far-fetched attempt, and some correspondents have even proposed names compounded from those of king Edward and queen Alexandra.

For the boys the names Coron, Coronius, Coronatius, Edward and King are popular.

Coronius for a boy and Corona for a girl are the two most popular of all.

All kinds of most expensive trinkets are being made ready for the coronation. There will be the king's crown in miniature as a brooch, and queen Alexandra's crown will be represented luxuriously or inexpensively, to suit all purses.

Death In A Duel.

Hanover, Prussia, Jan. 20.—Herr Von Bennigsen, landrath of Hanover, and son of the noted politician, Rudolf Bennigsen, died during the night as the result of a bullet wound received in a duel fought Thursday last with Herr Falkenhagen, a tenant of the royal estate near Springe. The duel was the outcome of relations between Herr Falkenhagen and Frau Von Bennigsen.

Against Obnoxious Bills

Dublin, Jan. 20.—The policy of the Irish nationalists in parliament at this session will be the same as in the last, not one of wanton obstruction of every British bill, for the sake of making England see the wisdom of home rule, but a well-laid plan of delaying or defeating certain measures deliberately chosen for attack because of their character.
