WAY DOWN SOUTH IN DIXIE.

Yesterday afternoon Mr Pomeroy left the City to fill engagements on the stump in the interior, and has played us a nice trick. Finding a returned soldier on the street with an old hand-organ on which he pays a dollars a year license, which goes to the support of the bondholders, he hired him to come to the office of the Democrat, from one to four every afternoon play here. And here he is under our window. We wish, but the editors of the Sun are out. One of them says it's a d——d nuisance. Another says it is a damnable! There he sits and grinds

"Oh, I wish I was in Dixie,
Way down south in Dixie!"

hour after hour. The man won't move, for Pomeroy hired him by the week. The Sun folks don't like it. Passers-by wonder why in thunder he don't change the tune. One man from Goshen, Orange county, stood there an hour to-day, waiting to hear the next tune. But no other one comes from the horrid instrument. And he sits grinding

"Way down South in Dixie,
Oh! I wish I was in Dixie."

Yesterday Pomeroy had a row about the matter. A Radical who office close by, came down, and ordered the soldier to move.

"Can't do that!" replied the cripple.

"Why?"

"'Cause I'm hired to stay here, on these steps, under this window, and play this 'ere tune."

"Well, I'll see," and up stairs came the irritated Radical. He raved and swore, threatened arrest and all sorts of trouble.

"Can't help it," said Pomeroy—"that man is a soldier—he fought—he saved his country—he pays ten dollars a year to grind his machine—I have hired him for the season, and I shall have him play that one tune day after day, to remain the kingmen that—

"Way down South in Dixie

"Not of niggers, scallawags and carpet-baggers they must support. And," he said, "you touch that soldier, I'll mash your head! I rent these premises—that soldier has paid his license—I pay for the music, and I'll have it just as I want it!"

And the man is still grinding away

"Way down South in Dixie.

How long he is to grind at that mill, God and Pomeroy only know. But it's a funny and compelling us to sit here hour after hour and listen to that soldier grinding out his ten dollar license organ,

"Way down South in Dixie."

We tried to coax him to change his tune, but he won't. He says that Pomeroy hired him to grind till his return. If he will have him back, we'll pay the bill and call it quits. N. Y. Democrat.

THE RECENT DISASTERS ON THE ALPINE PASSES.

The disasters which have befallen several of the Alpine roads into Italy are described by a correspondent of the Times, who writes:—

"It would be an error to describe the disasters which have befallen the Cenis as exceptional; indeed, several of the Alpine roads into Italy have been injured more or less from similar causes, and nothing certainly has happened to diminish public confidence in Mr Fell's line. On arriving in Italy I was informed that the Simplon, too, was impassable by carriages. There had been but a slight rain fall on the Simplon mountain during the summer, so that the disasters of which I speak were occasioned by the melting of the snow on the heights. Early in August a sirocco wind blew for some days, melting the glacier of Kaltenwasser, seen far above the little village of Simplon. This village lies 18ft. under the level of a river of the same name, and is defended by strong dykes, but the body of water let loose from the glacier caused it to burst its barriers. Leaving its ordinary channel it rushed wildly into the Rhone which it feeds, and swept everything before it. Communication with Italy by carriage was, therefore, suspended for eight days, or even more. Higher up the Simplon, too, it was stated that a portion of the gallery had been carried away by the same powerful agency, and that workmen were employed in repairing it. Traces of the disaster were perceptible for some distance before reaching Visp. The road in many places was covered with ruins, and the country partially under water. Several great wooden bridges were erected, over which we passed, but it was not before arrived at Visp that the full amount of damages could be realized. Here the cause and the effects were painfully evident. Far above us, glistening in the bright sun, was the glacier of Katlenwasser, looking as innocent of evil as the most hardened sinner, and below us was ruin. Grain, potatoes, trees, everything in fact that the land produce, was swept away, or rather overwhelmed. The road which led to the village was on the level, but had not been there so much by rubbish brought down at the wooden bridge had been built over the torrent, which had altered its course, and was now roaring and foaming through the place. It was not quite completed, and it appeared ricketty enough as we crossed it to the main street. Here the ruin was still more evident. The little place was choked up with carts and carriages, which had been unable to get away, or which had been dragged out into the streets to save them from utter destruction. Four houses had been carried away, and several of what are called grandes, large wooden buildings common in Switzerland, which seem to stand on nothing. Many houses have been filled with mud and rubbish—that is to say, in the lower parts—and creeping round by one of these lanes, I discovered a pair of cart wheels peering above the sand. The passage through the village of a great heavy diligence was one of no little labour, and for a distance beyond it was not very pleasable, for the road had been so utterly washed or covered deep with mountain debris that the wheel sunk in, first on one side, then on the other, threatening us with a very upset and a bath. Where the road was good, a portion had been undermined, and another temporary bridge erected. Huge rocks and pines which had stood for a winter's storm had been wrenched and torn out of their resting-places and lay scattered about in all directions. As we went farther up the mountain some portions of the road had been covered up by what other torrents had brought down, and after passing the fourth refuge, we arrived at the gallery spoken of by my informants at Sion. A splendid waterfall, fed by the Kaltenwasser, dashes over it, but its increased violence had been such as to break a portion of the gallery, destroying the road over the abyss below, and rendering it necessary to throw a temporary wooden bridge across it. Through the gap which has thus been made some of the foaming torrent of course finds its way, and, despite a sharp run upon it, no one of us escaped without a wetting. On the other side of the Simplon, the effects of the fall of the melted snow are less marked; still in several places the road was partially covered with rubbish, on one of which the diligence was compelled to travel a little too near the precipice to be altogether pleasant. A great number of workmen are, however, now employed on the mountain, and the passage, which is indeed perfectly safe, will be in a few days such as to satisfy the weakest nerves. As I have spoken of the Cenis road, it may be as well to say that the disaster which has for a time suspended the passage of carriages over it is nothing more than that which has befallen the Simplon or might have affected any other pass. Nothing has happened to throw any doubt on the principle of Mr Fell's railway—just as the landslip occasioned by rain and melted snow carried away a portion of the Cenis road, so the same agency has destroyed everything but life at Visp, and has broken down one of the galleries not far from the fourth refuge.

"Marry the lass that has the cow," was the language of the wise matron who was urging her son between the choice of two young ladies, one of whom had a cow and the other a looking-glass. The idea that should be inferred by the trite saying is, that she whose economy obtains property by her prudence and industry, will be best able to manage the domestic affairs of a family. As a general thing, such young women possess and unite goodness of disposition, evenness of temper, and a strong attachment to domestic simplicity.

ADDRESS TO THE NERVOUS AND DEBILITATED, whose sufferings have been protracted from hidden causes, and whose cases require prompt treatment to render existence desirable: If you are suffering, or have suffered from involuntary discharges, what effect does it produce upon your general health? Do you feel weak, debilitated, easily tired? Does a little extra exertion produce palpitation of the heart? Does your liver, or urinary organs, or your kidneys, frequently get out of order? Is your urine sometimes thick, milky, or flocky, or is it ropy on settling? Or does a thick scum rise to the top? Or is a sediment at the bottom after it has stood awhile? Do you have spells of short breathing or dyspepsia? Are your bowels constipated? Do you have spells of fainting, or rushes of blood to the head? Is your memory impaired? Is your mind constantly dwelling upon this subject? Do you feel dull, listless, moping, tired of company, of life? Do you wish to be left alone, to get away from everybody? Does any little thing make you start or jump? Is your sleep broken or restless? Is the lustre of your eye as brilliant? The bloom on your cheek as bright? Do you enjoy yourself in society as well? Do you pursue your business with the same energy? Do you feel as much confidence in yourself? Are your spirits dull and flagging, given to fits of melancholy? If so, do not lay it to your liver or dyspepsia. Have you restless nights? Your back weak, your knees weak, and have but little appetite, and you attribute this to dyspepsia or liver-complaint?

Now, reader, self-abuse, venereal diseases badly cured, and sexual excesses, are all capable of producing a weakness of the generative organs. The organs of generation, when in perfect health, make the man. Did you ever think that those bold, defiant, energetic, persevering, successful business-men are always those whose generative organs are in perfect health? You never hear such men complain of being melancholy, of nervousness, of palpitation of the heart. They are never afraid they cannot succeed in business; they don't become sad and discouraged; they are always polite and pleasant in the company of ladies, and look you and them right in the face—none of your downcast looks or any other meanness about them. I do not mean those who keep the organs inflated by running to excess. These will not only ruin their constitutions, but also those they do business with or for.

How many men, from badly-cured diseases, from the effects of self-abuse and excesses, have brought about that state of weakness in those organs that has reduced the general system so much as to induce almost every other disease—idiocy, lunacy, paralysis, spinal affections, suicide, and almost every other form of disease which humanity is heir to, and the real cause of the trouble scarcely ever suspected, and have doctored for all but the right one.

Diseases of these organs require the use of a Diuretic.

HELMBOLD'S FLUID EXTRACT BUCHU

Is the great Diuretic, and is a certain cure for diseases of the Bladder, Kidneys, Gravel, Dropsy, Organic Weakness, Female Complaints, General Debility, and all diseases of the Urinary Organs, whether existing in Male or Female, from whatever cause originating, and no matter of how long standing.

If no treatment is submitted to, Consumption or Insanity may ensue. Our flesh and blood are supported from these sources, and the health and happiness, and that of Posterity, depends upon prompt use of a reliable remedy.

Helmbold's Extract Buchu, established upward of 18 years, prepared by H. T. HELMBOLD, Druggist, 494, New York, and 104, South 10th Street, Philadelphia, Pa. Price—$1,25 per bottle, or six bottles for $6 50, delivered to any address. Sold by all Druggists everywhere.

EFFECT OF ADVERTISING.—It is amusing at times to observe the stores of the merchants who don't advertise; to see the anxious proprietors looking into the streets and see the people go by, wondering why they don't come in, while the stores of their neighbours who do advertise are thronged with customers. Some people will learn by observation, others will not.—Daily Palladium.
