AN ELECTIVE SENATE.—The proposal of the member for Bothwell to make the Senate of the Dominion elective deserves more than a passing notice. The arguments advanced by Mr Mills do not seem of that cogent character which would necessarily be expected in introducing a motion with such a radical change in view. Nor do we see that his arguments against the present system have any weight. No charge of ill favour or partiality against the Government has as yet been made, and until such time as the Government has abused its power, we think it right to leave well enough alone. This may seem the very acme of Tory principle, but this can hardly be said, for we hold that until there is something to reform, reform for its own sake merely is mischievous, and unnecessary. If a fair and decent case can be made out for the change, by all means let us have it, but as matters now stand the Senate has shown itself worthy of support.

One great argument with the supporters of the change is that the present House of Lords, so to speak, is dry, dull, and uninteresting. Well perhaps it may be so, but does the proposed change hold out any prospect of an alteration for the better. Previous to Confederation, we had an elective Senate, and we have yet to learn that its proceedings were more interesting, its speeches more brilliant, or its bright particular stars any more luminous that at present. The fact is the sphere of duty laid down in our constitution for the Senate is of so limited a scope that the proceedings cannot in the nature of things possess that public interest so readily accorded to the popular branch. The legislation of the present day is almost wholly made up of various schemes for the expenditure of money in one or other of the numberless ways which the ingenuity of trade and commerce has devised, and as no bills providing for a money expenditure can be originated in the Senate, the consequence is the extremely circumscribed area of its actions.

The proposal of Mr Mills to confer the nomination of Senators upon the various local Legislatures is simply absurd. It is only by an extreme stretch of courtesy that such a method of election can be called anything else than a slight variation from the present mode of procedure. And we fail to see that submitting the selection of Senators to a body of so limited a number, and to a locality where mere party politics would control the whole affair, would better it in the least. Seriously considering the matter, the gist of it is that instead of the selection being in the hands of the Dominion Ministry, it would devolve upon the Local Ministers in the various Legislatures. Mr Mills is something of an American, and naturally inclines to the views he has imbibed in his earlier years, and if we could view the success of the Senate at Washington as the summit of political wisdom, we might have a good word to say in favour of transplanting and engrafting this exotic on our own system. But when we find the worst phases of political corruption shown forth in the selection of their Senators, we may well pause before we adopt a system leading to such wholesale corruption and political immorality.

The question has been already tried and proved among ourselves, and the leading politicians on both sides have been compelled to acknowledge that its attempt was a failure. Why then repeat on a larger scale a measure which was abandoned by both parties without one word in its favor? The Senate as at present constituted has worked well. It has preserved its dignity and its self-respect. It has shown itself a good counterpoise to the more populous branch, and while in the discharge of its duties, it has not as yet fallen foul of its more popular compeer, we fully believe that many a chimerical scheme has been nipped in the brain of the concocter, from the firm conviction that though it might make a popular rallying cry in the country, it would not impose upon the more sedate and sober minds which have the revising of the legislation.

If the Senate had at any time shown itself agressive in its tendency, if it had vetoed the popular will in any way, if it had shown itself too subservient to the other House, and not sufficiently manly in asserting its own dignity there might be reason for the present Quixotic crusade. We are glad to see that the scheme does not command the support of the Globe, and we are doing that journal but the simple justice in saying that in the present case it has preserved its dignity well. We have none of the leaders of the Reform party joined in Mr Mills crusade. They too, feel that nothing has as yet occurred to justify the change, and so long as this is the case, the advocacy, of Mr Mill's will fail in securing the popular ear. He must wait a little longer. His name is not yet a tower of strength. He may do well enough as a mere theorizer, but in this supremely practical age, the useful is of far more consequence than the merely experimental.

PERSONAL.—Dr. W. J. Palmer, the respected and popular Principal of the Institution for the Deaf and Dumb at Belleville, has gone on athree wéeks' visit to his friends in North Carolina, his former place of residence.

GARRISON BALL.—There was a social assembly at the Tete du Pont Barracks last evening, attended by many of the elite of the city. The party were present at the theatricals, prior to the ball.

Joseph Donnelly—he of the Star Grocery—keeps a sharp eye to the business. His coffees, teas &c., are eagerly sought for.

TREES.—We hope the citizens will show their public spirit and enterprise by entering into the work of planting trees energetically. The cost is very trifling, and much may be done in this way to beautify the city. The front of the Court House, the Queen's College grounds, and some other of our public institutions would be vastly improved by a row of handsome trees in front of them.

ECCLESIASTICAL CHANGES.—The Belleville Intelligencer states that the Rev. H. Caulfield, of Christ Church, Belleville, has resigned, owing to his parochial duties having proved too much for him, and that the vestry has tendered the office to the Rev. A. H. Baldwin, of Toronto, who was formerly assistant minister at St. Thomas' Church. The Intelligencer adds that should Mr Baldwin decide to accept the proffered pastorate, his return would be gladly welcomed by the entire community, and that Mr Caulfield will be remembered with the kindest feelings by his parishioners of Christ Church, and by many persons of other religious denominations, who have made his acquaintance during his residence in Belleville. The Rev. R. D. Irwin, assistant minister of St. Thomas' Church, has resigned, and the Rev. W. J. Muckleston, of Camden East, nominated in his place. At the annual vestry meetings of both churches the officers of last year were re-elected.

POLICE COURT, THURSDAY—(Before Mr Strange, P.M.)—James Cahill protested that he was not drunk, but the police officers who took him under their protection averred he was "fully three sheets in the wind," and laboring heavily," and consequently the Magistrate was obliged to pass James through the degrees, which cost $2. Mary Brunston, drunk, and Margaret Ooakey, a wandering refugee, were fined $1 or 30 days in gaol each. James Friendship, Edward Horan, John McConnell, and W. Gunn, four boys of an average age of 15 or 16 years, were charged by Mrs Spankey, of Williamsville, the residents of which place are subject to much annoyance from their disorderly conduct. They were severally fined $1 and costs. Charles Beamish, who was accused on Tuesday of stealing money from Michael McGill, an old pensioner and venerable toper, while in a state of glorious intoxication, was yesterday dismissed. There was no evidence to substantiate the charge.

THE EARLY BIRD.—The papers are correcting each other in regard to the "early birds," and the importance that attaches to certain species in the relation which exists between the time of their arrival and the advent of spring. The appearance of the swallow was looked upon as a proverbial sign of sun-shine and pleasant weather, and sent a good many into ecstacies of delight. The bird subject is of precious small consolation on such a day as this.

CHURCH OF SCOTLAND.—A meeting was held in Toronto on Tuesday evening in the Agricultural Hall of ministers and members of the Church of Scotland, who wish to maintain their connection with the present church, and who are opposed to union with the C. P. Church on the terms proposed. Many speeches were made, and finally it was resolved to oppose the union on the proposed terms by every means in their power.

COLLAPSED.—The sailors strike is virtually at an end. The league held out until circumstances forced them to bow in humiliation to the offer of a reduction on the rate of wages fixed at their public meeting. Several vessels have shipped their crews at $1.25 and $1.50, and it is said there will be many glad of employment at still lower figures before their services will be urgently required.

GOING AHEAD.—A requisition, we understand, has been got in circulation, for signiture previous to being presented to the Mayor calling a public meeting in the interests of immigration. The requisition is only a formal document, without which his Worship could not be expected to convene a meeting of the citizens.

SKETCH OF REV. DR. THOMAS.—Rev Eleazar Thomas, murdered by the Modocs, was widely known through the Methodist Episcopal Church. His early ministry was exercised in the Genesee Conference, but he went years ago to California Conference. In 1860 he was a delegate from the California to the General Conference which met in Buffalo. He served three quadrennial terms as editor of the California Christian Advocate, efficiently discharging the responsible duties of his office. In 1868 the General Conference changed the grade of the Book Depository at San Francisco, and made it a branch of the Book Concern, electing Dr. Thomas editor. He served until 1872, when the grade was again changed to that of a depository, and Dr. Thomas reported to the Bishop of the California Conference for a regular appointment, and was placed on the Petaluma district. He was a man of spotless character, of great energy, of unfaltering courage and genuine devotion. Going at the call of the authorities to attempt the restoration of peace, he fell beside Canby, dying in the discharge of duty. He died well, and his family should be remembered by the country he was temporarily serving.

SIGNAL DRUM.—Some of the leading shipping points, communicated with by the Meterological Department, have at the latter's request, erected the flag-staff and such apparatus required for exhibiting the new weather-drum to be used as signals of approaching storms. There is immediate haste necessitated in the matter, and the committee on Wharves and Harbours of this city should lose no time in furnishing the same wants as needed for this port, for use at the resumption of navigation on the lake.

REMINDERS.

Sale of fancy goods by Hutcheson, auctioneer, at his rooms, this evening.

Grand assembly of the Union Quadrille Club at the Victoria Music Hall this evening.

Concert in aid of the organ fund of the Queen Street W. M. Church this evening in the City Hall.

CHALMER'S CHURCH.—The regular monthly meeting of the social union of Church was held on Wednesday evening in the basement. The attendance was very large, and great interest was taken in the proceedings. After opening with devotional exercises, conducted by the Rev. Mr Gray, the choir sang two verses of a psalm. The first item on the programme was a very well written paper on "The pleasures of hope," the production, we believe, of a young lady, which was read by Mr G. W. Maxwell. An anthem, "Music the chief" was next given, after which Mr N McNeil gave a paper on "Our parish and its parishioners," being historial and personal reminiscenses of the town of Paisly in Scotland This was very highly relished by the "Old country folks" especially. After a short intermission the Misses Burton sang a duet—"Music and her sister song,"—very nicely, and this was followed by a paper from Mr D. H. Fletcher, on "Burns—the poet and the man." This was a carefully prepared paper, and seemed to be highly appreciated by the audience, who applauded it frequently during its delivery. After another anthem by the choir the meeting was closed by singing a doxology and the benediction pronounced.

Mr Meeve says "Seven was up the game" was neither sung by his family or "any other man" at the social on Monday evening at the Victoria Music Hall.

STEAMER MAUD.—The owners of this beautiful boat (Messrs Folger, Nickle & Co.,) are giving her a complete overhauling. Her engines, which are constructed on a new principle, combining high and low pressure, were a failure as an experiment, have been removed, and are being replaced by new machinery from Messrs Davidson and Doran's Foundry. Her feather-paddles are being also replaced by the ordinary buckets. She is receiving several alterations, all of which tend to her improvement. What a splendid boat for the Cape Vincent route?

AMATEUR THEATRICALS. — The Garrison Dramatic Association gave last evening their eleventh entertainment, under the patronage of Lieut.-Colonel French and the officers of the Battery, who were present with a large company of ladies and gentlemen of the city, many of whom appeared in ball dress, prior to attending an assembly afterwards in another quarter of the barracks. "Time Tries All" and "Delicate Ground" were reproduced, a favourable notice of the character and prominent features of which has already been published in the NEWS. With one or two exceptions, the different roles were sustained by the same performers, who, one and all, excelled themselves in the vivacious and skillful playing. A farce, "Hit him, he has no friends," was unavoidably omitted, owing to the lateness of the hour at which the preceding pieces terminated. There was an improved change in the auditorum, but for audiences such as attended last night, it is inadequate and unsatisfactory in many respects. Extra taste was displayed last night in the arrangements, which as far as taste was concerned was lacking nothing. The quadrille band enlivened the programme with selected music.

MISCELLANY.—The home circuit—walking about at night with the baby.—The lately arrived Englishmen might well remark, "Wat a blawsted kolony!"—Just think of having another flying visit from old Boreas or his equally unwelcome shadow.—Net profit—a fisherman's.—Man advertises, then realizes.—"Boss" Tweed has taken a trip through Ontario, and is now at Montreal.—An Iowa City hen lately laid an egg with an inscription on it.—The city is "billed" by the agent of Duprez & Benedict's minstrels.—Man respires, aspires, conspires, and then expires.—The New York Star says that the devil's king-pin is rum.—No chain is stronger than its weakest link. No word is stronger than a wink.—"That's my impression," as the printer said, when he kissed the girl.—Whatever the reason is, we are glad to see fewer (we were going to say young men, but we can't) things dressed like young men, hanging around church doors on Sunday mornings and evenings.—How dismal and bleak to-day was?

THE GRAND CONCERT. — Master R. C. Smith will prove a great attractian to-night. He hails from Montreal, and gentlemen who heard him there describe his powers of elocution as far beyond the average, is somethig for a boy of his years. His recitations and the musical excellence of the programme should certainly draw a full house despite every discouragement. Don't fail to go.

A NUISANCE ALL ROUND.—About a dozen more persons were summoned before the Magistrate, in reference to the removal of nuisance. Of course when they find they are compelled to "face the music" they generally manage to attend to the "jobbery" before attending court, or confidently assure his Worship that they will give the subject their earliest attention. But when notified of the illegal condition of their premises they would obviate a vast amount of "nuisance" by way of issuing and serving summonses by the authorities and the police force, had they done as directed.

"HANG ON TO ME, BILLY."—The gossips have added another little incident to their catalogue of amusing stories. It is this. The other day the engineers were working at the wheels of a steamer. By some means the paddles moved, and the men dropped, one alighting on the ice, and escaping the misfortune of his chum, who became immersed to the neck in water. Floating in front of him he espied his companion's cap, and thinking him to have gone below, he grasped a hold of the boat, and blubbering as best he could under the circumstances ejaculated: "Ha-(fru-r-r)-ha-(fru-r-r) hang on to me Billy." He was coolly answered "Don't you fret."

LAY ON, MACDUFF.—Four lively youths, composing a noisy band whose conduct at Williamsville was complained of some few days since, were fined by the magistrate this morning for being disorderly. The punishment was light, but it may have the effect of quieting and convincing them that they cannot do as they please, although out of sight of police officers.

Dr. Ballou, the famous specialist from New York city, is stopping at the St. Lawrence Hotel, Cape Vincent. He cures any case of rheumatism or neuralgia without medicines. He has cured Capt. Howard and Capt. T. Hinckley, and is curing Miss Jones, sister-in-law of the Folger Bros. Those affected with those diseasss should go and see the doctor, as such an opportunity is seldom offered.—Adv.
