Mr McKenzie said he would allow the first step to be taken, pro forma, and move an amendment on concurrences.

Mr Anglin said that in this important question the Government had not secured a clear majority of the whole House.

The main motion then passed on the same division and the Speaker left the chair.

The third resolution, and the Committee rose and reported.

The House adjourned at 2:15.

The Daily News.

SATURDAY EVENING, APRIL 1.

☞ SEE LAST PAGE.

The resolutions admitting British Columbia which passed through committee have been concurred in by the House of Commons after certain amendments by the opposition had been proposed and rejected, leaving a government majority ranging from twenty to twenty-five, while on Mr Cartwright's amendment modifying the pledge to complete the railway in ten years, by stating that the government "should use its best exertions," etc., there were only 7 yeas to 135 nays. The resolutions were finally declared carried; and an address embodying them was ordered to be presented to Her Majesty.

The success of the British Columbia resolutions in the face of the antagonism of the opposition is very gratifying. That which has troubled the opposition the most and led to the expression of their chief fears—the construction of the Interoceanic Railway—is really the most gratifying part of the affair. The pledge to construct the railway is the best possible guarantee of the immediate prosperity of the Dominion that the government and the House of Commons could give; and there is not in the whole course of the legislation of the Dominion Parliament an act more fittingly calculated to advance the unity and the material interests of the country than the vote admitting British Columbia coupled with the pledge to construct a railway across the continent within the next ten years. The benefits likely to spring from such action are incalculable. Those who do not perceive them must be very dull of perception; those who are gloomy of the future and apprehensive of an undue increase of taxation can have very little confidence in the progress of the country or of the value of the western lands when rendered accessible by suitable communication.

The great difficulty with regard to many public men is that they do not yet realize the change which Confederation has effected. They regard our united and expanded country as they have been accustomed to regard their own province in the days of colonial isolation; and as a consequence they fail to take in the wants of a greater country or comprehend its capability to meet those wants.

In reality the Confederation is now a country truly great in point of extent of territory, diversity and richness of resources; and the element of population is alone wanting to make of this country a first-class nation. It is therefore the duty of our public men to encourage the increase of population by attracting to the Dominion of Canada a part of the vast tide of population which is flowing out from the old world and taking refuge in the new. If we can combine a policy of colonization with a policy of political unification we make a nation of the country in the double sense of giving it grand national boundaries and of building up the nation by filling up these boundaries with an enterprising population.

We look upon the Interoceanic Railway as an enterprise in the interests of colonization and the developement of trade, while at the same time it binds with an iron link the Northwestern and Pacific provinces of the Dominion to the nucleus of Canada. It is an enterprise of stupendous magnitude, but the object to be gained is also of stupendous magnitude; while there can be little doubt of the ability of the country to undertake the work of construction with the means at its disposal and the vast wealth of public lands which the railway will render available.

EASTER CATTLE.—Some fine fat Durham cows were shown on the market this morning intended for the Easter market. They were fatted by Mr Matthew Elliott.

THE STREETS.—Men are now engaged in scraping the streets, which have been for days past in a wretched condition, the crossings of the more public thoroughfares being almost impassible. It would be well for the authorities while engaged upon this work to extend their efforts to the thorough repair of the sidewalks, which sadly require attention in almost every part of the city, and none more so than in those most frequented, where in places it is absolutely dangerous to travel during dark nights.

The Bishop of Ontario will preach in St Paul's Church on Sunday evening.

NEW STEAMER.—Mr C. F. Gildersleeve's new steamer, intended to run between Picton and Belleville, is rapidly progressing towards completion. She was built at Glasgow, Scotland, taken apart and sent to Kingston, where the parts are again put together. Her length over all is 120 feet, breadth of hull, nineteen feet six inches, and breath over all thirty-two feet She is provided with iron frames and steel plating, and wooden planking on her bottom. She will have an inclined compound engine under her deck with high pressure cylinder, eighteen by thirty-six inches, and low pressure thirty-six by thirty-six, with small feathering wheels thirteen feet diameter. She will have ample accommodation on her bow deck for freight, and aft for passengers, her arrangements being very roomy. Her promenade deck will run the whole length of the vessel with seats for passengers and shade deck above, which will make her an excellent excursion steamer. She is expected to draw about three feet of water, and will probably be fast and able to make easily thirteen miles an hour. Her owner has decided upon naming her the "Maud."

THE STEAMER AURORA.—Messrs Folger Brothers and J. Swift & Co. intend running the steamer Aurora between Kingston and Gananoque this season.

POLICE COURT, SATURDAY.—Before his Worship the Mayor.—John Doyle, the incorrigible and irrepressible, was once again in the dock for drunkenness. His memory failed him to inform the magistrate how many times he had been in gaol. He was fined five dollars. Patrick Burns, a small boy, whose frightened face was scarcely higher than the front partition of the dock, was charged with pulling the ear of a juvenile of the opposite sex, Mary Jane McCartney by name. The mother of the injured damsel gave her evidence with extreme volubility, and in detailing the particulars of Mrs Burns' conduct, when remonstrated with upon her son's conduct, was minutely particular, and her statement went to show that Mrs Burns was sadly deficient in the refinement necessary to polite society, but had no bearing whatever upon the charge preferred against the juvenile prisoner. Mrs Burns was nervously restless during the time, and persisted in giving Mrs McCartney "a piece of her mind" at intervals during the examination, much to the annoyance of the court. After hearing the case with exemplary patience, the magistrate decided to dismiss it upon the defendant paying the costs. The boy left the dock with a very dirty face, from the united effect of his tears and coat sleeve, and the maternal hand conducted him out of court. A lot of very small children were charged with breaking a churn belonging to one Spencer, one of the Krook fraternity, whose shop is in Princess sreet. The matter was settled out of court by the children's parents paying for the churn.

THE UNIVERSITY BOAT RACE—CAMBRIDGE WINS.—A brief telegram was received this morning containing the announcement that Cambridge has again defeated Oxford in the annual boat race.

LIVE STOCK.—There were a good show of milch cows offered in the market today, but few sales were effected. Forty dollars were asked for animals scarcely up to the average quality.

SPECIAL TELEGRAMS.

(Per Montreal Line.)

FROM MONTREAL.

Montreal, April 1.—The convocation of Faculties of Law and Medicine of McGill College was largely attended. Molson Hall being crowded. Prof. Goldwin Smith was amongst the speakers. The University appears to be rapidly progressing. It is contemplated building a new Medical College on Sherbrookee St., and a new or larger Convocation Hall will soon be required. Prof. Goldwin Smith left last night for Cornell University.

In the Court of Queen's Bench, P. J. A, Crevier, notary of St. Martin, is being tried for having, on the 28th September, 1870, set fire to the barn of Maxime Varnier, of St. Martin.

The Police Committee reccommend the corporation to increase the city police force by ten men.

In the City Council last night a motion for the opening of a new street from Wellington to Common Street with a view of securing a harbour railway connection by way of Wellington bridge was passed by a large majority, at the same time the finance committee expressed their willingness for the establishment also of a railway connection with the wharves by way of Mill Street. The new opening is to be called Breman Street.

GREAT FIRE AT ST. JOHN.

St. John, N.B. April 1.—A heavy fire is now raging, extending from Walker's Wharf on Ward Street, to Water Street. Some twenty or thirty buildings are already burnt. Fortunately there is little wind, and the steam fire engines seem to have got contol.

A letter posted at Niagara Falls, and directed to "Schichagough, Illinoyse," has been forwarded to Chicago. One received at the Cohoes post-office, addressed to "Ozique Falls," was sent to Hoosick Falls.

The story of George Washington and his hatchet is familiar to Canadians as well as Americans. A droll paraphrase of it is now going the rounds of the press in the United States. It is to the effect that General Butler and Wendell Philips were in the garden of the White House waiting to see the President. They were kept there for some time, when Butler, picking up a hatchet, began cutting the trees to beguile the time. Grant soon after appeared, and asked, "Who has been hacking those tress?" Butler answered, "I cannot tell a lie, Mr President—it was Wendell Phillips."

The Louisville Courier Journal asserts that the Ku Klux Klan was originally "a genteel organization," peculiarly of Southern origin, intended to counteract the "Grand Army of the Republic," and the "Loyal League," and for the better protection of the families of Southern men from the depredations of robbers turned loose on society after the war. It says, on the authority of an ex-member, that it was established by the very best men in the country, the leaders of the Confederate armies, and extended from the Potomac to the Rio Grande. It was composed of men who loved peace for it own sake, but the hue and cry raised against it, and especially the fact that every villain assumed its virtues for the purpose of perpetrating his outrages, finally induced a disbandment of the organization.

A WOMAN CUT TO PIECES BY MACHINERY.

On the morning of Friday, the 24th, about half an hour after the hands commenced work at the stone woollen factory, Pakenham, a scene of the most heartrending description occurred. In the room where the shaft of the water-wheel revolves at about two hundred revolutions a minute, the shaft is enclosed by four posts, open at three sides, but boarded on the side most exposed to danger. Matilda Dumais, a factory hand, attempted to pass through between the shaft and posts, carrying in her hand a spool. Having on hoopskirts it may be readily supposed increased the nanger of the dress being caught by the rapidly revolving machinery, in passing through a space of about 18 inches. It came out in evidence at the inquest, that on the previous day she had passed through the same place, and was warned by several of hands of the danger, and that it was contrary to the rules of the establishment to go near the shaft. The unfortunate woman however, heedless of danger, to save a few steps round to where she had to carry her spool, attempted to pass through the frame and pass the shaft, and was in a moment literally dashed to a thousand pieces. The first intimation of the occurrence being a shower of flesh blood and bones, which bespattered the persons of the workmen, covered the floors, the ceiling, everything. Oh, what a shocking, sickening sight it was!

As soon as possible the coroner was notified, and a jury empannelled. After hearing the evidence of some of the workmen, the following verdict was returned; "Accidental death, caused by her own carelessness."

The deceased was a widew, and has left two children, which were taken in charge by her relations. Much sympathy was shown by the mill owners under the trying circumstances.

MURDER WILL OUT.

(From the Chicago Journal.)

The finding of the body of a man named Gumbleton, a stranger, in the lake basin at this city, several weeks ago, and the discovery of the fact of his having had a large amount of money in his possession, which his murderer had robbed him of, will be remembered by our readers; and the facts given in the city department of the Journal, yesterday, of the discovery of the probable murderer and his arrest in Germany, were doubtless read with eager interest. The case is at once one of the most mysterious and clear in the annals of crime.

So completely isolated was Gumbleton that no one missed him. In all the world there was not a soul that dreamed of his, save only the Eugene Aram who committed the deed, if he was really murdered. It has since been affirmed that he belonged to a good family in Ireland, but to this day not a kin has shown the least interest in the case. So far as appears, the affair would have been dropped entirely but for the professional pride and fidelity of Detective Dixon. This fact is not creditable either to our local authorities or to the dead mans' family. This is the first marked feature of the case.

For six weeks, it is altogether probable, the body of Gumbleton floated in the lake. When at last it drifted shoreward and was brought to the dead house, it told no tales. For aught that appeared upon the person, Gumbleton might have met death in either of three ways: By murder, by suicide or accident. Whether drowned, or thrown in the water after death, was also uncertain. The bruises and disfigurements could be accounted for upon any death theory, which is only another way of saying that they could not be accounted for at all.

The one clue to the whole mystery was a letter found in his pocket from a New York banking house. That piece of paper was a key to many things. An ordinary letter would have identified him, but hardly more. This one however, showed at once why and how, in all likelihood, he came to be murdered. It stated that he had on deposit with that house nearly eight thousand dollars. The supposition was, of course, that he had been killed in the hope of securing that money. Had the body been found a few days after the deed, the scheme could have been frustrated at once; but six weeks had afforded ample time for the criminal to effect his purpose and make good his escape.

As all bank business is a matter of record, it was a very easy thing to ascertain what had been done to get hold of the money. It was found that some one had personated the dead man, not only assuming his name, but forging his signature, and so accurately, too, as to deceive the New York bankers. It was found that Gumbleton had left Baltimore a few weeks before in company with a man answering in all description of the person who had palmed himself as Gumbleton. So far all was easy and clear. Without a doubt, Gumbleton No. 2. was no other than Alfred Zeigenmeyer, who left for the West with his victim, and that fact made it mortally certain that the dead man had been murdered, and that deliberately. Each part of the plot filled every other part and made a complete whole, morally. Whether a jury would hold the evidence of murder complete or not, is another thing. We very much doubt whether it could be legally determined whether Zeigenmeyer killed Gumbleton, and then went to work to get hold of his money, or whether his guilt was simply forgery. With the strong leaning of the law to mercy, there might be a reasonable doubt. But many a man has been hung on less circumstantial evidence than that against Alfred Zeigenmeyer.

It is not absolutely certain that the right man has been arrested, or that, if he has been, the witnesses in the case can identify him as the pretended Gumbleton; but there are at least nine chances in ten that there has been no mistake, and that there would be no difficulty in the identification.

Mrs Sarah Lyon died recently in Hickman county, Tenn., at the age of one hundred and ten years. She has been blind for sixty years.

There are said to be millions of pounds of fossil ivory in Alaska. It is of excellent quality, and is worth a dollar a pound in San Francisco.

The National Guard of Paris, whose heroism we were taught to admire during the investment, lost in the various actions of the siege 360 men out of a force of 300,000. Surely after five months of such desperate fighting they have earned a right to upset the government and shoot their Generals.

The Turks are showing a great readiness in taking advantage of the latest improvements in the art of destruction as it is practised in Western Europe. Additions are being made to their iron-clad navy, and the land forces are to be provided with breech-loading cannon and mitrailleurs. An iron-clad corvette built at Trieste for the Sultan has arrived in Constantinople, an instalment of the Krupp cannon and twenty mitrailleurs. A Vienna manufacturer has received an order to supply two hundred of these weapons to the Turkish Government.

The Crown Princess, Victoria of Prussia has generously devoted her entire income of the past and present year to the German soldiers wounded in the late war, and the German women made widows by it.

An infant a few weeks old was recently baptized in Louisville in the place of the funeral services of its mother.

DIED.

In Kingston, April 1st, Mary Ann, wife of Charles Allum, aged 39 years.

Friends and acquaintances are respectfully invited to attend the funeral from her late residence, Clarence Street, tomorrow (Sunday) at 3:00 p.m., to Cataraqui Cemetery.
