DONKEY EATING IN PARIS.

In England, as an article of food, is sold in stalls, and by the side of the noble animal [illegible] be met the flesh of the ass and the mule. The following is translated from a [illegible] by M. L. A. Bourguin, entitled "Manuel de Cheval" :—"Some people [illegible] surprised to find the ass and the mule [illegible] along with other animals in the butchers' shops of Paris. They will be [illegible] surprised still when they learn that, according to the unanimous testimony of members of a committee who have tasted [illegible] the flesh of the male is better than that of the horse, and the flesh of the ass is [illegible] than that of the mule. The [illegible] recognised their good quality [illegible] nutritious substances. We see in [illegible] Georgics of Virgil that the Romans [illegible] the wild ass as game; and Pliny [illegible] that Mecenas, the favourite of [illegible], much relished the flesh of the [illegible] ass, and that it was he who introduced it as an article of consumption. [illegible] also, that it was a favourite dish [illegible] Chancellor Duprat, and the enormous [illegible] of the minister of Francois [illegible] contributed to the nourishing qualities [illegible] food. How is it that mere prejudice has been so long able to repel from our [illegible] this description of meat, which, [illegible] palatable, is pleasant to the taste, [illegible] for the body, and well adapted [illegible] the vigorous man? M. Geoffrey [illegible] Hilaire thus explains it:—As we do [illegible] certain Asiatic nations, the [illegible] peoples of the north and centre of [illegible] the Vandals, the Celts, and others [illegible] upon milk, blood, and flesh of [illegible]. This custom, which prevail[illegible] in the eighth century of our era, [illegible] connected with certain religious cere[illegible]. At their rites the sacrifice of the [illegible] was followed by a repast where the [illegible] of the victim was eaten. The persistence of this Pagan custom was a serious obstacle to the propagation of Christianity in [illegible] countries. This we see Pope Gregory [illegible] addressing St. Boniface, the apostle [illegible], to prevent by every possible [illegible] this act of idolatry, and to detest the flesh of the horse filthy and execrable, and, as the practice continued, [illegible] Zacharias I. renewed the absolute [illegible]. It can easily be understood [illegible] the idea of horse-flesh being impure [illegible] rooted in the minds of the [illegible], although the anathemas [illegible] have been long forgotten, like [illegible] assure essentiality of a temporal [illegible]. At the present day this prejudice [illegible] would have almost given way, and [illegible] of this new description of food [illegible] spread more and more." Notwithstanding all this we think it will be a [illegible] before any but particularly [illegible] will eat donkeys—if they [illegible].

CIVILIZATION OF MAN.

There are two opposing theories prevalent concerning the cause of man's progress [illegible]. One is, that man, being endowed with a capacity for invention, has proceeded from barbarism to civilization by exercise of this faculty alone. The [illegible], whilst it does not deny capacity [illegible] progressive improvement, affirms that [illegible] facts in the case which neither of [illegible] circumstances will resolve or explain, therefore maintains that some external [illegible] has been at some time given [illegible] to mankind, originating or aiding [illegible] development, and that barbarism is a [illegible], and not a normal, condition of [illegible]. The latter point was ably [illegible] by Archbishop Whately in his "Essays [illegible] Civilization." Archbishop Whately's [illegible], although attacked by various [illegible], most recently by Sir John [illegible], will remain firm and unshaken [illegible] against Sir John all his facts, and [illegible] them successfully the Archbishop's [illegible], while there are admitted facts [illegible] which Sir John's hypothesis [illegible] explain. The mere multiplication [illegible] facts as those collected by Sir John [illegible] adds nothing to the evidence in [illegible] at issue. "The important queries [illegible] Humboldt, "has not yet been [illegible] whether that savage state, which [illegible] America is found in various gradations [illegible] be looked upon as the dawning [illegible] about to rise, or whether it is [illegible] the fading remains of one sinking [illegible] storms, overthrown by every [illegible] catastrophes. To me the latter [illegible] nearer the truth than the former. [illegible] Muller says:—"As far as we can [illegible] the footsteps of man, even on the [illegible] of history, we see that the Divine [illegible] sound and sober intellect begins from the very first; and the [illegible] humanity emerging slowly from [illegible] animal brutality can never [illegible] again." Niebuhr also expressed the conviction that all savages are [illegible] remnants of more civilized [illegible] had been overpowered by enemies, driven to seek safety in woods [illegible] places till they had forgotten [illegible] of settled life, and gradually [illegible] into the state in which they are [illegible]. The learned researches of Prichard also lead to the same conclusion. We know that, within certain [illegible] savages are capable of some improvement; [illegible] might be expected where reason [illegible] instinct. But we hold that the [illegible] of man having raised himself, by [illegible] and progressive development, [illegible] primitive savage state, and from yet [illegible] of organic life, is not supported [illegible]. The theory of Divine interposition is the true scientific explanation, [illegible] as it alone meets all the facts of [illegible].—Leisure Hour.

[illegible], says the Court Journal, the Empress [illegible] French was presented with a basket [illegible] 1,000 different varieties of the rose. [illegible] fortunate accident, attended with loss [illegible] occurred at Fontainebleau on Sunday [illegible] workmen employed in the ex[illegible] necessary to bring the water of [illegible] Vanne to Paris were piercing [illegible] about 100 feet below the [illegible] surface, at a spot called Boulig[illegible] forest, when a mass of superincumbent earth fell in upon them.—Nine [illegible] were buried, and when they were dug [illegible] seven hours of hard labour by all [illegible] that could be found, four of [illegible] were dead and the remaining five [illegible] injured. The empress, who sent [illegible] the suspense lasted, to know [illegible] was making in the work of [illegible] liberally relieved the families [illegible] unfortunate men.

EFFECT OF ADVERTISING.—It is amusing at times to observe the stores of the merchants who don't advertise; to see the anxious proprietors looking into the streets and see the people go by, wondering why they don't come in, while the stores of their neighbours who do advertise are thronged with customers. Some people will learn by observation, others will not.—Daily Palladium.
