KISSING IN THE DARK.—Learned philosophers have given it as an authority that kissing is irresistible. Of course these sages know how it is themselves. Now is the season for this popular pastime, but it is regretted that the use of patent dyes by young men threaten to veto the amusement. A few mornings ago a young lady returning from an evening party found, on looking in the glass, that her cheeks and lips displayed black marks, and could not account for it until she remembered the dark moustaches of several young fellows she met the evening before. She must have indulged pretty freely.
