SANTAL-MIDY
Standard remedy for Gleet, Gonorrhoea and Runnings IN 48 HOURS. Cures Kidney and Bladder Troubles. MIDY

DOES THIS INTEREST YOU?

A prominent physician, famous for his success in the treatment of kidney and bladder diseases, attributes a great deal of his success to the following simple vegetable prescription:—

One ounce Fluid Extract Dandelion;
One ounce Compound Salatone;
Four ounces Compound Syrup Sarsaparilla;

Mix, shake well, and take in teaspoonful doses after each meal and again at bedtime.

Your druggist can supply the ingredients, and the mixture can be prepared at home at very little expense.

This, the doctor says, acts directly on the kidneys, assisting them to filter the poisons from the blood and expel same in the urine, at the same time restoring the kidneys to healthy, normal action.

We feel that a great many readers will be pleased to learn of this simple prescription, and knowing the ability of the physician whose formula it is, we do not hesitate to recommend it to any sufferer.

FROM WINNIPEG HOME

J. B. WALKEM'S IMPRESSION OF THAT CITY.

Building Overdone—Nothing Attractive About Winnipeg—Death of a Passenger—Negro Porter Disliked the Lawyer's Totem Pole.

(J. B. Walkem's Letter Concluded.)

We reached Winnipeg at about noon on Saturday and had lunch in the C. P.R. restaurant. Some American acquaintances who were stopping over asked me to go with them to see the city. Our first impressions were not favorable for the streets in the vicinity of the station were very dirty and ill-made. It was only when we got into the heart of the place that there was anything attractive. The streets were mostly of asphalt and were neat and clean. For a city of its age the buildings are splendid, blocks of stores being well finished and artistic in their appearance. Many of them, I am sorry to say, were vacant, with to-let affixed to them. I was told that building had been overdone, that real estate was in a very unsatisfactory condition, and that there was serious trouble ahead for those interested in it. I had the good fortune to meet a friend, married to a Kingston lady, and the owner of a beautiful residence and an automobile, and I accepted an invitation to take a run over the place and see what it looked like.

From what I saw, I came to the conclusion that a great deal of the city's money was being spent on its outskirts with the view no doubt of making the residential part of the city as attractive as possible, and they have been very successful. Beautiful roads drives and avenues have been constructed even through the bush of small poplars that border the river. There is any amount of room for residences and any amount of money asked for the sites. Like Vancouver, I fear prices are altogether too high, and many owners of real estate will find themselves in deep water. Winnipeg as a site for a city is most uninteresting. It is simply a piece of flat prairie, built upon without any surroundings to make it attractive. The residents, I understand, betake themselves to Kenora, on Lake Superior for the summer.

We left Winnipeg at about 7.30 p.m. I handed my traps, including the totem pole I got at Vancouver to the porter, who placed them in my Pullman berth—he asked me casually, what the pole was, and I told him it was an Indian God allthe way from Alaska. He looked a little shy at it, however. A young man was on the steps of the car just in front of me, who was apparently an invalid, and after he had settled across from me I asked him what his trouble was and he replied heart disease, and that he was on his way home to Boston. He appeared very ill, and, of course, I took an interest in him as he was unable to help himself, but it wasn't long before I made up my mind, that he was in the last stages of consumption. He remained on the train until we were reaching North Bay, when the conductor asked me to look at him as he lay in his berth. I did so, and I came to the conclusion that he was dying and would certainly never reach Boston. We telegraphed to North Bay station, to have a doctor, and an ambulance there, as he would have to be removed from the train. When we reached North Bay, he was carried out and taken to the hospital where he died about an hour afterwards. I learned since that he was returning to his wife, to whom he had been married but a few months, and that his father was to meet him at Montreal. It was very sad, and every passenger in our car felt it very much. He should not have been allowed to take the journey alone.

We arrived at Jack Fish at breakfast time on Sunday morning. It had rained heavily all night, and we were informed that there was a washout a few miles down the line three rails long and seventeen feet deep, and that until the place was bridged, we would have to spend the greater part of Sunday where we were. In the afternoon there were signs of church-goers wending their way to a little Presbyterian church close by, and some of our passengers of that faith, attended service, and I understood afterwards, joined the choir. A fisherman informed us towards evening that as long as he had been living there he had never heard such a noise from that church before, and he wont, I suppose, until we have another washout at the same place and on the same day.

We finally reached Renfrew at about 6 p.m., several hours behind time, but it was all the same to me, as my train leaves for Kingston daily at 11.30, and it was simply that I lived on the train instead of existing in Renfrew for the time we were delayed.

I mentioned in another part of my letter that a totem pole was presented to me for my wife at Vancouver and that when I boarded the sleeper at Winnipeg, I handed it to the porter to be cared for by him until I reached Renfrew. It wasn't a handsome article, on the contrary, it was rather gruesome for an Indian god. The porter didn't like it at all, and on making up the berths, in the evening, asked me where he was to put him for the night. I usually replied that it would rest very comfortably in some of the unused upper berths, at the same time saying that it would, no doubt, assist the sleeper in the lower berth in his nightmare. However, when I reached Renfrew, I asked him to carry it and my valise out and I would attend to my other traps. I gave him what I thought a decent tip, and as he stood the totem up at station building he remarked to me: "Well, boss, I tink you're all right, and I wouldn't mind if you was going trough to Montreal, but I'm mighty glad to get dat fellow off dis train; we don't seem to have had anv luck since you brought him abboard at Winnipeg." I asked him what the trouble was, and he replied dat de very first night dere was a woman wid a child dat cried all night long and nobody could stop him. "Next dere was dat washout at Fish Creek, and wust of all was dat young man we put off at North Bay, and who died there, and I guess, boss, dat's about enough for a short run from Winnipeg." He said good-bye to me with a kindly remark, and rushed for his train, which had just started for Montreal.

The railway ride of which I have given a short account, is one of which detailed description is almost impossible. The tourist is unfortunate who cannot interrupt his journey along this marvellous railway, for it is utterly impossible to fully appreciate the great and magnificent scenery from the windows of a railway car as I had to do it. It is a trip which everyone should take, for it is an object lesson which can never be forgotten. One must admire the skill and energy of the men who planned and carried out the colossal undertaking of the Canadian Pacific railway, which was completed in the face of seemingly insurpassable difficulties five years before the specified time. I hope my letters may have proved interesting to your readers and my only regret is that I have been unable to make them more so, as they had to be written hurriedly.—Yours truly

—J. B. WALKEM.

Off On A Balloon Race.

St. Louis, Mo., Oct. 22.—The international balloon race was started from the enclosed concourse, in Forest Park, in the western part of this city, practically on schedule time, yesterday afternoon, with 60,000 cheering spectators, in the enclosure and vicinity. Just as the contesting balloons were disappearing from sight in a north-easterly direction, it could be seen that the United States, piloted by Maj. H. B. Henry and Arthur L. Atherholt, was leading. The balloon was flying close to the ground, while the Pommern, which had started just before it, was high in the heavens, at least a thousand feet above it.

Backaches Are Warnings.

A dull heavy pain or occasional sharp stitch in the back are the most common symptoms of kidney trouble, and these symptoms must always be heeded. You will find Peck's Kidney and Liver Pills a most reliable remedy. These pills are a scientific preparation that can be depended upon for the cure of kidney, liver and bladder troubles. In boxes, 25c. For sale only at Wade's Drug Store. Money back if not satisfactory.

A Plot Exposed.

St. Petersburg, Oct. 22.—A supposed plot against the life of the czar has been frustrated by the discovery of a plan to undermine the railway connecting St. Petersburg and Tsarskoe Selo. The entrance to a tunnel was found, and, on examination, two men were discovered at work, engaged in driving a shaft toward the railway. The men were arrested and handed over to the gendarmes at Tsarskoe Selo. They had the plan of a mine and telegrams asking how they were progressing with the work.

URGES PEACEFUL METHOD.

Hamar Greenwood Warns Against Bludgeon Tactics With Japanese.

Hamar Greenwood, M. P., was recently entertained by the Canadian Club at Winnipeg. In his address on "Imperial Responsibilities," he said that if he spoke with less buoyancy and good humor than usual, it was because he appreciated the responsibility of Canada and the vital importance of the questions that lay before the Dominion.

He was a Canadian, but he spoke as a member of the Imperial Parliament, and an official of the Colonial Office. "Canada has assumed," he stated, "a position greater than any other colony of the Empire, and since the war between Russia and Japan the centre of gravity of foreign affairs had shifted, and was not on this continent. Foreign questions were not settled by the Dominion, but what this country did in its relations with foreign nations affected the Foreign Office and the Empire."

He saw with regret in the papers that a riot, an uncalled-for and unjustifiable riot, had broken out in Vancouver, and as a member of the British Empire, Canadians should realize that a man who hits an innocent Jap in the streets of Vancouver may start a war between two empires which may bring Japanese battleships to these shores.

He believed in the supremacy of the white race on this continent, but the question should be settled by peaceful methods.

These questions could be settled and would be settled, but they had been aggravated by the bludgeon methods of some reckless spirits on the west coast. He condemned these bludgeon methods. They could begin a quarrel between the Canadian labor men and the Japanese, but that quarrel would be taken to the Foreign Office, and it might end in a disastrous upheaval of many nations, and in the interval the peace and prosperity of this great Dominion would be set back at least a generation. It behooved every Canadian to rise to his imperial responsibilities, and whatever his ideal might be—and no Christian was more of the opinion that Canada should be a white man's country than the speaker—they must remember that they were dealing with a people who were determined to maintain the rights of their citizens, and who desired to die for their country, a desire which was born of paganism.

PALMA TROPHY MATCH.

King Edward Sends Congratulations to the Winners.

The Governor-General received from His Majesty King Edward the following cable:

"Please offer my congratulations to United States team winning Palma Trophy with such a record score."

President Roosevelt, in reply to the telegram of congratulations sent by the Governor-General, telegraphed His Excellency from Oyster Bay as follows:

"I greatly appreciate your congratulations. I believe in rifle shooting as being much more than merely an attractive pastime, and it should be encouraged in every possible way in all self-governing commonwealths. Therefore, international contests like these do a dual service."

Canada's "Regular" Army.

The strength of the Canadian permanent corps, or the regulars, is about the same as last year. It comprises 281 officers and 4,553 non-commissioned officers and men, total strength of 4,834. The Royal Canadian Dragoons have a strength of 389, R. C. Mounted Rifles 774, R. C. Horse Artillery, 410, Royal Canadian Garrison Artillery 1,021, Royal Canadian Engineers 932, Royal Canadian Regiment 1,258, Canadian Permanent Army Service Corps 152, Permanent Army Medical Corps 154, Ordnance Stores Corps 214, Canadian Army Pay Corps 34, and Corps of Military Staff Clerks 35.

Militia orders state that the following warrant and non-commissioned officers of the permanent force have been granted medals for long service and good conduct:

Regimental Sergt.-Major J. Adair, Permanent Army Medical Corps; Quartermaster Sergeant George Offen, Royal Canadian Regiment.

Canada and Australia.

"The greatest factor to be reckoned with in dealing with Canada is its proximity to the United States, which exercises an influence so great that it can never be obliterated," says the British Australian. "Indeed, Europeans visiting North America for the first time see little difference in outward appearance between Canadians and Americans. A most interesting comparison could be drawn between Australia and Canada as offshoots of the British people, each with British supremacy. The one an island continent separated by great distances from outside pressure, and working out its own future on its own lines; the other dividing a great territory with a people far more powerful and richer than themselves, and exercising upon its neighbor great political pressure and immense social influence. In this respect Canada may be said to have a great advantage over Australia."

In French Canada.

As you walk through the beautiful streets of French Canada, listening to the French language, and reading the French words in the shop windows, you wonder whether both people might not have fused if England had not granted to these cheerful people the right of using their own language in the schools and in the law courts. But as you consider this question, round the corner come a couple of bull-necked priests in cassocks and birettas, and you remember the Scala Santa Chapel of Sainte Anne de Beaupre, and you realize that it is not a language but a spiritual opposition which keeps the two people eternally separate and almost perpetually suspicious. This is the chief condemnation of religion, that it divides the children of God, even in a new world. —London Chronicle.

PANDORA RANGE

A convenience much appreciated by every owner of a Pandora is the towel rod attached to the range.

As one-third of the rod is made of emery, it makes a splendid knife sharpener, too.

It's always there handy for you. You need waste no time hunting around for the easily misplaced "steel." Bright idea, eh?

An accurate thermometer is a reliable guide to successful baking, while an inaccurate one is a "cheat" of the worst kind.

Every Pandora thermometer is carefully adjusted and undergoes a practical test by heat—is proven correct before being sent out.

The figures, which show the required degree of heat necessary for the successful baking of bread, cakes, pies, etc., are plainly inscribed in black on a white enamel surface, so that they are easily readable, even when the day is dull.

If your local dealer does not sell the Pandora, write direct for free booklet.
