A MEMORIAL SERVICE

AND DECORATION OF GRAVES IN NAPANEE.

Honoring the Memory of Those Gone Before Keeps Our Ideals High—A Worthy Address By Well-Known Kingston Oddfellow.

The decoration of graves, in Napanee, by the Oddfellows, occurred yesterday, and was an impressive event. There were over 2,000 persons present. The general decoration of graves took place before the Oddfellows visited the cemetery and completed the work. The service which followed was orderly and solemn. The address of R. Meek, Kingston, was in part as follows:

At the beginning of this ceremony it may be asked, Why are we here? There is occasion for it, and it is well that we should understand exactly what this occasion is. Memorial day is not a new institution. In 1805 the Grand Army of the Republic was organized. Its members were the veterans of the American war, those who had survived the awful shock that meant the unity or sunderment of the nation. The object of the Grand Army was mutual assistance, with annually a reunion, at which to recount the experiences of the war, and a pilgrimage to the cemeteries where the dead were remembered by the decoration of their graves. The services were generally impressive, and the key-note of the addresses was, in the words of the—immortal Lincoln, delivered at the dedication of the Gettysburg cemetery, that "those who lived should take up the unfinished work of those who had gone before and carry it to completion."

In 1866, when the Sovereign Grand Lodge met at Boston, a petition was presented from A. J. Langworthy, of Milwaukee. This petition prayed for the setting apart of a day on which, by suitable proceedings, the virtues of the dead would be recalled and the order taught to cherish and respect them. The petitioner acknowledged that he had derived his inspiration from the Grand Army of the Republic, that he had witnessed their decoration of graves, that he had heard their tributes to the fallen heroes, and that he believed something akin to this service, in its appointments and purposes, would contribute to the good of Oddfellowship. The petition was referred to a committee, which disapproved of the proposal and recommended an indefinite postponement of the question. But Representative Hodges, of Ohio, was persistent. He declared that it was according to the very nature, spirit and desire of the order that it should have a memorial day, and this thought, which he embodied in a resolution, was adopted by a large majority.

There is a certain exhilaration in the recital of worthy deeds, in the reading of the literature which deals with the conquests of races and nations. The Bedouins, in their wild untutored life, have a chivalry which they are most anxious to perpetuate. It is with unction that they recite the stories of their valor. The older ones repeat the details as often as may be necessary in order to engrave them upon the minds and hearts of the younger men. The Israelites, at least once a year, at the Passover Feast, have the children put the question, "What meaneth this?" so that they may expatiate upon God's providential dealings with them.

When we are asked, "What meaneth this visitation of the cemeteries, this distribution of flowers, these hymns and prayers and addresses?" we can point to the history of the order, can revive the sacrifices of its founders, and pay tribute to those who gave of the very essence of their being for the cause which they espoused. Here and there shafts are reared heavenward to mark the places where the dead repose, but the achievements of our revered leaders are not published by monuments of marble or brass or iron.

Latour D'Avergne was the favorite of Napoleon the First. He distinguished himself in many a battle but declined promotion. The emperor, however, gave him a sword and called him the "First Grenadier of France." When D'Avergne fell Napoleon ordered that his heart be given to the regiment, to be cared for by it and carried about as a constant reminder of his prowess. It was further ordered that at every roll call the nearest to him in the regiment should answer to his name, and add "died on the field of honor." The men who gave birth, form, and stability to our order did not bequeath their hearts to us, but they left a precious heritage in a spirit which it is ours to cherish, and of many a man, as the name is called, it can be truthfully said, "died on the field of honor."

Two years ago, at Brockville—at the semi-centennial of the introduction of Oddfellowship into Canada—there was a pathetic record from the committee on In Memoriam. Of those who had become united with the great brotherhood, and who had given it the best they had to offer in a consecrated service, over 4,000 had died in ten years. Some of them were your friends and some of them were mine, and their remains are interred in this and other cemeteries. This particular garden of the dead is not familiar to me, but I assume it has, or will have, avenues and cross-sections corresponding with the avenues and street intersections of a city. If one pass along he will see the stones whereon is writ the names of the departed ones. As he halts beside them the past is lived all over again. Instances are called up which touch the life in many ways, and considering everything he realizes how becoming it is to remember those who being dead yet speak.

The bond that holds Oddfellowship together is not a weakly, fragile, or useless thing, but a strong and helpful bond that makes the order what it is. I have therefore no word of depreciation for the erring ones, no word of blame or censure irrelevantly applied, but many words of hope, encouragement and sympathy. Do some fall? It is ours to pick them up, to minister to them, and to bring them into harmony with our creed. Do some lose their ideals? It is ours to give them new ideals, to make them see the best of life, to infuse into them a spirit which will ensure redress. Do some fail to use the opportunities that are given to them? It is ours not to chide or reprove so much as to remind of duty and obligation, and to supply the stimulation which they need.

Incidentally it may be said that Memorial day has been a great help to the cemetery overseers. In some places there has been a cleaning up for the occasion and an adornment which is so becoming in a forward generation. Still we in Canada are so far behind the people of other lands in this respect. I was talking recently with a gentleman who had spent four years in travels over the world, and he told me that the Italians put all others completely to shame, for they are not content with caring for the soil that enshrouds the dead, but cover it with the most beautiful statuary, some of it expressive of the varied emotions of the soul. All over Italy, said my friend, there are evidences as nowhere else of taste in the Santo Campos, and the statuary shows how profound is the love of Italians for their art. We may never approach to anything like this in our cemeteries, but we can go so much further than any city or town has gone in the embellishment of what we are so proud to call God's acres.

Let me say to you in conclusion that our aim is to improve and elevate the character of man, to imbue him with a proper conception of his capabilities for good, to enlighten his mind, to enlarge the sphere of his affections, to lead him to a knowledge of the true fraternal relations designed by the Great Author of his being.

Let me emphasize another teaching of the order—that we are bound to give to the mortal remains of a departed brother decent sepulture, and while we lay his body in the tomb to cherish a lively recollection of his virtues and bury his imperfections beneath the clod that rests upon his bosom.

Honor to our Court invites us,
Worthy subjects let us prove,
Strong the chain that here unites us,
Linked with friendship, truth and love;
In our hearts, enshrined and cherished,
May these feelings ever bloom,
Failing not when life has perished,
Living still beyond the tomb.

WHEEL WAS RECOVERED.

Thief Used It and Left It on the Street.

On Saturday William Lacey reported that his bicycle was stolen from the Kennedy House stables. Saturday night it was found on the street by the police, and will be handed over to the owner. The thief evidently used it to go around town during the day, and then deserted it.

Many cases of this kind are reported to the police, and unless some information is given the police it is very difficult to trace the guilty parties. It is a very easy matter for a person to make off with a wheel while the owner is in a store on business.

"Napanee," the most popular composition ever published.

"Snuggle Up Closer," an instantaneous hit, by the writer of "Stingy."

Dog Poisoners Busy.

The dog poisoner seems to be at work again, after a short absence. A resident on Queen street lost a valuable fox terrier dog on Saturday, through the act of some evil-minded person. The dog was chained up in the yard, so the poisoner must have been well acquainted with the premises. The owner feels his loss very keenly. Only last week he refused an offer of $25 for the dog.

THE STEAMER IN PORT.

The Orion Was Released From Calf Island.

The steamer Orion, ashore on Calf Island shoal, was released by the Donnelly Wrecking company and arrived here on Saturday. The steamer had four hundred cords of pulp wood taken off and four steam pumps put on, before she was pulled off by the steamer. After being released and the leak partly stopped, she was towed down in the lee of Stony Island, where further repairs were made, under direction of Capt. John Donnelly. After this was completed the Orion came to Kingston, under tow of the steamer Donnelly.

The cargo will be taken out here and loaded on the barge G.D., before the Orion enters the dry dock for repairs. The cargo was insured with Dale & Co., Montreal, but the steamer carried no insurance.

Synopsis of Canadian Northwest HOMESTEAD REGULATIONS.

Any even numbered section of Dominion lands in Manitoba or the North-West Provinces, excepting 8 and 26, not reserved, may be homesteaded by any person the sole head of a family, or male over 18 years of age, to the extent of one-quarter section, of 160 acres, more or less.

Application for homestead entry must be made in person by the applicant at the office of the local Agent or Sub-Agent. Entry by proxy may, however, be made on certain conditions by the father, mother, son, daughter, brother or sister of an intending homesteader.

An application for entry or inspection made personally at any Sub-Agent's office may be wired to the local Agent by the Sub-Agent, at the expense of the applicant, and if the land applied for is vacant on receipt of the telegram such application is to have priority and the land will be held until the necessary papers to complete the transaction are received by mail.

In case of "personation" the entry will be summarily cancelled, and the applicant will forfeit all priority of claim.

An application for inspection must be made in person. The applicant must be eligible for homestead entry, and only one application for inspection will be received from an individual until that application has been disposed of.

A homesteader whose entry is in good standing and not liable to cancellation, may, subject to approval of Department, relinquish it in favor of father, mother, son, daughter, brother or sister, if eligible, but to no one else, on filing declaration of abandonment.

Where an entry is summarily cancelled or voluntarily abandoned, subsequent to institution of cancellation proceedings, the applicant for inspection will be entitled to prior right of entry.

Applicants for inspection must state in what particulars the homesteader is in default, and if subsequently the statement is found to be incorrect in material particulars, the applicant will lose any prior right of re-entry should the land become vacant, or if entry has been granted it may be summarily cancelled.

Duties—A settler is required to perform the conditions under one of the following plans:—

(1) At least six months' residence upon and cultivation of the land in each year during the term of three years.
