[illegible] correspondent at [illegible] gives the account of a sight by the France [illegible] left Ke-hel at o'clock on the morning [illegible] and not gone fifteen miles, when [illegible] the small village of Lannois, [illegible] twenty waggons loaded [illegible] provisions for the army, and some boxes [illegible] others lying dead in the ground, [illegible] the France Tireurs. The convoy [illegible] guarded, they had played [illegible] At the same moment I saw the [illegible] an engine, approaching on the road [illegible] France Tireurs evidently expecting [illegible] obstructions on the track. [illegible] on the high wooded ground, [illegible] embankment 200 yards distant. On [illegible] the obstructions twenty cars were [illegible] from the track, and the engine broke [illegible] train was filled with provisions, and [illegible] by fifty Prussian soldiers, under command [illegible] a captain. The France-Tireurs [illegible] a number of soldiers [illegible] back hurriedly after an [illegible] fire. The Prussians did not pursue, [illegible] with the train. The France-Tireurs [illegible] to the attack [illegible] Bourgeoyes of the [illegible] carriages, poured a well-nourished [illegible] fire. The Frenchmen were [illegible] ground. The second at[illegible] when [illegible] were [illegible] Such [illegible] today [illegible] Paris. Most [illegible] companies [illegible] Paris. [illegible] Metz [illegible] Versailles [illegible] Versailles announcing that M. [illegible] passed through that place on Sunday [illegible] way to Paris. He was to return on [illegible]. The general impression in London [illegible] that owing to the surrender of Bazaine [illegible] nothing is likely to come of these negotiations.

[illegible] William reviewed the Landwehr at [illegible] on Sunday.

London, Nov. 1.—The ceremony of closing [illegible] Workingmen's International Exhibition took place at the Agricultural Hall. Among the distinguished persons were Mr Gladstone, Lord Ebury, [illegible] Professors Playfair, Huxley, and Rev. Mr Newman Hall. Mr [illegible] who occupied the chair, read an address from Mr Patterson, Secretary of the Exhibition, in which it was stated the expenses of the [illegible] have exceeded the receipts. Gladstone, in reply to the vote of [illegible] said he hoped the deficit in the [illegible] would be made up by the city guilds. [illegible] was wealth many thought was in [illegible] city, or in York. Mr Gladstone concluded. The exhibition was a great step [illegible] accomplishment of the great work, [illegible] hopes might be extended on the [illegible] of peace. Great progress has been [illegible] in English industries, especially [illegible] these exhibitions, which the [illegible] people should be proud to make [illegible]. They promoted the union [illegible] with labour, were a source of [illegible] to the industrious classes, and enabled them to gain higher development [illegible] education. No class was complete [illegible] its higher and material interests [illegible].

London, Nov. 1.—Various towns in the [illegible] of France have been named as the [illegible] place of the Government; [illegible] Lyons will be finally selected.

[illegible] says the Prussian Landwehr [illegible] reserve has been called out. Corresponding exhaustion of German strength is [illegible].

[illegible] correspondent with Garibaldi writes on [illegible] October from St. Jean de Doi:—I [illegible] here last night. I had not seen [illegible] since the evening of Mentana, and [illegible] alteration in him is striking. His [illegible] is bent with rheumatism, and his body [illegible], but his face is as calm and bright as ever. We had a two hours' talk. His position is peculiar. He arrived at Tours simultaneously with Gambetta. The latter was not over pleased with the ovation to Garibaldi. They had an interview there, and Garibaldi wrote to Gambetta. "I see I have made a mistake. I am useless and shall return;" but it would not have suited the people, so they gave him the command of the department of the Jura. He is reported to have 10,000 men; in reality he has not 5,000, and they are Spanish, Italians and French—a mongrel crew. Gen. Cambriel, at Besançon, has 35,000 men. Garibaldi, with his son in-law, Canzes, his chief of staff, Bossi, his secretary, and others, are arriving. Most of his best officers are not yet here. I said "General, if you call they come." He replied in the gravest voice, "That is what I cannot do, it would be too heavy a responsibility, each must come on his own account." Yesterday he had decided to return to Ancanges, but during the night there came news that 6,000 Prussians were concentrated, so Garibaldi left word that he should stay.

London, Nov. 1.—The report that an attempt had been made by the France Tireurs to kill the King of Prussia is dout adicted. Gen. Von Roon is not wounded.

Prince Frederick Charles issued a proclamation to the army on the occupation of Metz, and departure of the troops for other fields of action, in which he says:

Soldiers, I recognize your bravery, obedience and calmness. Your cheerfulness and devotion in the dangers and difficulties of the situation were incalculable. You proceed to new triumphs. For the present, a rowd.

Tours, Oct. 30.—Garibaldi has summarily appealed from Dijon to the Local Officers in charge of the [illegible] Nov. Paris Mort [illegible] has [illegible] the [illegible] companies [illegible] Bazaine [illegible] every [illegible] is [illegible] Such [illegible] Metz [illegible] Bazaine [illegible] Marshal Vaillant [illegible] France.

Reptile discoveries of a most wonderful character have recently taken place in the Low Main coal seam of the Northumberland coal fields. I have recently obtained, from a depth of 100 fathoms, a splendid vertebral column of a coal measure reptile; the length of the specimen in my possession is 56 inches, and it consists of 80 vertebræ. I infer that the entire length of the animal would not be less than 10 or 12 feet. I have also got an entire head of a large coal measure reptile very analogous to the crocodile of the present day. The length of the head is upwards of 15 inches, and its width is 8½ inches; it is nearly perfect, the teeth are well exposed, the palate is entire, and from the prehensile bone to the posterior articular extremity the palate is complete. No such series of vertebræ of a coal measure reptile has ever before been found, and no head so large and perfect is that now in my possession has ever been described.—T. P. Burgas, F.G.S.
