HAIR GROWTH

Promoted by Shampoos of Cuticura Soap

And Dressings of Cuticura the Great Skin Cure

Purest, Sweetest, Most Effective Remedies for Skin, Scalp and Hair.

This treatment at once stops falling hair, removes crusts, scales and dandruff, destroys hair parasites, soothes irritated, itching surfaces, stimulates the hair follicles, loosens the scalp skin, supplies the roots with energy and nourishment, and makes the hair grow upon a sweet, wholesome, healthy scalp when all else fails.

Millions of women now rely on Cuticura Soap assisted by Cuticura Ointment, the great skin cure, for preserving, purifying and beautifying the skin, for cleansing the scalp of crusts, scales and dandruff, and the stopping of falling hair, for softening, whitening and soothing red, rough and sore hands, for baby rashes, itchings and chafings, for annoying irritations, or too free or offensive perspiration, for ulcerative weaknesses, and many sanative, antiseptic purposes which readily suggest themselves, as well as for all the purposes of the toilet and nursery.

Cuticura remedies are the standard skin cures and humour remedies of the world. Bathe the affected parts with hot water and Cuticura Soap, to cleanse the surface of crusts and scales and soften the thickened cuticle. Dry, without hard rubbing, and apply Cuticura Ointment freely, to allay itching, irritation and inflammation, and soothe and heal, and, lastly, in the severer forms, take Cuticura Resolvent, to cool and cleanse the blood. A single set is often sufficient to cure the most torturing, disfiguring skin, scalp and blood humours, from pimples to scrofula, from infancy to age, when all else fails.

Cuticura Resolvent, Pound and in the form of Chocolate Coated Pills, Cuticura Ointment and Cuticura Soap are sold throughout the world. Depots: London, 27 Charterhouse Sq.; Paris, 5 Rue de la Paix; Australia, R. Towns & Co., Sydney; Boston, 137 Columbus Ave. Potter Drug & Chemical Corp., Sole Proprietors.

IS WATCHING

FOR HER ABSENT LOVER'S RETURN.

Forty Years Ago Man She Was to Marry Died, But She Daily Prepares For His Return.

Detroit Evening News.

Bowmanville, Ont., Oct. 15.—This little town of 3,000 people is just like a hundred such places scattered over Canada—quiet, quaint, uninteresting, except for the few eccentric characters to be met with. For six years Miss Spaulding has lived here, and her peculiar life has become so a part of the life of the town that it takes a stranger to see that it is unusual.

Years ago, when she was in her bloom, she fell in love with the eldest son of Hon. Edward Blake. She was a beautiful girl, the most admired of many beautiful girls while young Blake was the son of the man who held the political life of the riding of Durham in the hollow of his hand. Both moved in the same social circle, and everything was bright for the union of the two. But in the meridian of the splendid day the lover sickened, and in spite of the tender nursing of the intended bride, passed away.

The shock to the sweetheart left alone was cyclonic. She was a girl of fine soul, sensitive as a tropical plant to the chilling stroke of death, and she lost her reason for a time. She hovered between life and death for weeks, and at last she got well. She never forgot her dead lover. In fact, she lived under the impression that he was on a journey and would soon return. She lost the power of estimating time, and one day and its accompanying night made the limit of her ken.

In time her relatives died or moved away. She remained behind to await her lover's return. His will had left to her enough money to keep her in the comfort common to the town. She rented two rooms over a store and kept on her pathetic vigil for the return of her lover, and had a door cut connecting them. She also built a window in the separating wall. Here she lives to-day. One room she occupies herself, the other she has all prepared for him who will never return. All the love trinkets he gave to her forty years ago are arranged on the dresser in his room. The bed is made. She airs it every day. His slippers are put out ready for his tired feet. All is in readiness.

From the room where she sits all day long she can look through the window into the treasure house of her soul's desire, where in fancy lies all she cares for on earth or in heaven. She knits in her rocking chair, and eats and waits. In her sleep she is with her dear one. None is allowed to go into the sacred chamber but herself. None would care to break the charm that is to her such sweet sorrow. This has gone on for forty years.

But she still keeps up her connection with the world as it is. Twice a week she goes out to dine, dressed as she used to dress in the old days, in the very garments she wore when she won his heart.

No one recalls when she began to mingle with the world again. Only two homes does she visit. On Tuesday she dines at Mrs. Allen's; on Thursday she is with Mrs. Jones. Both hostesses are the leaders in the social life of the town. Neither remembers when the woman was first invited nor when the invitation was made permanent. She goes as she wills, and the fine heart of woman does not question. Now she is always expected, and should she fail to appear, her intended hostess goes to her and assuages her sickness, which is the only thing that prevents her from keeping the engagement that she has herself made.

For one whose treasure is in the world beyond, Miss Spaulding evinces a keen desire to remain on earth as long as she can. This may be due to the fact that she has conjured up a personality that has become stronger than a reality. The one she waits for in spirit dwells in that little room apart. To leave him would be to her as sharp a pang as for a wife to die and leave her husband. So Miss Spaulding cares for her health. In the fall she wraps her throat and neck and chest about with woollen yarn lest she take cold. She was a delicate girl in the old days. When the spring comes she takes off the yarn, a round each day, lest its too sudden removal give her the thing she most dreads—a chill which might end in her death.

And so she lives on till the time comes when her lover will return to his own. She is spoken of in whispers by the good women of the town, who reverence her for the God-like grip of her love.

Victims Of Catarrh Prejudiced.

Tried snuffs, they failed. Ointments and washes failed. Said there was no cure. Knew there wasn't because he had tried them all. This is how prejudice acts. There is however a balm in Gilead, a sovereign remedy for catarrh, not dangerous because it acts quickly, not unpleasant because it is sure to cure. Its name is Catarrhozone. It destroys germs, it soothes, it heals. As certain as death to cure, as pleasant as sunshine to use. That's Catarrhozone. Your money back if it is not so. 25c. and $1.

Garrison Secrets Told.

Berlin, Oct. 17.—Lieut. Bilsen, of a battalion stationed at Borbeck, Prussia, has been arrested on the charge of revealing military secrets, because he published a novel based on garrison life. Bilsen's book, which consists of 270 pages, is entitled "A Little Garrison." It relates instances of the abuse of soldiers, tells of actions discreditable to officers, and brings in local families with only slightly veiled identity.

Mrs. Paine, Batavia, N.Y., states that she was subpoenaed in September to testify in the coming suit of the Aetna Life Insurance company, contesting the claims of the heirs of the late Arthur R. Pennell. Mrs. Paine says she does not know when the suit will come off and does not think it ever will. If it is, she will tell what she knows about the affair.

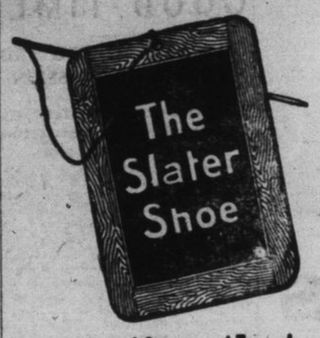
"Advertised Responsibility"



The liberal advertising of many years has created in the public a justifiable expectation that the "Slater" Shoe combines comfort, durability, fit, shape-retention and beauty and to hold its trade its makers are compelled to make it as good as the public expects.

Took Things Cooly.

Neither time, place, nor circumstance is a great obstacle to Cupid. The truthfulness of this statement is proved by the following:

A justice of the peace in Houston, Texas, was approached the other night by a young man, who asked him if he had a few minutes to spare. On the justice replying that he had, the young man remarked that he had about made up his mind to get married. The justice said that he was willing if the proper credentials and the young woman could be produced. The young man said he would endeavor to find the girl if the justice would get the license, and this agreement was reached:

By telephone the justice made arrangements for the license. The young man said the girl was at a dance, he thought. He would make a try and see if he could find her. Evidently, as the justice began to see, he had picked the girl. It was not going to be a case of selection. She was found at the dance. It really was sudden, and she had five dances engaged, but just the same she explained to the young men whom she would have to disappoint and accompanied the young man. She had known that the wedding would take place in a few days, and it didn't matter much if it were to take place a few hours earlier.
