SATURDAY MORNING, MARCH 6, 1852.

SIR FRANCIS BOND HEAD AND THE 'TIMES.'

The crotchety Baronet shines forth with unusual vigor and brilliancy in the annexed letter. In supporting the character and conduct of Louis Napoleon, he certainly takes the Bull by the horns, but with a degree of success scarcely credible. The Romans, democrats par excellence as they were, thought at times a Dictator necessary to preserve true liberty—why not the French? And then, why condemn Louis Napoleon, until his great experiment be fairly tested?—

To the Editor of the 'Times.'

SIR,—You have lately published so many anonymous letters on the defenceless state of Great Britain, that I hope you will not deny me, who have not been insensible of our danger, the privilege of submitting to the consideration of your readers a few facts, the object of which is to prevent the calamity of war, for which the country is, all of a sudden, so loudly prescribing.

1. Only two months ago there existed between the French and British people the most friendly relations.

2. Since the second of December the English press had done all in its power to insult and exasperate the French nation. For instance, in the leading article of The Times of yesterday it is stated—

"France has crouched before Napoleon the Second without one of the excuses which palliated her admission to Napoleon the First. The tyranny is not only far greater, but its agents are incomparably meaner. The church has degraded itself by an alliance with those who wield the powers of this ignoble tyranny. The army, instead of the saviour, has become the executioner of France. The middle classes are terrified, the lower orders careless and acquiescent."

3. Now, although in my Faggot I stated, "I am firmly of opinion that, under a mild exterior with gentle manners and a benevolent heart, Louis Napoleon is an honest, bold, high-minded statesman," such is most readily admitted ever since the 2d of December he has been acting the part of a despot; but I do not condemn him on that account, because, from calm and attentive observation, and from repeated conversations with people of the middle and lowest classes in Paris, I confidently believe that it is the desire of the French army, and of the French people, to establish a strong despotic government as the only means to free themselves from the miserable results of that self-government which, since 1848, has been afflicting and desolating all classes of the community. I believe that if self-government were established in England, long before three years' trial of it our men of property, our middle classes, and, above all, our labouring classes, would unanimously prescribe the same remedy; indeed, in the history of mankind, it is recorded that it is in the nature of a people to fly from the evils of anarchy to despotism.

4. Now, instead of insulting and exasperating the French church, the French army, and the French people, by representing them as a gang of slaves, "crouching" under the tyranny of one who, by a strange contradiction of words, is sarcastically termed "Napoleon the Little," surely the dignified course for the British people to pursue is calmly and inoffensively to watch the working of a system that must very quickly speak for itself. If the French people approve of the sayings and doings of the ruler whom by an overwhelming majority they have, under universal suffrage and by vote by ballot, just elected, he will remain in the Palace of the Tuileries. If they disapprove of the Constitution he is cooking for them, they will tost him in a police fourgon to Ham.

5. But I submit that the insults which the English press are daily offering to the French church, army, and people, are not only unnecessary, and, considering our utterly defenceless condition, highly impolitic, but inconsistent with the course they but lately pursued.

In 1848, when the French people, all of a sudden, determined to exchange their Monarchy for a Republic, the English press very properly, and very powerfully, preached non-interference with the concerns of our neighbours, and accordingly the French nation, without the smallest insult, was left to flourish or decay under the Government of its choice. As soon, however, as the French people resolved, all of a sudden, to abandon a republican form of government—in short, to fly from anarchy to despotism, the English press has done, and is doing, all in its power to provoke the President, the army, and the people of France to war with Great Britain!

It is with regret that I intrude upon your readers the above facts and observations, but, as I have received from Paris a letter from a stranger, who informs me he has lived there some 15 or 20 years with his family, and who states, "The English press is awakening real hatred among the Parisians," I feel confident that, as it is easier to prevent war than to end it, you will, with the impartial justice which distinguishes your journal, give insertion to this homely warning,—

"Those who in quarrels interpose
"Will often wipe a bloody nose."

I am, Sir, your constant reader,
And obedient servant,

Osnabruck, Jan. 24. F. B. HEAD.

CANADA, PAST, PRESENT, AND FUTURE.

PART VIII. Toronto: T. MACLEAR. Kingston: G. W. ANDREWS, Agent.

In this part we have an account of the Counties of Leeds and Grenville, lately the Johnstown District. Leeds comprises the townships of Bastard, South Burgess, North Crosby, South Crosby, Elizabethtown, Elmsley, Escott, Kitley, Leeds, Lansdowne, Yonge and the Town of Brockville. Grenville contains Augusta, Edwardsburgh, South Gower, Oxford, Wolford, and the Town of Prescott. These places are all specially alluded to, and the size, importance, and peculiarities of each brought out. Carleton, lately the Dalhousie District, is also discoursed upon at some length. Other two parts will complete this work, and if after that, there remains an ignorance of the extent and resources of Canada, it will not be because the means of information are not placed within reach. There is an idea afloat that lecturers might with advantage be employed to lecture throughout Britain on the advantages which this country offers to the emigrant; should such a step be taken, it would not be inappropriate to furnish the lecturers with a copy of "Smith's Canada" to be left in every town that possessed a Library, as, without such a guarantee, public lecturers, are invariably looked upon as the agents of an interested party, warmed into eloquence by the substantialities of their position. It would besides, be an excellent text-book, to which all parties might have the means of reference.—[Globe.

THE WEATHER.—The sleighing is again most excellent, never better at any period of this sleighing year. The snow on the ground is very great and bids fair to remain for many days to come. Uninterrupted Sleighing has now been enjoyed since the 14th of November, and should it last all this month, it will comprise a period of four months and a half! The weather continues extremely cold, and snow storms are very numerous—that of Monday night last, par example.

☞ FESTIVAL OF ST. PATRICK.—We take an early opportunity of stating that there will be a St. Patrick's Dinner on the 17th of March, at the British American—none of your "Cheap and Nasty" affairs, but a Dinner of the good old sort—fit for a gentleman to sit down to, and fit to invite an editor to. May the latter luck befall the Editor of the 'British Whig'!

☞ We state for the information of our readers, that the question of throwing open the St. Lawrence to foreign vessels has been referred to the proper quarter. Probably in about three weeks hence, we shall be able to advise what determination has been come to in the matter.

HARPER'S MAGAZINE. March. HARPER & BROTHERS; New York. J. DUFF and E. W. PALMER, Kingston—$3 a year.

Harper's for March opens with one of Jacob Abbott's very pretty Franconia stories, several of which we have already noticed as they respectively appeared. This one, entitled Rodolphus, is written in the same pleasing and attractive manner which characterizes all the efforts of Mr. Abbott's pen. It is accompanied by seven very neat illustrations.—The next paper is "Recollections of St. Petersburg"—eight Illustrations. This paper is amusing, although the cuts are a little too fine for the characters represented. One custom alluded to, and which is universally adopted, is, that of causing people who get drunk, and require the attention of the police, to sweep the streets on the following day. It would be well perhaps that this sort of punishment were more that of fining delinquents and sending them to jail. Among other interesting pieces are—A Love Affair at Cranford; Anecdotes of Monkeys; The Mountain Torrent; A Masked Ball at Vienna; The Ornithologist; A Child's Toy; Rising Generationism; A Taste of Austrian Jails; Who knew best; My First Place; The Point of Honour;—Christmas in Germany; The Miracle of Life, &c.

INTERNATIONAL MAGAZINE. March. New York: STRINGER & TOWNSEND; J. DUFF, & E. W. PALMER, Kingston $3 a year.

The International opens with a brief sketch of the Aztec children which were exhibited here in the City Hall a few months ago—with a portrait. The second paper is a reproduction of "A Day at Chatsworth," by Mrs. Hall, so beautifully illustrated in the Art Journal, for January. The cuts in the International look pretty well, but very tame when compared with those of the Art Journal. Among other very ably written sketches are Men and Women of the Eighteenth Century; A Model Traveller: Friedrich Gerstacker; Edward Everett and Daniel Webster; Elizabeth Barett Browning and Miss Mitford; The Happiness of oysters; A Word about the Army Private; To Sundry Critics; by R. H. Stoddard; The Red Feather: an Indian Story, by I. McLellan, Threnodia: by Mrs. R. B. Kimball; Hungarian Popular Songs; Feathertop; A Chapter on Gambling; An Election Row in N. York: The Jewish Heroine; French Missionaries in Tartary and Thibet; John Robinson, the Pastor of the Pilgrims; A Chapter on Cats; New Discoveries in Ghosts; Authors and Books, &c.

THE BITERS BIT—FORGERY AND SANCTITY.

A person named Matthews, who has for some time conducted the affairs of a pious shaving shop in this City, where sinners and "socialists," et hoc omne, &c., in want of short loans, could be accommodated at from 50 to 75 per cent. has just decamped, carrying off, as is supposed, from £12,000 to £15,000. He was engaged in mercantile business under the name of "Matthews & Co.," and has "let in" a number of our merchants as well as money lenders. We are not sure that it is known who is embraced by the "Co." on the sign-board, but it is said that a certain black-coated philanthropist of this City has been his "Co." in the shaving operations. He supplied Matthews with the "treasure" not to be "laid up in Heaven," but in a more profitable investment down here in notes and mortgages at, say, 75 per cent discount! Others following the pious example carried their spare case to the same market. Everything went on famously for awhile. The greedy usurers were in haste to get rich. They saw their hundreds under the adroit management of the exemplary Matthews, who never missed going to church, increasing to one hundred and fifty and one hundred and seventy-five at the end of the year.—They rubbed their hands with glee. The "good endorsed notes" bearing names of persons of undoubted solvency were carefully stowed away until they matured. The Financier then took them and received—not the money, that would be small business,—but other notes, well endorsed, and increased by enormous "shaves" for three months more grace. Well, the thing went on beautifully until a crisis approached in the money market. The usurers began to want a little of their treasure for other purposes, and the Financier believing he would not get a better hand, drew in his nets and struck on or parts unknown. The stockholders in the concern on hearing of his flight carefully examined their securities. The notes were there, and the names those of "good men and true." They breathed freely. But what a blank did their countenances exhibit on presenting some of the notes to the supposed makers for payment, to hear them say "Depart from me,"—"I never knew you!" The name were forgeries—all forgeries!! Matthews had lent the money to himself and forged the names of the pretended borrowers!

Two or three reflections arise on this case. First, that professions of sanctity are now-a-days frequently made to disarm suspicion and enable swindlers, both lay and clerical, to pounce upon their victims with more ease and greater certainty of success. Religion is not only the cloak which tyrants put on when about to strike down the liberties of their country, but it is conveniently assumed by designing men in all ranks of life, who are too indolent and too proud to earn a living by honest industry. But let us not be understood to question the existence of the true metal. If their were no genuine coin there would be no counterfeits. It is a favorite trick of the counterfeiters to represent those who expose them, as enemies of all religion! We see this resorted to daily. The slightest examination, however, of the character and previous lives of those who raise the cry of "levellers," "socialists," "enemies of religion," &c., is sufficient to show, that they, at all events, are not the friends of religion. Their denunciations may generally be taken as evidence, that we are on the right track, and for our part, we would much rather have their opposition than their praise.

Secondly, the existence of "not-shavers," in every part of the country, and the employment of a large amount of capital—much larger than is generally supposed—in this illegitimate kind of banking, which (being attended with great risks to the capitalist, as the present case shows,) compels the exaction of enormous, and to the borrower, ruinous "shaves" should induce our legislators to sweep the Usury Laws from the Statute Book at once. They are no protection, but a heavy course to the borrower, and produce a demoralizing effect upon the community. Criminal evasion of the law, merciless exactions from the unfortunate, and gigantic frauds, like the above, are the order of the day, and may all be traced directly to those absured and injurious laws.

Mr. Sherwood is not in the House to bring up his annual motion for the repeal of the Usury Laws, (and it is about the only cause we know to regret his absence,) yet we trust some influential member will take the question up and make a vigorous effort to obtain a modification, if not a total repeal of these laws. Every day that they continue in force capital is kept out of the country.—[North American.

IRISH EXILES.—The appeal made to our fellow citizens, on behalf of these unfortunate persons has been cheerfully responded to by the most respectable members of our society. We find the names of the Hon. Messrs. Moffatt, Lafontaine, Badgley, DeBleury, the Worship the Mayor, of O. Leblanc, Esq., M.P.P., and others, already appended to the petition for mercy, which is now lying at our office, and at those of the other journals of the city, besides other places of public resort. We hope the sheets will be speedily filled up.—[Montreal Herald.

CAPTURE OF A FORGER.—On Monday last a check was presented to the Gore Bank, for £95, and the money obtained, purporting to be signed by Geo. S. Tiffany. In consequence of a person named McKenzie having been seen with a large sum of money, and it being previously known that he had no funds whatever, suspicion was aroused, and enquiry on Tuesday led to the discovery of the fraud about ten days, before he committed the foul crime of ingratitude as well as forgery. Pursuit in different directions was made, and yesterday afternoon a Telegraphic despatch from Mr. Geo. Barnes, who left the night previous, announced the capture of Mr. McKenzie, at Niagara Falls. It is said that he is connected in the old country, and that he brought a large sum of money with him to Canada last Fall, but dissipation gave it wings.—There is little doubt but that he will be supported at the public expense for the next seven years.—[Hamilton Gazette.
