CABLE NEWS

(Special Despatch to Daily News.)

London, Jan. 18.—The London Morning Post of to-day announces that Prince Napoleon returns to Switzerland, and takes no part in political manifestations. He says he desires only to gain his law suit against the government of France for his expulsion from that country; that he has no pretensions to the throne, and does not favour a regency, and that he submits to the government which France approves.

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., Jan. 17.—Gangs of men have been sent forward to repair the Stockport bridge on the Hudson river railroad. It is thought that trains will be able to pass over it by to-morrow afternoon.

THE Ex-EMPRESS EUGENIE.

Eugenie-Marie de Guzman, countess of Teba, ex-empress of the French and widow of Napoleon, was born at Malaga, in Spain, May 5, 1826. Her mother was Donna Maria Manuela Kirkpatrick of Closeburn, Countess Dowager de Montijo, whose father was English consul at Malaga at the period of her marriage with the Count de Montijo, an officer in the Spanish army connected more or less closely with the houses of the Duke de Frias, representative of the ancient admirals of Castile, of the duke of Fyars and others of the highest rank, including the kings of Arragon. On the death of the Count de Montijo his widow was left with a fortune adequate to the maintenance of her position and two daughters, one of whom married the duke of Alba and Berwick, lineally descended from James II. and Miss Churchill. For Eugenie, the second daughter, a still higher destiny was reserved. In 1851 the Countess Teba, accompanied by her mother, paid a lenghtened visit to Paris, and was distinguished at the various entertainments given at the Tuileries by the dignity and elegance of her demeanor, and by great personal beauty, of the aristocratic English rather than the Spanish style. Her mental gifts were not less attractive for her education, partly conducted in England, was very superior to that generally bestowed upon Spanish women, who seldom quit their native country. Shortly after the opposition of the higher northern powers had put an end to the idea of union between the Emperor Napoleon III. and the Princess Carola Wasa of Sweden, he apprised the council of ministers of his intended marriage with the daughter of the Countess Montijo—a measure which excited some disapproval among them and even led to their temporary withdrawal from office. During the short time which intervened between the public announcement of the approaching event and its relisation, the Countess Teba and her mother took up their abode in the palace of the Elysee. The marriage was celebrated with much magnificence on August 20th, 1853, at Notre Dame. The life of the Empress Eugenie from the time of her marrige to the breaking out of the Prussian war was comparatively uneventful, having been passed chiefly in the ordinary routine of state etiquette, in visits to the various maisons-de platsance, varied by an extended progress through France in company with her husband by an annual sojourn for the benefit of her health at Biarritz, in the Pyrenees, the favourite resort of her family in the days of her girlhood; by a journey to England and Scotland in the fall of 1861, and in 1864 to some of the German baths. She became mother of an heir to the house of Bona-Bonaparte March 16, 1856. Accompanied by the emperor she visited the cholera hospitals in Paris, October, 1865, and her conduct on this occasion was very highly commended. In July, 1869, she proceeded to the East to attend the opening of the Suez canal. She was the guest alternately of the sultan and the khedive and the fetes in her honour were of the most dazzling Oriental character. After the departure of the emperor for the army in July, 1870, she assumed the regency and held it until the dis aster of Sedan became known in Paris, when the angry and bewildered populace surrounded the Tuilleries and the unhappy empress, in terror of her life fled with the prince imperial in disguise to England. She took up her residence at Chiselhurst, where she was soon after rejoined by the emperor.

THE PRINCE IMPERIAL.

The young Prince Napoleon Eugene Louis Jean Joseph was born on the 15th of March, 1856, and is therefore now drawing toward the completion of his seventeenth year. While still in arms he was placed on the muster roll of the French imperial guards as a private in the regiment; for, as intended that he should receive a military education, and afterwards assume a military command it was designed as a compliment to the army that he should, at least nominally, go through all the graduations of the service. When old enough to begin to learn the military exercises he was put through them with other youths of his own age, and in this way was taught the bayonet and other drills before he was eight years old. By this time, too, he had been made a non-commissioned officer of his regiment, and passed step by step through the various grades toward the rank of colonel. But while special attention was given to his military training, his education as a citizen was not neglected.—Besides the ordinary rudiments of instruction he received lessons in two or three handy crafts, the last of which was the setting up of types in the imperial printing office of Paris. The object of this may have been simply to extend his sphere of knowledge and enlarge his views like an ordinary individual and has before now proved a valuable accomplishment for even the heir to a throne. It will be remembered that King Louis Phillippe, while an exile in Switzerland in early life, pursued for a time the calling of a school master. The young prince imperial bears the reputation of being intelligent, good-tempered, and very much attached to his friends. His "baptism of fire" in front of the Prussians was the only remarkable event of his life. The late Napoleon was extremely attached to his only son and heir. The boy is not reported to possess much force of character; but the world may be destined to hear from him yet.

Not less than 1,250 poor families are supported from the poermaster's office of Buffalo. Five strong, able men applied to the police justice for commitments to the penitentiary for the winter, and this fact furnishes a text to the Commercial Advertiser for a brief sermon directed to those who have means to aid the needy.

We have received a full report of the annual dinner of the Royal Colonial Institute, at which the Duke of Manchester presided. It appears that during the recess a circular was addressed to competent persons in the colonies, inviting contributions to a series of papers descriptive of the various portions of Her Majesty's dominions with the view of compiling a synopsis of the whole empire, and these invitations are now being favourably responded to from various quarters. The papers arranged for during this session are as follows:—On Canada, by William Johnston, M. P.; the Marine and Fisheries of Canada, by J. G. Bourinot, of Ottawa; the San Juan Award, by Lord Bury, M. P.; Statistics of the West Indies, by William Walker, a member of the Council; the Straits Settlements, by Leonard Wray, a member of the Council; the Land Laws of the Australian Colonies, by James Smith, of Melbourne; Queensland, by the Agent General for Queensland; Discovery and Early History of Victoria, by F. P. Labilliere, of Victoria; Looplines of Mail Service to some of the Colonies, by C. W. Eddy, Hon. Secretary.

The Strathroy Age thinks that Mr Mowat's programme "ought to be eminently satisfactory to the House and to the country." Of course it ought. We were satisfied with it when the late Hon. John Sandfield Macdonald first proposed it, thirteen months ago. We were satisfied with it when Edward Blake re-introduced it a few weeks afterwards; and we certainly are not going to turn against an old friend now, just because it is under the protection of the Hon. Oliver Mowat.

A St. Louis lady has a lovely daughter and takes boarders. One of the nice young men is sweet on Bella, and coming home the other night, he saw a light, graceful form sweep past him in the hall, and heard the seductive rustle of crinoline. He knew that form and clasped it to his heart, imprinting impassioned kisses on its lips. He dropped it when he heard these words: "Hurry up, Massa George, I'se got to hurry after soft soap."

The importance of giving Sheridan's Cavalry Condition Powders to horses that have been out in the cold rain, stood in the cold wind, or drank too much cold water cannot be over estimated; no man should be without them who owns a good horse.—Adv.
