NORTH-WEST LANDS WANTED

A syndicate to take up 10,000 acres near Lloydminster, on the line of the Canadian Northern Railway, on the border of Alberta in Saskatchewan. Syndicate price $8.50 per acre; $1.50 down after the land has been investigated, balance on long terms 6 per cent.

Lands in this vicinity are selling retail from $12 to $14 an acre. There is no better proposition than this on the market to-day. Good railway facilities and a prospective railway to run through the property—good water. Prof. McCoun, for nine years Government Explorer of the North-West, in speaking of this vicinity: "This tract is unsurpassed in the North-West for its capacity to grow wheat; the soil is rich; the surface is almost level, and what slope there is inclines to the south." Now The Auto Hearse.

"Rattle his bones over the stones, he's only a pauper whom nobody owns," is rapidly going out of date. Fresno, Cal., has a fine automobile morgue waggon, with rubber tires and latest improvements. Some people who never in life had a ride in an automobile now enjoy the latest and best transportation when dead.

The light-colored Malacca cane with gold or silver knob and cord and tassels, sniffed as Beau Brummel twirled it a event twenty in London.

SHOT LIVING BEINGS.

were buried in various places, and the graves numbered.

South of Market street the loss of life was mostly brought about by the collapsing of many cheap and crowded lodging houses. By the caving in of the Royal at Fortieth and Minna streets, and the Portland, Sixtieth street, between Mission and Market streets, scores of persons were entombed, but many were saved before the fire reached the spot.

The large five-storey Brunswick rooming house, with its three hundred rooms filled with guests, at Sixtieth and Howard streets, collapsed, and fire started amid the ruins five minutes later. It is estimated that over three hundred persons lost their lives there. Part of the large Cosmopolitan house, Fifth and Mission streets, collapsed at the first tremble. Many of the sleepers were buried in the ruins, and others escaped in their night clothes.

At 777 Mission street, the Wilson House, with its four storeys, and eighty rooms, fell to the ground, a mass of ruins. Few of the inmates were rescued. The Denver House, on lower Third street, fared the same, and it may never be known, how many were killed. To the north of Market street, the rooming house people fared better. The Luxemberg, at Stockton and O'Farrell streets, a three-storey affair, suffered severely, from the falling of many tons of brick from an adjoining building. The falling mass crashed through the building, killing a man and woman. At the Sutton street Turkish Baths a brick chimney toppled over, and crashing through the roof, killed one of the occupants as he lay on his cot.

Stories Greatly Exaggerated.

Washington, D.C., April 23.—The superintendent of the mint, Mr. Leach, wires the secretary of the treasury, from Oakland: "Stories of losses of life greatly exaggerated. Have been in every day from the first. Have men reporting to me continually from all parts of the city, and they do not believe the list will reach 400. My estimate from statements to me are that the list will not reach 300. The fire did not travel fast, and the authorities took trouble to keep ahead of the flames, notifying the people of danger and caring for helpless. The homeless are being cared for in Oakland and other suburbs. Thousands are camped out in the park and other open country, south of the city. People are being enabled to get in the ruins in places especially Market street, and I am informed that some of the modern buildings like the Spreckels, Crocker, Union Trust, Mutual Savings, all of which have banking institutions, can be fixed so as to allow banks to resume after some form in a few days."

A Smallpox Outbreak.

Oakland, April 23.—A scourge of smallpox threatens to further afflict the stricken inhabitants of San Francisco, nine cases are now being treated at the Presidio reservation post house; they were found in the very midst of the huddled refugees in Golden Gate Park, and the temporary tenting ground of Jefferson square.

Facts About Stricken City.

San Francisco was the sixth city of the United States in population. It claimed over 500,000 people. It hoped in ten years to have more people than either Boston or St. Louis.

It was the fourth seaport of importance on the American continent in the value of her shipping and marine commerce. San Francisco expected in the near future to be to the west what New York is to the east.

Eastern investors had a great deal of money in San Francisco. They bought real estate, though the prices were continually rising. Fortunes were made in real estate dealing in the city. One block of land on Market street sold at $10,000 per foot a few months ago. In the past three years real estate values in some quarters of the city had increased by three hundred and four hundred per cent.

The demand for additional dwelling, mercantile, and manufacturing houses was enormous, and buildings were being erected as rapidly as possible.

San Francisco was described by a writer a few months ago as the wealthiest, most prosperous, and most powerful city of its size in the world.

The James Flood office building, and the land on which it stood, represent an investment of $5,000,000. It was one of the largest office buildings in America. The post office, recently finished, cost $3,000,000.

The city's hotels, restaurants and theatres were pronounced to be the most elegant in the world.

Paris is the only city in the world which rivals San Francisco in her love of brilliant electric illuminations. At night the streets were a blaze of light, and crowds of people promenaded on them.

The police and fire departments of the city ranked among the best in the United States.

San Francisco has three suburbs, Oakland, Berkeley and Alameda, with a combined population of 100,000. Two ferry systems carried the people between the city and the suburbs.

The city is supposed to have the most advanced charter ever granted to a municipality in the United States. Several years ago the political bosses were routed, and the charter movement began. A new organic law for the city was adopted. It took effect in January, 1900, and was prepared by a board of freeholders, elected by the people. It conferred large powers and responsibilities on the mayor.

It meant home rule to the city. The administration of the city was divorced entirely from that of the state. The city did not need to go to the state legislature to ask for any law.

Big public improvements were planned recently. By a two-thirds vote, the people approved the issuance of bonds for $17,000,000 for parks and play grounds, school houses, a drainage system, a library and a hospital.

SIGNOR GIUSEPPE BIANCHERI.

The President of the Italian Chamber of Deputies, has been a Deputy for fifty-three years, during which time he has presided over the Chamber nearly thirty years. He was born in Ventimiglia, Italy, in 1823 and is considered to-day the oldest parliamentarian in the world.

The assessment roll of city property amounts to $524,000,000, and the tax rate for city, county, and state purposes is about $1.60 on every $100. Property was assessed at about seventy-five per cent. of its market value. So that the value of property would be about $650,000,000.

San Francisco had many parks, but most of them were small. The pride of the city was the Golden Gate Park, comprising 1,013 acres, and stretching from the city to the sea.

To Rebuild Ruined City.

New York, April 23.—The Journal of Commerce says: That no time will be lost in the work of rebuilding San Francisco is evident from the fact that the engineering and contracting firms are sending their most expert men to investigate the ruins with a view of discovering which form of construction best withstood the shock. The report of these experts, it is believed, will have a great deal to do with the constructing business in the future. Just before the earthquake considerable building was in progress, and, from preliminary reports, it is expected that prompt action will be taken for a renewal of contracts. It is only within the last year that there has been much activity in steel construction on the Pacific coast.

Early this year building enterprises were projected along the coast calling for upward of 100,000 tons of structural steel, about half of which were in San Francisco and its neighborhood.

Within the last few weeks San Francisco contracts have been placed calling for about 15,000 tons of steel. Most of the buildings were relatively small.

It is noted that many Pacific coast people of large means who are now living in New York are abundantly able to bear the money burden which their own and the city's interests call for. Among the New York residents owning large properties at San Francisco may be noted the Mills, Huntington, Crocker, Higgins and Tevis families. It is understood that there are at least fifty others here owning real estate at the Golden Gate.

San Francisco will require about 250,000 tons of structural steel to repair her losses and erect new buildings, according to E. H. Gary, head of the United States Steel Corporation, and other authorities interviewed yesterday.

"The fire in Baltimore and the earthquake and fire in San Francisco," said Mr. Gary, "have demonstrated to the satisfaction of everybody that steel structures are the safest and most permanent of all buildings. As a consequence, I have no doubt the use of steel in buildings will be very largely increased. It would not be at all surprising if within the next two or three years there were used in new buildings in San Francisco 250,000 tons of steel. No doubt all the larger new buildings will be of steel."

Quakes In Oregon.

Ottawa, April 23.—The earthquake shocks reported from Oregon as occurring about one o'clock, this morning, was registered on the seismograph at the Dominion observatory. The preliminary tremor arrived at 4:16:45 hours eastern time. The principal wave traversed at 4:28 a.m. and reached its maximum at 4:31 a.m. The quakes then began to decrease and disappeared at 5:10 a.m.

ALD. GASKIN'S REPLY

TO A LETTER IN THE WHIG OF SATURDAY.

He Feels a Market Clerk is a Much-Needed Official—Is Not Actuated by Friendship, But by Desire for Good of Citizens.

Kingston, April 23.—(To the Editor): My attention was called to a letter in the Whig of Saturday, in which it was intimated that the only motive that Ald. Elliott and I had for advocating the retention of the market clerk in his present position was friendship. While I cannot account for Ald. Elliott's action, I have no hesitation in stating my position in the matter. I am in favor of the forestalling by-law and I believe that nine-tenths of the people of Kingston are with me in that, therefore, I desire to see it enforced. The only way to secure that end is through an officer who is competent in every respect, and who is in particular a judge of all kinds of meat. I am not working for Mr. McCammon as a man, but because he is the market clerk, an officer whose services I am strongly of opinion should be retained.

There is no by-law in the book that is of more importance to the citizens than that of the forestalling by-law. It legislates in behalf of the working people, inasmuch as it enables them to secure produce at first cost, and prevents dealers from retailing goods until after such time as all good wives have had plenty of opportunity of securing what they want for their families. Complaint has been made that that Mr. McCammon does not enforce the by-law. If he does not, that introduces another feature into the discussion, but this I do know, that only last week he discovered a load of potatoes, in which every bag except one was light. Had there been no clerk these potatoes would have been sold to citizens. I could mention many recent cases of this kind to prove the value of a clerk on the Kingston market.

When I moved the resolution in the council to retain the market clerk, I was acting in the interests of the city for the reasons above mentioned. I am in favor of Mr. McCammon collecting the market tolls, so that the city will get all that there is in them, and if there is not enough duty to keep him employed all his time, to place him at the disposal of the mayor for the performance of work for which the city is paying numerous sums during the year. Further, there are occasions when the services of a harbor master are very much required, this being a shipping place and consequently an important marine port. Disputes very often arise, and unless there is a responsible officer to appeal to at the proper time, the results may be serious and detrimental to the city. In the face of these facts to say that I am actuated by friendship is simply ridiculous, and not worth considering.

I am not in the habit of either writing or answering anonymous letters, but suspecting who the author of the letter is of Saturday, and signed "One Who Pays Taxes," I decided to make an exception in this case. If he paid taxes, he would have signed his own name to his letter. He, to my mind, is like others who are after Mr. McCammon, they do not own an inch of real estate in the city. If he will take a manly course in dealing with personal matter, and give the public his name, I will guarantee that Ald. Elliott and I will at least give a lot of information, why a market clerk should be retained on Kingston market, and one who is qualified to fill the position.—JOHN GASKIN.

POOR MAN MADE RICH.

Australian Uncle Settled $2,000,000 on Nephew.

Dunkirk, N.Y., April 23.—Charles Wantshouse of Westfield, well-known in Dunkirk and throughout the surrounding country, is in receipt of a letter from an uncle in Australia, conveying the information that the latter has settled upon his nephew $2,000,000 and also a communication from a New York banking house stating that $500,000 of that amount is at Mr. Wantshouse's disposal.

The fortunate man is a carpenter by trade and in moderate circumstances. A short time ago he hired out by the day to Contractor B. F. Aldrich of this city, and was at work on the new foundry building at the U.S. Radiator Works, when the news of his windfall reached him. He immediately quit his job and returned to his home in Westfield, where he intends to build himself and family a palatial residence and spend the rest of his life in ease and comfort.

The uncle to whose princely generosity he owes his good fortune has been in Australia for nearly twenty years, and has amassed great wealth in mining and sheep raising ventures. He is rated at $5,000,000. Ten years ago he visited the United States and spent some time at the home of his nephew, Mr. Wantshouse. He displayed a great liking for the latter and upon his departure laughingly declared he would make the nephew a rich man some day. Wantshouse took the assertion in the nature of a joke and informed his uncle that he was always open to offers of wealth. He was unaware at the time that his Australian relative was possessed of the immense wealth that it later developed he was.

Mr. Wantshouse intends to give liberally to charity.

OPERA SINGER'S SONS.

Mme Schumann-Heink to Live on a Farm.

New York, April 23.—Mme. Schumann-Heink, the opera singer, arrived in New York, Sunday, on the Blucher from Hamburg. She brought with her the three sons, to fight for whose custody she went to Germany in January. She intends that these youths shall become American citizens, and in consequence of this intention she had a lot of trouble in the Dresden Guardians' court in getting possession of them.

After her marriage to W. D. Rapp, an American, Mme. Schumann-Heink took out naturalization papers about eighteen months ago. Before the news of her intention had got to Germany she was able to bring her three younger children to America. When she endeavored to get possession of the three older boys she was opposed by her first husband, who fought for their custody and also for $65,000 worth of property which the singer had in Germany. The case was tried in the German courts, and on the recent visit of the singer she was successful in both cases.

The singer, her husband and her children went to New Rochelle, where Mr. Rapp has a house. The coming summer the family will move to the estate on Caldwell Mountain, near Montclair, N.J., which Mme. Schumann-Heink purchased last year. They will make their home in the handsome house erected by William Ryle, a silk manufacturer, and will have 100 acres for themselves and the cows and other animals they intend to keep. Mme. Schumann-Heink says she will be glad of a chance to be housekeeper and to make her own bread and butter, as she did when she was young.

While abroad the singer filled several concert and opera engagements. It was the first time she had sung in Germany in four years, and she was elated over the welcome she had there. She will return to Germany in May and will take part in the Bayreuth festival. Upon her return she will rest for a time at her home, and in the autumn will begin a concert tour of America under the management of Henry Wolfsohn. She will also have some special appearances with the Metropolitan opera.

At Plumstead, England, 600 men and women gathered at the Wesleyan Central Hall with the object of praying "for the conversion of Robert Blatchford, the editor of the Clarion, and a leading opponent of Christianity." Intense earnestness was shown.

Many orthodox priests were among those elected to the secondary conventions in Russia, but not a one has been returned to parliament. On the other hand, three Catholic priests, one rabbi and one mollah (a Mohammedan priest) were chosen.

The Ameer of Afghanistan has given progressive rulers a lesson. Certain astrologers recently prophesied in his presence that Afghanistan would within three months lose by pestilence hundreds of inhabitants. The prophets have been placed comfortably in gaol, and if their predictions fail they will be tortured to death. No doubt, at the present moment, they are praying hard for a cholera epidemic.

The abbe of a parish in the suburbs of Paris has converted himself and his assistant priests into a commercial firm to manufacture chocolate, with the trade-mark, "Our Lady of Work". In this way they hope to maintain Roman Catholicism in a parish of 40,000 souls, not one of whom has a centime beyond the daily wage for manual toil; not one is able to pay a centime for the church's services at a marriage or burial.

The Contented Spirit.

The visitor in the south was offering his sympathies to the old colored parson. "It was a shame, uncle, that the congregation should drop buttons in the plate when you were collecting your salary."

"Dat doan mattah, sah," replied the old man with a luminous smile. "Ah kin use dem in dat old paih ob trousers de kernal gib me."

"Well, they dropped nails in the plate also."

"Just what Ah need, sah. Yo' see Ah'm guine to build a cornhouse en Ah'll need de nails to drive in de shingles."

"But the lead nickels. What are you going to do with them, throw them away?"

"No, sah; Ah'm guine to make sinkers foh mah fishing lines. Glory, halleluyah!"

Debts Of Honor.

Strangely, debts contracted in gambling are called debts of honor. It is difficult to see the point of honor, except that, as no securities are given, the only hold the winner has upon the loser is a promise. Men are punctilious in paying these so-called debts of honor. But there is a debt of honor which should make a man or woman exceedingly punctilious in spirit. It is contracted by oral or written promise to God's house—the church. The debt is due to God himself, in whose hands are all things, blessings temporal and spiritual. This debt should be discharged first of all.
