WEDNESDAY EVENING, MARCH 19.

Toronto Correspondence.

Toronto, March 17, 1873.—Dear NEWS,—In my last letter I think I closed by speaking of Mr McKim. Immediately behind him sits Mr Hodgins, member for West Elgin. This gentleman was returned at the last general election and is a Clear Grit. His personal appearance is not bad, although it does not give one an idea of his being a man of much note or weight of character. He wears whiskers of a sandy colour, and appears to be a man of about middle age. He is by profession a lawyer,—a chancery lawyer at that,—and was within a few days past appointed a Queen's Counsel by Sir John A. Macdonald. Just a few days before his gazette he had voted in opposition to the Mowat Government on the Bill in relation to the appointment of Queen's Counsel.

On the left of Mr Hodgins, and immediately behind Hon. R. W. Scott, sits Mr Williams, of Hamilton. He is an elderly man, amounts to very little, and, I should suspect, is of strong American proclivities. He is of the Grits, Gritty.

On the left of Mr Williams, and immediately in rear of Treasurer Crooks, sits the Hon. Peter Gow, member for South Wellington, and Provincial Secretary in the Blake Administration. He resides at Guelph and is, I believe, in good circumstances. His face is of a very rubicund hue, and he appears to be a man of middle age.

Next to Mr Gow sits the Hon. Archibald McKellar, Commissioner of Publis Works, and hero of the Proton outrage. Mr McKellar is a tall stout man, dark complexioned, and has his face almost wholly shaven. His hair is still quite dark in colour, and he appears to be a hale, hearty, man. He is a strong man on the stump and can speak Gaelic, I belive. I fancy that he is a shrewd, intriguing, cunning man, and will never elevate the character of any Government or party to which he is allied. He represents Bothwell.

The seat on Mr McKellar's left is occupied by Hon. T. B. Pardee, Provincial Secretary, and member for Lambton. Mr Pardee is a lawyer by profession, and resides at Sarnia. He is a genial, pleasant man, and is very popular, in fact personally the most popular man in the Government. He is a man of nearly, if not quite, middle age, of dark complexion, about middle height, and wears black whiskers, but no moustache.

Crossing again to the Opposition side of the House we find the first seat on the second row, occupied last session by the Hon. John Carling, now occupied by Mr W. R. Meredith, member for the city of London. Mr Meredith is very handsome, very popular, and a worthy successer of Mr Carling. He is a tall man, light complexioned, and wears a full beard and moustache. He is a lawyer by profession, and is a staunch Oppositionist.

At the left of Mr Meredith sits Mr Henry Merrick, M.P.P. for North Leeds and Grenville, who succeeded Mr Smith at the last general election. He was, I believe, until his return to Parliament, engaged in the woolen business or manufactory. He is earnest in his attention to his duties, but does not often speak. He votes steadily with the party of Union and Progress. Mr Merrick resides at Merrickville. He is a gentleman of pleasing appearance, of about middle height, and I should suppose is on the wrong side of thirty-five.

Next to Mr Merrick sits Dr Boulter, of North Hastings. The doctor is a staunch Conservative, and in appearance a pleasant, jolly man. He is, I should suppose, about forty or forty-five years of age, and possesses a good share of mother wit. He does not speak very often, but when he does, it is to the point, and if he chooses he can give a good currying to an opponent.

The two benches immediately to the left of Dr Boulter are occupied by Messrs Rykert and Lauder.

Mr Rykert is the member for Lincoln, and resides at St. Catharines, where he, I believe, practices law. He has had considerable Parliamentary experience, and is, I think, the hardest working man on the Opposition side of the House. He is of short stature, and of keen, wiry appearance. He speaks in rather a quick way, and is a sore thorn in the side of the Ministry, whose actions he criticizes unmercifully.

Mr Lauder, the member for South Grey, is a tall, fine-looking man, who wears side-whiskers and a moustache, and whose physique is quite imposing. He is a good speaker, and deals many hard hits at the Government, but more especially at the Commissioner of Public Works. Mr McKellar, I believe, missionarized in South Grey against Mr Lauder, but that gentleman was returned in spite of him.

Yours, CORRESPONDENT.

P.S.—The Orange Incorporation Bills have passed to a second reading. There was not a very lengthy debate; and, as you will see by the Toronto papers, it was not a very exciting one. It was rather odd that these two bills should have been read a second time on St. Patrick's day.

OYSTER SUPPER IN COLEBROOK.—A magnificent oyster supper was held in Colebrook, on Tuesday evening last. The oysters were served in abundance in Mr Nathaniel Wolfe's store house; the building which is very commodious was completely filled. After partaking of the supper the congregation proceeded to the Orange Hall, where they were most pleasingly entertained by speeches and music. The speeches were delivered by the Rev. Mr Ladu, of Lynn, Rev. Mr Bell, of Newburg, and Mr Geo. Lott, merchant of Petworth; the music both instrumental and vocal took the praise of all present and was delivered by the Colebrooke choir, Mr Long as the leader, and Miss Vannest presiding at the organ. The chair was occupied by Mr George Lake, of Moscow, Miss Catharine Trayner presented the committee a very beautiful large five story cake to dispose of to the best advantage, either by auction or by an election. The committee concluded to dispose
