A number of pigs were sunstruck while driven down the Elora road on Friday. They behaved in a very curious manner. If they had got on the spree. A few of the fence-corners put them to rights, however, and they soon afterwards sobered and pursued their way rejoicing.

PLEASANT MORTALITY FROM SUNSTROKE.—Extraordinary, and, we may say, astounding as the list of deaths from sunstroke in the city during the last week, is a subject for grave reflection as well as calling for the greatest caution on the part of those who are at present in this city to keep themselves much to the sun, which is long-continued hard labour. The Father O'Farrell yesterday declared to his congregation, that no less than twenty-two deaths from sunstroke had occurred amongst the Irish in this city during the past week, and at least that number among French Canadians and other nationalities. Another Irishman, the reason we have not learned, but who is reported by Father O'Farrell as having been struck on Saturday evening, and who, when the Rev. Mr O'Farrell alluded to the case, was still alive, has died since.—Free Witness.

A bill is now before the British Parliament for the purpose of abolishing "days of grace" on all bills of exchange. It is not easy to give any intelligible reason for this old usage. We expect that the precedent likely to be established by Parliament will be followed by other Legislatures.

A good story is told of an American merchant who, a few Sundays since, went into a fashionable London church, a few minutes after the service had commenced, and stood in the aisle. The pew opener passed him several times and took no notice of him. They show more respect to a stranger in American churches, so he determined to give them a lesson. Seeing that there was plenty of room in several pews, but that the pew opener passed him and again without offering him a seat, he quietly spread open his coat tails, and squatted down on the neatly matted aisle. The clergyman noticed him, and looked at the pew opener, who at once went to him and offered him a seat. "No, thank you," he whispered, "I am quite comfortable, and shall sit here all the service."

BITTEN BY A SNAKE.—While a lad some twelve years of age, a son of Henderson Jack, living in the Thirteenth Civil District of this county, was at work in the corn field last Friday, he was struck in the foot by a large snake of the species known as the copperhead. An uncle of the lad, who was close at hand, immediately killed the snake, cut open its body, and applied a portion of it to the wound. Though the foot began to swell rapidly, the effect of the application was soon apparent, and the boy was doing well when we heard from him last. This is the mode of treatment which the Indians of this country used to adopt in cases of bite by rattlesnake—to kill the reptile and immediately apply a portion of the flesh to the wound. It is said to never fail to effect a cure.—Athens (Tenn.) Post.

ANTIQUITY OF THE PIPE.—The Paris Siecle says: "Grand news! In making excavations in Scotland some old smoking-pipes have been found. Until now the various camps of Cæsar, which are numerous, had only produced ancient lamps, coins, swords, and urns. This new discovery opens a vast field of hypothesis. Are these instruments Celtic, Danish, Scandinavian, or Ostrogothic? Did Attila smoke? A learned Englishman, Mr Wilson, draws a bold conclusion from this find. According to him, the American herb (tobacco) was only introduced as a substance superior to other narcotics. Hemp was already known to the ancients as a means of procuring sleep. One might ask this gentleman why the Latin language has not one simple word to designate the use of smoking; but perhaps such a question would be indiscreet. Another savan, a German this time, M. Kefferstein, entertains no doubt that the Celts smoked. But for them to have done so they must have been acquainted with tobacco."

EFFECT OF ADVERTISING.—It is amusing at times to observe the stores of the merchants who don't advertise; to see the anxious proprietors looking into the streets and see the people go by, wondering why they don't come in, while the stores of their neighbours who do advertise are thronged with customers. Some people will learn by observation, others will not.—Daily Palladium.
